AVIATOR

$12.00 per 100 $100.00 per 1000

There is at present no thoroughly satisfactory scarlet carnation. We believe we have such a variety in Aviator and we have decided to disseminate it, beginning delivery January 1, 1916.

THIS IS THE FIRST TIME A NEW CARNATION HAS BEEN SENT OUT BY US SINCE WE INTRODUCED ENCHANTRESS, AND YOU MAY BE SURE WE ARE CONFIDENT IT'S GOOD OR WE WOULD NOT PUT OUR NAME AND REPUTATION BACK OF IT.

DESCRIPTION—Parents, red sport of Maceo and red seedling. Color, intense scarlet, very bright. Stem, thin, wiry and stiff. Flowers, fine, full and nicely fringed. Habit, clean; upright growth; every break makes a rapid advance, producing a profusion of fine flowers in a very short time. The most prolific carnation ever offered to the trade, barring none. No disease, no grass, easy to propagate. There are larger reds offered, but Aviator will outbloom them 3 to 1. We have plants of Aviator on which we can count 24 buds for the first crop and the houses easily average 15 buds per plant.

WE HAVE PLANTED 40,000 AVIATOR

One house is to be devoted exclusively to the production of cuttings. The other houses are to produce blooms. INSPECTION INVITED.

At the Illinois State Fair, Springfield, September 21 to 23, on 11 entries we took 8 first prizes, 2 second prizes, 1 third prize. If you want first-class cut carnation blooms, order of us.

ing a full-sized blanket from H. E. Wilson, which was made of asters, Easter lilies and orchids. A large purple cross was worked in the center and formed a striking contrast.

J. C. Brown, of the Hotel Eggleston, reports good business for the week. Thousands of asters were disposed of September 25 and 26.

Charles W. Curtis has put in two busy weeks. Several thousand baskets of peaches were sold, as well as a good supply of flowers. His father, whose serious accident was recorded recently, is getting along finely and is walking about with crutches.

More than 1,000 automobilists visited the aster farms of James Vick's Sons, at Ogden, N. Y., September 19. The seventy-five acres of asters in full bloom gave the public a delightful scene. The fields resembled a huge carpet of many colors and shades. The ideal weather promises an exceptional crop of seed this year.

Saturday specials of roses were run by the Rochester Floral Co. and H. P. Neun. H. J. H.

ILLINOIS STATE FAIR.

Flower Show a Big Success.

The Illinois state fair flower show was an excellent success this year, rather better than usual, in spite of the fact that the competition in the later days was not so strong as earlier in the week. The fair runs so many days that the cut flower classes are repeated, some of them being up three times and calling for exactly the same exhibit each time. The principal awards were published in last week's issue of The Review. The later ones follow:

Twenty-five American Beauty—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Capitol Greenhouses, second; A. T. Hey Floral Co., third.

Twenty-five Richmond—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Capitol Greenhouses, second; A. T. Hey Floral Co., third.

Twenty-five Killarney—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Capitol Greenhouses, second; A. C. Brown, third.

Floral arrangement, set piece—Hembreiker & Cole, first; Geo. A. Kuhl, second; A. C. Brown, third.

Among those in attendance at the fair were Andrew Benson, Hinsdale; John Poehlmann, Jr., and A. F. Longren, Chicago; P. Fisher, Joliet; Oliver Heinl, Jacksonville; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hey, Maywood; Geo. A. Kuhl, Pekin; Walter J. Young, St. Louis; Edward and Wilbur Gullett, Lincoln; Otto Hembreiker, Lincoln.

Galesburg, Ill.—I. L. Pillsbury has added an automobile truck to his delivery service. Mr. Pillsbury's flower shop has been remodeled.

Flint, Mich.—Doubling the capacity is the word from the Hasselbring Floral Co. in its building operations. It is interesting to know that when a flattering offer was made for the land occupied by this company it was refused because of the good location and the length of time established.

PANSY SEEDLINGS

Our mixture is best giant flowers, all colors, containing many varieties which produce light, showy flowers (pastel shade); also strong seedlings of Coreopsis Grandiflora, Aquilegia (Columbines), English Daisy (Bellis), Hardy Pinks, Forget-me-nots, Sweet Williams, Wallflowers, Canterbury Bells and Foxgloves.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

There was a great change in temperature last week, the mercury dropping from the heights of 95 degrees to the depths of 40 degrees or thereabouts. Despite this great change in weather, business remains about the same. The cool nights possibly serve to bring out dahlias in larger quantities, if such a thing is possible, for at present the dahlias are in full crop. The wholesale houses do not handle so many dahlias as would be expected, but in the markets they are to be found in unlimited quantities. The street peddlers who handle the surplus roses and carnations are now peddling dahlias exclusively. In the wholesale cut flower market there is little variety. Asters have about disappeared. Roses are far below the standard of quality. The carnations have good flowers, but short stems. A few white chrysanthemums could be had last week and, as no large quantity was coming in, they were sold at prices consistent with their quality.

Various Notes.

Some of the growers in the vicinity of Towson reported a light frost September 22. There was no serious damage done, but a number of dahlias were bitten, especially the tops of plants.

The Leo Niessen Co. is handling some good-sized disbudded dahlias.

Jesse P. King, of Mount Airy, was a visitor to town last week.

L. H. A. Klein is cutting his first Golden Glow and Smith's Advance chrysanthemums.

Stevenson Bros. are marketing a good crop of Killarney Brilliant and Russell roses.

James Hamilton is shipping in a large quantity of Mrs. George Elger roses to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

J. J. Perry has been making frequent visits to Washington, to visit his mother, who was recently stricken with paralysis. She is in a serious condition, being 82 years of age.

W. F. E.

Fremont, Neb.—A large force of men has been at work making repairs at the greenhouses of C. H. Green. The damage caused by a recent hail storm made it necessary to replace the glass on all the buildings.

Williamsport, Pa.—The greenhouses of the Williamsport Floral Co., near High street, are being torn down, and new ones built on the property to the south. Where the greenhouses formerly stood three double brick residences will be built this summer.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

Horticultural Society Show.

The eighty-third annual flower show of the New Haven County Horticultural Society, held September 16 and 17, brought out the usual large number of exhibitors. There was one thing particularly commented on by the visitors, the artistic staging of the entries. It was apparent that exhibitors had given time and thought to the arrangement of their exhibits, for there was little of that sameness of display which characterizes so many flower shows.

The exhibits, entered by both professionals and amateurs, consisted of dahlias of numerous varieties, asters, gladioli, roses, cosmos, palms and ferns.

The judges of the show were Maurice Fuld, vice-president of the Knight & Struck Co., of New York city; L. W. Tingeley, of New London, and A. L. Church, of Ansonia.

Among the trade winners were W. Jost, dahlia grower, of East Haven; P. W. Popp, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., John Slocombe, of New Haven, and John Lewis Childs, Inc., of Flowerfield, N. Y.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., showed five varieties of roses and six varieties of phloxes. John Lewis Childs, Inc., showed eighty large vases of gladioli, each vase containing a different variety.

The largest display of the show was that of John Slocombe, of 555 Townsend avenue, New Haven. In addition to winning many first awards, Mr. Slocombe received a certificate of merit for a new dahlia, not introduced prior to 1913, and an award of recognition for a new seedling dahlia.

ROCHESTER, N. H.

At the Rochester fair, September 21 to 24, the floral court was as attractive as ever, thanks to the good work done by Frank I. Shorey, superintendent of this department. Dahlias were shown in great numbers by J. K. Alexander and W. P. Lothrop, East Bridgewater, Mass.; Mrs. S. H. Walker and others. Gladioli were splendidly shown by H. E. Meader, Dover, N. H., who also captured many prizes for designs, carnations, roses, etc., and by J. K. Alexander. W. H. Elliott, from Madbury, N. H., had an excellent display of roses in large variety. The sweet peas of Mrs. Ellen Trask Roberts, Alton, N. H., were remarkable for the last half of September. W. N. Craig, Brookline, Mass., officiated as judge.

The Market.

Real summer weather visited us two weeks ago. It was the hottest week of the summer, the temperature rising to 92 degrees September 16. Heavy thundershowers flooded all the lowlands, severely damaging the stock of the growers. The florists' business has been good.

Exhibitors at the State Fair.

The New York state fair brought out the flower buyers in full force. Gladioli and asters were the leaders in cut flowers. All the flower stores had window displays of gladioli and ferns.

Werner Bultmann had a fine exhibit at the New York state fair, consisting of stove and greenhouse plants. He also had a table decoration of red roses and maidenhair ferns, for which he won first prize.

Chester A. Harris showed many floral designs and wedding bouquets. He won first prize for this entry.

Henry Youell had one of the finest exhibits of gladioli ever shown at the fair. He was awarded first prize for them.

The F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown, N. Y., won first prize for an exhibit of ferns.

The Wm. F. Kasting Co., of Buffalo, had exhibits of cut roses, for which it received many prizes.

The Syracuse Florists' Club had two exhibits at the fair, the wholesalers receiving first prize and the retailers second prize.

Various Notes.

Out-of-town visitors were F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, N. Y.; Wm. F. Kasting, of Buffalo; W. Workman, of Oswego, N. Y.; C. Hike, of Cortland, N. Y., and F. Baker, of Utica.

Charles Bowne, the Rich street florist, suffered a heavy loss from the flood of September 14. He lost everything outdoors and in the greenhouses. The water stood above the tops of his benches. A fine lot of asters coming into flower were washed away.

The Baker Floral Co. is cutting carnations from the new stock. A house of Boston ferns is being grown for the fall season. H. F. B.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—The Benjamin Street Floral & Nursery Co. is rebuilding this fall and putting a new front on the retail store. Mr. Allersma, the proprietor, reports that business during the summer was a little better than his expectations.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

WHY THE LACK OF HEAT?

I have one greenhouse, 20x50. One end is attached to a shed. The side walls are six feet high to the gutters and the front is glass. The height to the ridge is thirteen feet. I have a 1,600-foot, hot water, No. 2 Kewanee boiler. Two 2-inch mains rise directly from the boiler, slope to the far end of the greenhouse and empty into six 2-inch coils on each side of the house. These return the water by natural gravity to the boiler.

The circulation seems to be good, as in thirty minutes I can have the water boiling in the returns, but I have not succeeded in carrying a temperature of more than 40 degrees in zero weather. Would a circulator cause sufficient improvement so that I could carry 50 degrees, or should I put in more pipes? I grew vegetables last winter, but intend to grow more flowers this year and should like to maintain 50 to 60 degrees of heat. I am planning to put in two benches; would you advise putting pipes under them?

F. E. P.—Ind.

As I understand the statement, the house has no glass in the side walls and can only be heated to 40 degrees, although there are two 2-inch flows and twelve 2-inch returns and the water in the returns is boiling.

With the amount of radiation mentioned, there should be no difficulty in maintaining a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather if the water in the returns is at 160 degrees. The boiler is two or three times as large as is needed, and the boiling of the water may result in retarding the circulation. This, of course, may be corrected by attaching a mercury generator. There is ample radiation, but, unless the generator is used, it will be advisable to use one of the returns in each coil as a flow pipe. Each of the flow pipes should be connected with the expansion tank. A part of the pipes, at least, should be under the benches.

TO HEAT HOUSE AND LEAN-TO.

We have just completed a greenhouse 20x60, with walls four feet six inches high of wood. In the south end the glass runs to within three feet of the ground. The gable is eleven feet high. We wish to grow lettuce and carnations. In this section the temperature seldom goes to zero, but once in a great while it may run as low as 10 degrees below for a day or two at a time. We have a hot water boiler rated at 5,000 feet of radiation. What piping will we need to heat this house? The north end of the house is attached to the service and boiler room.

On the east side we are constructing a lean-to made of hotbed sash, which we wish to use for propagating. What heating will be required for this? It will be twenty-one inches in width on the low side. C. F. B.—Wash.

To heat a house 20x60 feet, for growing lettuce and carnations, in zero weather will require only 400 square feet of radiation, and if, as stated, the boiler is rated for 5,000 square feet of radiation, it is many times larger than is required for this house, and would not be nearly so economical as a boiler designed for 500 to 600 square feet of radiating surface.

THE COAL MARKET.

If the correct impression is conveyed by the latest reports, Opportunity is now knocking at the door of the florist who has any empty coal bins—knocking loudly and peremptorily, and muttering to himself, "This is my last call for the season." That is to say, Opportunity appears to be knocking while this is being written, but, being a hasty and impatient old fellow, he may be off in a huff before these words reach the reader. He says that there is a mysterious break or tumble in the price of smokeless coal, though the prices of other classes of coal are fairly firm and in some cases are tending upward.

The Black Diamond describes the situation thus: "The gossip in the Chicago trade for this week has concerned itself mainly with the status of smokeless coal prices. It became common knowledge early in the week that quite a lot of mine-run was being sold for $1.25 and that some lump and egg was being sold for $1.75, while quite a lot of it was going at $2.00. Those who are interested in this market are trying to find the cause. * * * Whatever may be the cause, the fact remains that smokeless prices are off in Chicago for the time being." The same authority says again: "Smokeless coal has been far from satisfactory. Whether it is the result of a low price made on a big tonnage in the east, or whether it is the result of a local situation in Chicago in August, it is now a fact that the market is soft."

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The supply shortened considerably last week, and, should we have a killing frost this week, the chances are that the receipts of greenhouse stock would hardly be sufficient for the needs. At the time of writing, however, the cut is more than enough to take care of requirements. Roses are good and are in heavy supply. The cut of carnations is large, but many of the blooms come from the stock in the field. Lilies were scarce toward the end of last week, but by the end of this week will undoubtedly be plentiful again. Dahlias and cosmos are in good supply and are excellent. Asters and gladioli are nearly done for. Other offerings include rubrums, valley and orchids. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell was the first in the market with new boxwood this fall.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been finding a good market for its excellent late gladioli.

E. G. Gillett and Clarence Ohmer plan to motor to Culver, Ind., this week.

W. Frank & Sons, Portland, Ind., have been shipping heavy cuts of roses to L. H. Kyrk.

R. E. Blackshaw, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, was among the recent visitors. C. H. H.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

Owing to the cool weather, business last week was more encouraging than that of the week previous. Gladioli and asters are still to be seen, but they are deteriorating in quality. A good cut of Russell, Key and Ophelia roses is being marketed. Mums are more plentiful, but the supply does not exceed the demand. More carnations of better quality and longer stems are to be had. Consignments of dahlias are arriving and find a good market. The stock of miscellaneous flowers consists chiefly of larkspurs, cornflowers, rubrums, dahlias and calendulas.

All our sash are made of No. 1 Gulf Cypress, free from sap and knots.
The bars are beveled at bottom to admit extra light.
We tenon both ends of bars and mortise into top and bottom pieces of sash, which are also mortised into stiles without the use of wedges of any kind.
The cross-bar of wood is grooved into the bars and mortised into the stiles.
The cross-bar of iron is 3/16x¾, also grooved into the bars and stiles and screwed on same.
All sash are extra jointed before leaving the factory.
No planing of edges is necessary to make them fit perfectly when laid side by side.
We whitelead all joints before putting the sash together, making it last much longer.
We use special dowel pins, which are made so that they cannot come out.
All pins are well sunk to prevent rusting.

We carry more Hot Bed Sash in stock than any other concern, and make all odd sizes to order, painted any color, glazed with any kind of glass.

By having our lumber come direct to us by schooner, we can guarantee our customers that it is positively gulf stock.

When you begin to think of new sash, and now is the time, write us for our prices. We can save money for you.

And when you think of a greenhouse, no place in the U. S. is too far for us to go and submit specifications and prices.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade was better last week. The rains continue about every third day. There has been considerable funeral work.

Some first-class roses are coming in, although Beauties are not much improved. Dahlias are still plentiful. Gladioli and asters are scarce. Mums are more plentiful, but the sale is limited. Carnations are becoming better as the season advances and some first-class stock is available.

Various Notes.

Homer Wiegand is away on a two weeks' hunting and fishing trip in northern Wisconsin.

John J. Elsner has bought about fifty acres of ground near his place and expects to plant half of it in flowers next year.

Alfred W. Brandt has sold his flower shop and expects to embark in the printing business.

E. A. Nelson and Mrs. Nelson are on a fishing trip at one of the northern lakes.

William Smith, with the Wiegand's Sons Co., went to Terre Haute last week with the K. of P. drill team. He won second prize as the best drilled man on the team.

Clarence Thomas has been showing some tastefully decorated windows lately.

The Bertermann Bros. Co. was busy with store decorations last week.

August Grande has been cutting some fine carnations.

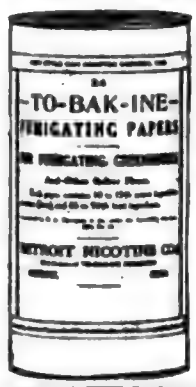
George Wiegand is quite busy. He is getting ready to build a new residence on North Illinois street, near Thirtieth street. H. L. W.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

The cooler weather has been helpful. Trade seems to be better and certainly the flowers will be better, but the effect of the recent hot spell can be noticed on all kinds of stock. Gladioli have almost dropped out of sight. The asters are extremely small and have no special value; it will almost be a blessing when they disappear entirely. Chrysanthemums are now among the regular stock; Smith's Advance is the best. Cattleyas and oncidiums are more plentiful and are of fine quality.

The retail stores seem to be doing a fair amount of business, but there are no large orders.



We had the first frost in the morning of September 27, in the low-lying places, but it did no damage. Clarke.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business in general remains quiet. There is not much of anything doing and funeral work was again the mainstay of the business last week. The weather has been warm and the rain has not been as frequent as heretofore. It does not seem probable that there will be any material increase until after the first killing frost, when it is to be expected there will be a sharp influx of life into the market.

Roses are sufficiently plentiful to handle all orders, but there is no surplus that has to be moved at cheap prices. The stock is in fine condition and is well worth what it is bringing. The demand remains strong and this stock is moving readily. Carnations are coming in more heavily every day. The stock is in fine shape and is cleaning up easily. Colored stock is more easily obtainable than white, which is still quite scarce. Prices are fair and there is nothing held over from day to day. There is still a good quantity of asters in the market, but since carnations are to be had they are not selling well. The quality has deteriorated to a great extent and this fact also helps to keep this stock from moving readily. Gladioli have not been much of a money-maker this year, as the stock was disposed of for next to nothing most of the time. They are still with us, but the quality is steadily becoming poorer and the quantity is much smaller than it has been. Valley has been somewhat scarce and last week the entire crop was sold in a hurry each day. The quality is fine and the trade is taking everything in sight. Lilies and rubrums are in good supply, but are moving slowly.

Various Notes.

William Currie, of Currie Bros. Co., 384 East Water street, has been ill for several days with ptomaine poisoning. Both Mr. and Mrs. Currie were ill for a time and are still weak, although Mr. Currie is again at the store.

Saturday, September 18, was celebrated in fine style by the flower buying public of Jewish extraction, as it was the Jewish New Year. Florists catering to this trade were exceptionally busy, and N. W. Perstein reported good business for that occasion. A large variety of stock was disposed of at this firm's new store, opened less than a year ago. They report that they have been kept quite busy during the last few days by the opening displays of millinery shops in their locality. This firm's delivery car, a new acquisition, seems to be somewhat unruly and is not as yet thoroughly domesticated. Recently it demolished a fence and then used its best efforts on a telegraph pole, with results that were not entirely to its advantage. It is able to be about, however, as cars of its make seem to have tremendous vitality.

Among the visitors last week were R. O. Haentze, of Fond du Lac, Wis., and Edwin J. Fancourt, of S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia. H. J. S.

Kansas City, Mo.—This city has a new retail flower shop, in the new Hotel Muehlbach. The proprietor is Patrick Larkin, who says that the first month's receipts proved to be more than just encouraging.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Business improved substantially last week. The weather has changed from extreme heat to more seasonable conditions. Autumn foliage and early chrysanthemums formed attractive displays in the downtown shops. Weddings are more numerous than they were a few weeks ago and they call for a quantity of good flowers.

Roses, although scarce on account of the heavy demand and the passing of the better grades of outdoor flowers, are considerably better in quality. Shawyer is the leader at present. Russell, Sunburst and Ward are good seconds. The sunshine and lower temperature have done wonders to the greenhouse stock. Carnations are fast improving and chrysanthemums are becoming larger and finer. Funeral work had a big call last week and several large store openings have reduced the supply of stock. Dahlias are plentiful and of good quality. Asters and gladioli are about over. There are good Beauties on the market.

Various Notes.

The opening of the Reed Shoe Co., September 22, occasioned extensive decorations, which were executed by Miss Flick. Chrysanthemums in white and yellow and Shawyer and Sunburst roses, combined with autumn foliage, were used effectively. The Flick Floral Co. closed a deal last week whereby it will erect a large business block on Harrison street. The property has a frontage of seventy-five feet and is 100 feet deep. The building has been leased for ten years by the Ford Automobile Co.

Miss Margaret Vesey gave a luncheon September 20 at the English tea room, in honor of her guest, Mrs. Morrison, of Decatur, Ind.

Visitors last week were Mr. Moriconi, of the Moriconi Statuary Co., Cincinnati, and J. F. Dayton, of Madison Basketcraft Co., Madison, O. R. F.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

FUSSING UP THE AUTUMN WINDOW

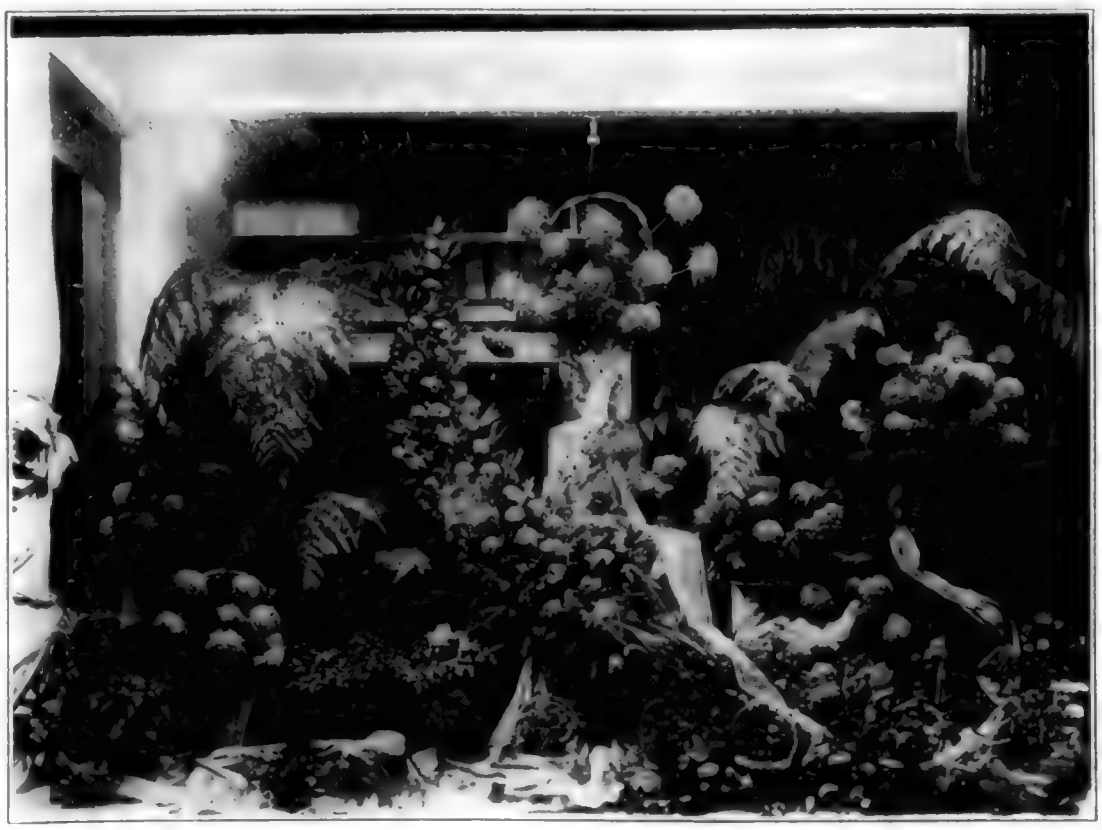
Now that the dog days are done, the duck pond and water wheel, that have proved so magnetic during the summer, must be replaced by a seasonable decoration for autumn. Suggestions of harvest and plenty are most likely to cause the passer-by to loosen his grip on his pocketbook.

SUMMER is gone, the weather man says. The rest of us did not know it had been here; it seemed like alternate doses of March and April. But with the passing of the straw hat and the sport shirt from the male head and bosom, and of the furs from the female shoulders, we recognized that autumn had come. With the apparel above mentioned, passed also the florist's summer window, of duck ponds, brooks, waterfalls and other suggestions of coolness. Its season is past. The window artist turns his attention to appropriate and attractive decorations for fall.

A Matter of Money.

At this time his task is not merely a matter of filling the window with a pleasing display. If he does only that, he has lost sight of his present opportunity. The retailer's window, if it has drawing power, may prove a matter of dollars and cents to the proprietor by reminding the passers-by of the opportunity of partially continuing the departed pleasures of summer by means of greenhouse flowers. While the impression of the beauty and pleasantness lent the dining table and drawing room by the flowers from the garden is still strong in the housewife's mind, the florist may the more easily win a customer through suggesting a continuance of those decorations with greenhouse flowers.

The growth of the flower trade must come, in the main, through the more extensive use of flowers in everyday life. There is a limit to the amount of business a store of a given size can handle for a special day, but there is no restriction to a store's capacity to care for daily trade, for it may expand gradually as the trade increases. For this reason those men must be regarded as leaders among the retailers who are increasing, slowly, to be sure, the number of persons making use of flowers for ordinary occasions.



On the Side.

To do this by means of a window display is the present opportunity of the decorator. He should, therefore, make use of flowers and arrangements most adapted to that end. At the same time he will do well to keep the tone of the window seasonable. If the passer-by receives the impression that he or she can continue a little longer the enjoyment that was obtained from the blooms from the garden by the purchase of some florists' flowers, he will be in the most likely mood to buy. Therefore, the flowers used in the autumn window displays should be, not roses and carnations—plenty of time for them in winter—but asters, dahlias and the various annuals and perennials that appear on the market from week to week at this time. Sales of these do not mount up in dollars and cents so rapidly as do those of the more pretentious staples, but blooms of that character are the most attractive to the family just back from the country.

As a suggestion by the way, let me remark that people would not buy blown roses and wilted carnations from department stores and street vendors for 10 to 25 cents a dozen if florists offered them, with emphasis enough to get their attention, first-class stock of the various seasonable flowers that sell at wholesale by the bunch at this time. It is not roses or carnations that such people particularly want, but flowers for the dining table or for the parlor. They would pay twice or thrice department store prices for fresh flowers from the florist, but do not wish the transaction to reach the dollar mark when they are buying for everyday uses. The florist who caters to this want is increasing the volume of his business without diminishing the number of his larger and more profitable sales. He is, on the contrary, paving the way to increased numbers of larger-sized sales. No more emphatic proof of the hold taken by the flower buying habit can be offered than the trade's record during the last year. Tailors and clothiers went to the wall by dozens, but bankrupt florists were few; the public could get along without the usual new clothes but not without the usual flowers.

Back to Windows.

Though the foregoing may seem a digression, it serves to demonstrate that the window artist at this time should bend his efforts to draw the people who are not now on the store's books. They will yield more readily to the lure of the florists' window while the memories of the summer garden flowers are still strong.

A Horn of Plenty is Calculated to Make a Man Optimistic About his Pocketbook.

But while the decorator is making his window seasonable, he should not go too far. If he fills his window with autumn foliage, goldenrod and other roadside flowers, he may arouse in the mind of the passer-by a desire for another automobile ride in the country rather than a wish for the florist's flowers. Some autumn foliage may well be used for background, but the thing to hit the eye of the spectator must be the flowers that are to be sold to him when he enters the store.

Baskets of autumn flowers make a good display at this time. To more easily draw attention to them, the window decorator may add something such as the cornucopia in the autumn window of Hoyt Bros. Co., Spokane, Wash., which is reproduced on the preceding page. This horn of plenty was six feet long and made of Oregon grape, or mahonia, apples, wheat and yellow chrysanthemums. Out of it poured an abundance of fruit, vegetables, baskets of flowers and blooming plants. This proved a good window for the harvest season.

Other window features similar to this will readily occur to the decorator. The arrival of the football season offers opportunities, especially in a college town. The world's series and various city series of baseball also present suggestions. Other things besides sports may be featured as well. The three points to be borne in mind are: Make the window seasonable, use autumn flowers, and aim to get new trade before people have become accustomed to the absence of flowers again.

NEW HOLIDAY FOR FLORISTS.

Mothers' day and Memorial day have proved so profitable to florists that they will at least consider with interest the proposal of a new holiday, called Memory day, by a Michigan man. The origin of it reminds one of that of Mothers' day. J. T. Daniells, of St. Johns, Mich., having lost both his wife and his only child, was filled with the desire of bettering the cemeteries and beautifying the graves therein. With this purpose in view, he offered a resolution to the Michigan State Association of Farmers and to the State Grange. The Michigan legislature took the matter up at the following session, and now the governor of Michigan has set apart September 30 as Memory day. Mr. Daniells is hoping that Congress will comply with the request to declare it a national day. It is not to be a legal holiday, but merely a matter of sentiment.

So long as cemeteries continue to exist they should be cared for, and not allowed to become weed patches. So far the idea is a good one. But if the day is to be a day of planting vines and flowers, and not merely one of weed-pulling, there arises the question whether the spring, rather than the end of September, is not the season for such a holiday.

No matter what the time of year, however, it will pay the florist to be among the leaders in his community in advocating such a day. Florists' energy made Mothers' day. A little push may prove profitable in this case.

How an Illinois Florist Advertised his Business in a Parade.

FLOATS THAT ADVERTISE.

Prize-Winners Not Always Best.

At this time of the year, when industrial, municipal and business-boosting parades are almost as numerous as are the cities and towns in the United States, a few words regarding trade floats, from an advertising standpoint, will be timely.

It is apparent, from photographs of trade floats received by The Review, that many florists who participate in parades do not always utilize the factor that is of high advertising value—the thing that will unmistakably advertise the florists' business. The trouble is that some florists are too confident that flowers are highly typical and representative of the florists' business. As a matter of fact, the majority of people do not clearly associate flowers with the florist, any more than they would clearly associate a score of pretty girls with the telephone business or a wagon load of books with one of the local book shops.

For instance, John Smith, florist at 100 Main street, may bedeck his little Henry Ford with hundreds of gladioli and asters and bring home first prize as the best exhibitor, but he is not getting all the advertising he could, at least not enough to warrant the expense he has been to. The crowd and judges greatly admire Smith's float, but they do not associate the flowers with Smith's store. The public's interest is centered on the display as a beautiful picture, and what is seen of Smith's sign at the top is soon forgotten. The beauty of Smith's float defeats its purpose. It distracts the attention of the crowd from the fact that the float is John Smith's, and the flowers are the kind that John Smith handles. To make a float an advertising success, something more typical of the business than flowers must be used. John Smith's float would almost serve Harry Smith, cosmetics, or William Smith, chocolates, as well.

Floats Should Typify Business.

Now, had John Smith used a miniature facsimile of the exterior of his store, with flowers in the small display windows, he would have vividly acquainted the spectators with the nature of his business, the name of his business and the location and appearance of his store. The float would efficiently advertise John Smith, and not, as in the former case, merely please the senses of the crowd. In planning a float it would be well to bear in mind that the first consideration should be, "Does my float thoroughly advertise my business?" and not, "Shall I win one of the prizes?" There is a vast difference between the two.

Two Trade Floats That Won.

There recently have come to the attention of The Review the floats of two florists who seem to have caught the right idea. They are the work of the Enid Floral Co., of Enid, Okla., and the Freeport Floral Co., of Freeport, Ill., both of which are reproduced herewith.

The float of the Enid Floral Co. took second prize in an industrial parade

held at Enid, September 16. Coming along in a line of 114 entries, this float was an advertising success because it quickly informed the spectators who, what and where is the Enid Floral Co. Note the little greenhouse nestling in a miniature garden. And the chimney! That was a master touch.

What could be more significant of a greenhouse establishment than a smokestack? That little red chimney carried more advertising for the owners than two vases of prize-winning Beauties. The man in white is Frank Bieber, grower, and the other is R. Brand, a member of the firm.

The other illustration shows the float of the Freeport Floral Co., which won first prize in the parade held during a home-coming celebration at Freeport. This float is a good specimen of what is meant by a typical float. It advertised the Freeport Floral Co. more efficiently than would an automobile covered with thousands of flowers. It will be noted here that while neither of these floats was elaborately decorated with flowers, the ingenuity of each brought home the bacon in the form of first and second prizes.

MYER BUYS BUILDING.

Myer Gottlieb, who trades as Myer, 609 Madison avenue, New York city, is now the owner of the entire building in which is his store, shown in the illustration on this page. For his business he uses the entire ground floor and the basement, as well as two storage stores on Fifty-ninth street. The upper floors are occupied by business firms and artists. The immense window space enables him to maintain artistic floral effects continually. The whole enterprise is indicative of the tireless energy of the man, who less than ten years ago was salesman and buyer for one of the leading florists of Fifth avenue. J. Austin Shaw.

A ZENITH CITY WINDOW.

"While Duluth may not be considered one of the large cities of the United States, there is nothing to prevent us from getting up a little display for the edification of the savages up in this neck of the woods." So writes Edward P. Kreimer, of the Duluth Floral Co., Duluth, Minn., and to better show the trade what Mr. Kreimer modestly describes as a "little display," a photograph of the window is reproduced herewith. This rather elaborate display was made for the cooperative fall openings of the Duluth merchants, who boost business each fall by means of window displays and advertising. The illustration pictures better than words the decoration of the Duluth Floral Co., at 121 West Superior street.

Associated with Mr. Kreimer in the business are Oliver J. Eischen and W. W. Seekins, the latter formerly in business under his own name at 302 East Superior street.

NEW YORK SPRING SHOW.

The schedule of premiums to be offered at the International Flower Show, to be held in the Grand Central Palace, New York, April 5 to 12, 1916, has been issued and copies may be obtained on application to the secretary.

The premiums offered are again on a liberal scale, and there are some notable additions to the classes. In the section for commercial growers covering roses in pots and tubs, there are three prizes offered for a display of rose plants, arranged as a rose garden covering 500 square feet. The prizes are $500, $300 and $200. In this class last year there were but two prizes, of $300 and $200.

Some important additions have been made to the classes covering bulbous plants. There is a class devoted to private growers covering a display of bulbs in flower, to occupy 200 square feet, arranged for effect; prizes $150 and $100. There is also a class calling for a display of bulbs, etc., arranged as a Dutch bulb garden, covering 500 square feet, appropriate accessories permitted; prizes $250, $150 and $100. This class is open to all.

In the commercial class for display of cut roses, covering 200 square feet, the first prize is increased to $250 and the second prize is increased to $200. Bougainvilleas are to be featured so as to form a distinct attraction among the groups of flowering plants, prizes of $75 and $50 being offered for the best two groups arranged for effect, covering 100 square feet.

A new feature is the class for a collection of new Holland plants, covering 100 square feet; prizes $50 and $25.

Rock gardens are to be another important feature, a commercial class for such gardens, covering a space 10x30, suitable accessories permitted, having been introduced with prizes of $250 and $150.

A full and complete exhibition in the trade section is practically assured, the contracts already accepted aggregating in value upward of $10,000.

The entertainment features of the show will, it is expected, be of the usual high standard and fully in accord with the purposes of the show.

As a matter of fact, the majority of people do not clearly associate flowers with the florist, any more than they would clearly associate a score of pretty girls with the telephone business or a wagon load of books with one of the local book shops.

For instance, John Smith, florist at 100 Main street, may bedeck his little Henry Ford with hundreds of gladioli and asters and bring home first prize as the best exhibitor, but he is not getting all the advertising he could, at least not enough to warrant the expense he has been to. The crowd and judges greatly admire Smith's float, but they do not associate the flowers with Smith's store. The public's interest is centered on the display as a beautiful picture, and what is seen of Smith's sign at the top is soon forgotten. The beauty of Smith's float defeats its purpose. It distracts the attention of the crowd from the fact that the float is John Smith's, and the flowers are the kind that John Smith handles. To make a float an advertising success, something more typical of the business than flowers must be used. John Smith's float would almost serve Harry Smith, cosmetics, or William Smith, chocolates, as well.

Floats Should Typify Business.

Now, had John Smith used a miniature facsimile of the exterior of his store, with flowers in the small display windows, he would have vividly acquainted the spectators with the nature of his business, the name of his business and the location and appearance of his store. The float would efficiently advertise John Smith, and not, as in the former case, merely please the senses of the crowd. In planning a float it would be well to bear in mind that the first consideration should be, "Does my float thoroughly advertise my business?" and not, "Shall I win one of the prizes?" There is a vast difference between the two.

Two Trade Floats That Won.

There recently have come to the attention of The Review the floats of two florists who seem to have caught the right idea. They are the work of the Enid Floral Co., of Enid, Okla., and the Freeport Floral Co., of Freeport, Ill., both of which are reproduced herewith.

The float of the Enid Floral Co. took second prize in an industrial parade

held at Enid, September 16. Coming along in a line of 114 entries, this float was an advertising success because it quickly informed the spectators who, what and where is the Enid Floral Co. Note the little greenhouse nestling in a miniature garden. And the chimney! That was a master touch.

What could be more significant of a greenhouse establishment than a smoke-stack? That little red chimney carried more advertising for the owners than two vases of prize-winning Beauties. The man in white is Frank Bieber, grower, and the other is R. Brand, a member of the firm.

The other illustration shows the float of the Freeport Floral Co., which won first prize in the parade held during a home-coming celebration at Freeport. This float is a good specimen of what is meant by a typical float. It advertised the Freeport Floral Co. more efficiently than would an automobile covered with thousands of flowers. It will be noted here that while neither of these floats was elaborately decorated with flowers, the ingenuity of each brought home the bacon in the form of first and second prizes.

MYER BUYS BUILDING.

Myer Gottlieb, who trades as Myer, 609 Madison avenue, New York city, is now the owner of the entire building in which is his store, shown in the illustration on this page. For his business he uses the entire ground floor and the basement, as well as two storage stores on Fifty-ninth street. The upper floors are occupied by business firms and artists. The immense window space enables him to maintain artistic floral effects continually. The whole enterprise is indicative of the tireless energy of the man, who less than ten years ago was salesman and buyer for one of the leading florists of Fifth avenue. J. Austin Shaw.

A ZENITH CITY WINDOW.

"While Duluth may not be considered one of the large cities of the United States, there is nothing to prevent us from getting up a little display for the edification of the savages up in this neck of the woods." So writes Edward P. Kreimer, of the Duluth Floral Co., Duluth, Minn., and to better show the trade what Mr. Kreimer modestly describes as a "little display," a photograph of the window is reproduced herewith. This rather elaborate display was made for the cooperative fall openings of the Duluth merchants, who boost business each fall by means of window displays and advertising. The illustration pictures better than words the decoration of the Duluth Floral Co., at 121 West Superior street.

Associated with Mr. Kreimer in the business are Oliver J. Eischen and W. W. Seekins, the latter formerly in business under his own name at 302 East Superior street.

NEW YORK SPRING SHOW.

The schedule of premiums to be offered at the International Flower Show, to be held in the Grand Central Palace, New York, April 5 to 12, 1916, has been issued and copies may be obtained on application to the secretary.

The premiums offered are again on a liberal scale, and there are some notable additions to the classes. In the section for commercial growers covering roses in pots and tubs, there are three prizes offered for a display of rose plants, arranged as a rose garden covering 500 square feet. The prizes are $500, $300 and $200. In this class last year there were but two prizes, of $300 and $200.

Some important additions have been made to the classes covering bulbous plants. There is a class devoted to private growers covering a display of bulbs in flower, to occupy 200 square feet, arranged for effect; prizes $150 and $100. There is also a class calling for a display of bulbs, etc., arranged as a Dutch bulb garden, covering 500 square feet, appropriate accessories permitted; prizes $250, $150 and $100. This class is open to all.

In the commercial class for display of cut roses, covering 200 square feet, the first prize is increased to $250 and the second prize is increased to $200. Bougainvilleas are to be featured so as to form a distinct attraction among the groups of flowering plants, prizes of $75 and $50 being offered for the best two groups arranged for effect, covering 100 square feet.

A new feature is the class for a collection of new Holland plants, covering 100 square feet; prizes $50 and $25.

Rock gardens are to be another important feature, a commercial class for such gardens, covering a space 10x30, suitable accessories permitted, having been introduced with prizes of $250 and $150.

A full and complete exhibition in the trade section is practically assured, the contracts already accepted aggregating in value upward of $10,000.

The entertainment features of the show will, it is expected, be of the usual high standard and fully in accord with the purposes of the show.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Spanish Iris.

Spanish iris bulbs increase in popularity, as their ease of culture and value for cutting becomes better known. They are so inexpensive that every florist can afford to try some. In additon to being cultivated in flats, they can be successfully grown in beds or benches in a cool house. They are also hardy and well adapted for outdoor culture. As these irises start to grow soon after planting, do not keep them in a dark cellar, and do not cover with sand or ashes. Good varieties to grow are Louise, porcelain blue; British Queen, pure white; Cajanus, yellow; Midley, pale blue.

Gladioli.

Gladioli of the small-bulbed, or nanus, type need treatment similar to that of the Spanish iris, and can be successfully cultivated in either flats or benches. The two most popular commercial varieties are Peach Blossom, pink, and Blushing Bride, white with crimson blotches. The Bride, or Colvillei alba, is a pure white variety. Orange Queen is orange scarlet in color, and Pink Perfection, bright rose.

Anemones and Ranunculi.

The Persian ranunculi and such anemones as fulgens, St. Brigid and The Bride are prized in early spring by many critical buyers. All need cool treatment, and they succeed best in benches or flats. Ranunculi may also be grown in 6-inch pans, six to eight bulbs in each. Sometimes it is possible to grow these in a violet house where any violet plants chance to die out. They are also sometimes dotted thinly among the violet plants.

Miscellaneous Bulbs.

Among bulbs which find a place in some florists' windows in spring and which are not generally known or grown, are ixias, of which Wonder and crateroides major are splendid varieties; tritonias of the crocata type, of a lovely salmon orange color; sparaxis and babianas. All these succeed best in 6-inch or 7-inch pans of rather light but sandy soil, in a cool greenhouse, with a minimum of 45 degrees. They need more careful watering than other bulbs. Without it many will rot off below the soil.

Nerines.

The nerines, or Guernsey lilies, as they are commonly called, are already showing flower spikes. To flower them at all successfully, it is necessary to have them well potbound and to give them a thorough baking through the summer. As soon as spikes show, stand the plants on a bench in a cool greenhouse and give them some water. Nerines flower at a time when there is a comparative dearth of blooming plants, and for that reason are extremely useful. Their slow rate of propagation and somewhat high price militate against their extended use commercially, but some growers, who cater to high-class stores, have taken them in hand of late years.

Poinsettias.

The nights are becoming much cooler and care must be given the poinsettias, or a loss of foliage will surely result. Water more carefully and guard against excessive dryness or anything approaching sogginess. Let the night temperature be about 55 degrees, advancing it to 60 degrees as the bracts show. Make up any late propagated stock into pans, using small ferns, asparagus or cyperus among them. Plants which are well established in pots or pans should have weak manure water once in four or five days. It can be applied a little stronger when the bracts appear.

Amaryllis.

Do not dry amaryllis plants off too suddenly. If they have been in frames through the summer, give them, if possible, a shelf in a sunny house and gradually withhold the water supply, rather than lay them on their sides under a drippy bench. There is a general impression that amaryllis plants want a long, severe drying in order to make them flower well. This is an utterly erroneous idea. Never mind if your plants hold some green leaves until the next season's flower spikes appear; they will be all the better for it.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangeas are easily injured by frost while their growths are green and immature, as they are after so damp a summer. The plants, if not yet lifted and potted, should be taken up at once. Stand them in frames where they will get a full exposure to the sun, but where sashes will protect them from frost or heavy rains. It is specially necessary to use care with the French hydrangeas, which are more tender than H. Otaksa and more easily injured by mold. Plants that were pot-grown through the summer should be gradually dried, in order to mature the wood more thoroughly and fit them for early forcing.

Rambler Roses.

Where rambler roses have not been pot-grown through the summer and they are wanted for early forcing, the lifting and potting should be no longer delayed. Cut away the soft growth on the shoots. Pot firmly. Stand them where they will get lots of sunshine. To prevent the plants from being blown over, plunge the pots partly in soil or coal ashes. These plants will wilt badly for a time, but never mind that; if carefully potted and occasionally sprayed they will soon start to make new roots, and it is surprising how many they will make before the arrival of cold weather.

Single Violets.

It is better not to house the single violets until they have had one or two moderate freezings. Usually from October 10 to 30 is a suitable time to plant them, according to locality. Before they are lifted they should be gone over in the field and all runners removed. Do not lift and plant any stock which seems weak or at all sickly. To keep violets in good condition, careful selection of stock is necessary. This is a fact which even some large specialists are now only becoming alive to. It need hardly be said that violets like a soil containing plenty of well decayed manure, as they are strong feeders. They also need a cool house, with an average winter minimum of 40 to 42 degrees. Princess of Wales is much the best variety.

THE GLADIOLUS

HOW OLD WERE THE BULBS?

I was much interested in the inquiry from E. H. J., which appeared on page 16 of The Review of September 23, under the head of "Soil for Gladioli." The inquirer said, in part: "We have about 50,000 gladioli in several varieties. Among some of the kinds there seems to be a decrease the last two years in the size of the blooms and in the quantity and size of the bulbs. Every spring, since we took up the gladioli three years ago, we have changed their growing location and kept the soil, which is sixty per cent clay, well cultivated and weeded. All the varieties have fine, long spikes. What is the reason for the decrease in size of blooms and in quantity of bulbs?"

After carefully reading the question, and the reply to it by The Review's correspondent, I was surprised to see that the correspondent apparently had failed to take note of the advanced age of the bulbs. E. H. J. "took the bulbs up three years ago." It would seem that they must have been planted at least once in order to be taken up. It is a fairly safe conclusion that E. H. J. insisted on getting the largest bulbs possible—nice, old, flat stock, say about 2½-inch. This would make the stock, say, 3 years old when E. H. J. came into possession. He has had them four years and, allowing 2 years to be their age when he got them, this would make the bulbs at least 6 years old. Will some grower please step forward and give us a good line on fertilizer and soil to use for 6-year-old gladiolus bulbs?

PUNCTURES IN ROSE STEMS.

I am sending, under separate cover, a twig taken from a rose plant grown under glass. The stems are punctured at intervals of an inch or so, and I find that there is an egg about an eighth of an inch long in each puncture. The work of this insect is not yet extensive among my plants, but I should like to know what it is and what to do with it. F. R. R.—Mo.

The punctures referred to are caused by grasshoppers, which bite into the stems of the roses, bruising the stems, and lay their eggs in the bruise. As the stems are cut off, either on account of wilting or with the flowers, before the eggs have time to hatch, the punctures do not affect the plants in any way, and by keeping the doors and side ventilators closed they can be prevented almost entirely. W. J. K.

LOSING THEIR FOLIAGE.

I am sending you, by express, two Killarney Brilliant roses and shall greatly appreciate any advice you can give me about them. I am finding plants in this shape all over the house, but especially in the center row. Three rows in the middle bench look fairly well, but the plants in the fourth row look like those I am sending you. They always get new foliage, which then turns yellow and falls off. Will you be kind enough to tell me what the trouble is, and the remedy? W. K.—Mo.

The writer does not state whether the roses are planted in raised benches or solid beds, and he fails to give some other particulars that might aid in determining the cause of his troubles, but it seems from his letter that the Brilliants are planted in a bench containing seven rows of plants, in the center of the house and probably under the ventilators, where they are liable to get considerable drip when it rains. Besides, in watering a bench wide enough to hold seven rows of plants, a good many growers water from each side to the center, causing the center row to receive a double dose at each watering, and also piling up an extra quantity of soil in the center of the bench, around the plants. Therefore, as the center of the bench naturally dries out most slowly, these plants probably are continually soaked. This causes the plants to make soft growth, and the leaves turn prematurely yellow and fall off.

The best way to overcome this trouble will be to let the bench get fairly dry all over and then water entirely across the bench from both sides. In this way the outside rows will get most of the water, and any loose soil will be washed to the edges instead of being piled up in the center of the bench. Then the center plants will dry up as fast as the rest. Killarney Brilliant is not as easy a rose to grow as any of the other Killarneys and will not stand as much water or as heavy feeding. Hence, where Killarney and White Killarney may do well, Brilliant may suffer under the same treatment.

W. J. K.

ORIGIN OF MANETTI.

Since most of your forcing roses probably are grafted on Manetti, it may interest you to know that "the Manetti stock was raised in Italy by Signor Manetti, of the Botanic Gardens, Monza, and seems to be a hybrid from R. fraxinifolia, a variety of R. blanda. It is propagated by cuttings, and is stated to have been first introduced into England by Mr. Rivers so long ago as 1835. It has some advantages over all other stocks in that it pushes early and the sap will run quite late." The American supply comes from England and France, most grafters preferring the British output. The stocks usually are grown in small lots, by persons who sell them to the exporters, who keep an eye on the grading to see that the standards are maintained.

ROSES IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

Will you kindly inform me if Shawyer, Ward and Maryland roses will do well if cut back as closely as Killarney? If not, how closely should they be cut back?

M. J. M. E.—S. C.

You do not state whether you mean pruning back the plants in starting them for another year or cutting the flowers. All the varieties mentioned can be pruned back to sixteen to twenty inches in resting the plants and starting them for another year. If you refer to the cutting of the flowers, they should be cut to the first perfect leaf, which is usually the second or third eye from the break. When cutting flowers, the varieties you mention will stand closer cutting than Killarney, for the reason that they grow more blind wood and have more foliage to support the plants when the crop is cut.

Amsterdam, Holland.—To tide over those engaged in the bulb industry and other branches of horticulture, which have been severely injured by the war, the Netherlands government is considering the establishment of a credit bank for horticulture. While the bank will not be on a coöperative basis, it is understood that the industries specially concerned will exercise a control over its management.

Nice, France.—The resumption of the facilities of transportation by rail to northern France and England has made it possible for the flower growers in this section to send cut flowers to those markets. The sale of flowers is one of the chief sources of the trade in this district and it has suffered largely by the war, as the principal exportations went to Germany or through Germany to northern capitals.

Ghent, Belgium.—Under the direction of German authorities the postal service has been partly restored through this section. The plant growers have been encouraged to return to their daily occupations and may now receive and dispatch mail from and to other countries. Subject to the interruptions occasioned by military necessity, the transportation lines also are open to shipments.

Lyon, France.—Georges Pernet, son of the famous rose raiser, Jh. Pernet-Ducher, has been killed in the Vosges mountains. The death of his elder brother, Claudius, was reported in these columns some time ago.

London, England.—Business with firms in the horticultural trades is unsteady, but not so bad as might be expected. In a general way the best class of buyers are laying off, as they are the people who are carrying the financial burden of the war, but the laboring classes are actively employed at the best wages ever known and the horticultural firms that reach this group of buyers find possibilities there this season at least as good as ever before.

Brussels, Belgium.—The German civil administration, which has been seeking to reëstablish Belgian industries, has not looked with favor on the course of the British government in requiring deferred payment through English banks for Belgian exports. For a time no such exports were permitted, but it has been decided not to interfere with exports of horticultural commodities from the Ghent district and recently considerable quantities of plant stock are reported to have been dispatched to Rotterdam.

ASPARAGUS HATCHERI VS. LUTZI.

I have received Asparagus Lutzi plants from two different concerns. Both lots are alike, and, what is more, they are certainly identical with Asparagus Hatcheri. I cannot see a particle of difference. I note that it has been said of Lutzi that it is a great bloomer, and that the blooms add greatly to its beauty. Hatcheri as I grow it is a free bloomer, but the flowers, being small and frail, add no value to it whatever. I grow asparagus for the trade, and I find that Hatcheri takes well, but not because of its blooms. Hatcheri is a great producer, does not require the heat that plumosus does (this is also claimed of Lutzi), and because of its fluffiness and denser appearance, hides flower stems and wires better than does plumosus. Florists like it.

I should like to hear from others about the similarity of Hatcheri and Lutzi. Have not the Germans put one over on us by renaming our plant?

ABUSE OF FUNERAL FLOWERS.

May I use your valuable paper to offer a protest as to the handling of funeral flowers by undertakers, and, I regret to say, by some florists, when they are taken from house or church after a funeral service? The usual practice is to throw them promiscuously into a vehicle, helter-skelter, as quickly as possible, so that they will occupy as small a space as possible. The feeling seems to be that the show is over, the florist has done his work, and the undertaker is in a hurry to complete his part.

Does the florist ever stop to consider the feelings of the mourners who have sent the flowers? Some of them frequently see the way their offerings are treated. Does the florist ever take a moment to consider the effect it is likely to have upon people who have sent, or would send, floral tributes to the dead when they see costly flowers treated like so much rubbish the moment they have served their purpose? Is it good business to show so little regard for the flowers from which we florists get our living? Do they think that a customer who has given perhaps $50 for a design, and sees it treated with such carelessness, will be likely to repeat an experience of this kind? Is he not more likely to say to himself, "I will send a letter of sympathy, or just a few loose flowers, if that is the way my tribute is treated"?

In these days, when flowers are produced in great quantities and are placed before the public, in a large measure, by vendors who are neither florists by profession nor instinct, it is necessary more than ever before for the florists who have stores, with all the attendant heavy expenses, to be particularly watchful to keep up the sentiment of veneration and the love of flowers in the wealthy class, upon whom they have to rely for their support.

EUONYMUS RADICANS.

Euonymus radicans is the hardiest evergreen climber we have. There are several forms of it, some naturally bushy in habit and others of a climbing nature, but all are splendid for ground covers either in sunshine or shade. All can be trimmed so as to make neat hedges. They are well adapted for covering walls, rocks or boulders. The true radicans is a splendid climber, clinging closely to brick, stone, concrete or wood. The planting of this invaluable evergreen can be successfully done from April until November, but April, May, August and September are the ideal months. The present is a suitable time to put in cuttings, either in flats or directly in a coldframe. Make short cuttings of two or three joints. Put these in quite closely, firm well and spray freely. Keep the frames close for a month and then gradually give more air. A large proportion of the cuttings will be well rooted before cold weather. They can be planted in nursery rows in the spring, or potted, if preferred, for long shipments. Use a sandy soil for the cuttings.

The varieties vegeta and Carrierei are specially well adapted for covering low walls, also for hedges and for growing as individual specimens. Euonymus radicans is not yet sufficiently appreciated. It is our finest hardy, low-growing or climbing evergreen. Its propagation and culture are easy and more country florists should stock up with it.

VINCENT'S DAHLIA SHOW.

The annual fall exhibition of dahlias and cannas of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. was held at its farm, White Marsh, Md., September 28 to October 2, and was the most successful show ever held by this concern. During the earlier part of the week the exhibition was viewed by many thousands of people. The rain on Friday and Saturday, however, prevented the attendance of many intending visitors.

The exhibition was held in the packing-shed, a building, 25x110, which had been repainted and put in first-class shape for the occasion. Temporary, inclined walls running the full length of the building were erected. On these were displayed the panel and block effects shown in one of the accompanying illustrations. A table seven feet across extended from end to end of the building. On it the enormous vases of cut blooms were shown. Several tubs, each containing sixty to seventy-five immense blooms on stems two to four feet long, showed up wonderfully well. The artistic manner in which the funeral designs were arranged excited favorable comment from all who saw them.

Thousands upon thousands of blooms of every imaginable shade of color were displayed inside the building, but the fields and greenhouses would have yielded a hundred times as many. The exhibition hall was a riot of color which words fail to describe. Those by whom the arrangements were devised deserve unlimited praise. The fields were a waving sea of blooms as far as the eye could look in any direction. Dahlias, with here and there a block of cannas to break the monotony of the sight, were the only things to be seen. More than 200 varieties of dahlias are being grown for commercial use by the company, besides numerous varieties in what is known as the trial grounds. These beds take up more space than a city block and are planted with novelties in the dahlia line, some of only two or three plants of an especially new variety. Here all new varieties are tried out before being listed in the catalogues. This block receives careful treatment, each plant being staked and tied and all blooms disbudded. The work is under the direct supervision of one of the sons.

It would be impossible to enumerate all the different varieties found in the trial grounds, but some of those which impressed the writer favorably are given below. One fact which stands out is the entire absence of any of the quilled, show type of blooms, the trial grounds being planted in cactus, decorative and peony-flowering types. In the general commercial collection the quilled, show type varieties are in the minority by about one to six.

White Delice is one of the newest varieties. It is identical in all respects with its parent, excepting the difference in color. Among the most striking of the newer varieties were Paul Charmant, which may be classed as a dark maroon Doazon; Geisha, semi-double, red, tipped with yellow; Beloit, peony-flowering, wine color; R. L. Borden, a peculiar shade of pink, shading to salmon and yellow; Prima Donna, a pink, quilled, cactus variety, and Hohenzollern, a giant red. Numerous shades of yellow and salmon pink were seen, which were also attractive, but too numerous to mention separately. In the commercial section were the usual standard varieties, all in full flower.

The canna fields were a scene of beauty and color. All the standard varieties are grown, besides many of the newer sorts, which are grown for a time before distributing to the trade. The many greenhouses are filled with geraniums and other bedding plants. Scarlet Wonder and Maryland, both introduced by Vincent, and Beaute Poitevine, showed up well among these popular bedding plants.

September 29 was Florists' day. The trade was well represented. Those who attended felt well repaid for the trip to view this beautiful exhibition of the "queen flower of the fall season."

PROTECTION FROM FROST.

I wish to carry a number of thousands of potted plants, pansies, etc., over winter in coldframes. I have had some previous trouble, finding pots split by the frost of our central New York winters. How can this be prevented? My plan is to cover with dry leaves to a depth of one foot and provide the coldframes with a slanting, water-tight roof. Should the pots be buried to the top in the earth, leaving only the plants exposed, or should I place them close together on the surface?

C. S. M.—N. Y.

The pots should be plunged to their brims in the frames, and when sharp weather arrives, fill over them with loose and perfectly dry leaves. If you do not use sashes over these, you must have tight match-board shutters. If the leaves become wet, a lot of your plants will rot. It is necessary to have them perfectly dry. It will be necessary to pack around the sides of the frames with leaves or straw, unless they are below the ground level. Pots stood on the surface would be far more likely to freeze and burst than such as are plunged. If you can get pine needles, they make a splendid covering for the plants and exclude a lot of frost.

CAMPANULA AND DIGITALIS.

Can campanulas and digitalis be forced successfully under glass? What temperature should they be given? Any information as to their culture will be highly appreciated.

L. L.—Mo.

Each of these plants can be successfully forced into flower considerably ahead of their natural outdoor blooming time. By campanula, you probably refer to C. Medium, or Canterbury bells. These should be lifted and potted now, kept outdoors for some time, then stood in a coldframe. Forcing in a minimum of 45 degrees can be started in January. They should never have a night temperature exceeding 50 degrees, as they will not stand hard forcing. When they are well established in their pots, they need abundant supplies of water and occasional applications of liquid manure. Canterbury bells need a light, sunny and airy house. The single varieties are far the best for forcing, or, for that matter, any other purpose.

Digitalis, or foxgloves, want similar cultural conditions to campanulas. Plants can be flowered in from 6-inch to 10-inch, or even larger, pots. Commercially I would favor 7-inch or 8-inch pots, and use a rich compost for both plants.

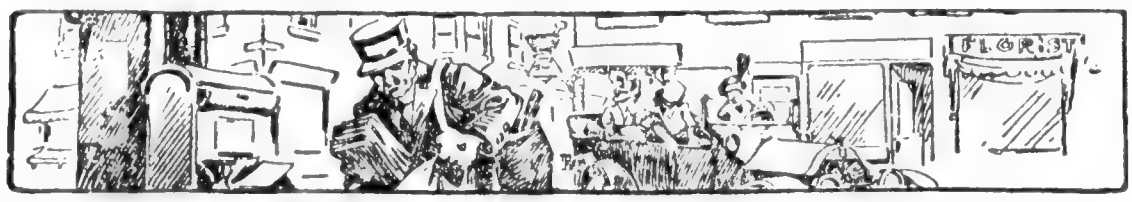
SOLANUMS FOR CHRISTMAS.

I have some Jerusalem cherries outside in 4-inch pots. They are six inches high and in bloom. Please state how to handle them to have them in time for Christmas.

G. M.—Pa.



Your plants are somewhat small, but should have ripe fruits before Christmas. Place them on a sunny bench in a house with a night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees. Give them plenty of water and some liquid manure once a week.

C. W.

Pascagoula, Miss.—L. F. Kramer has a house 40x100, with side walls six feet high, used only for cucumbers in the forcing season and allowed to stand idle all summer.

EUONYMUS RADICANS.

Euonymus radicans is the hardiest evergreen climber we have. There are several forms of it, some naturally bushy in habit and others of a climbing nature, but all are splendid for ground covers either in sunshine or shade. All can be trimmed so as to make neat hedges. They are well adapted for covering walls, rocks or boulders. The true radicans is a splendid climber, clinging closely to brick, stone, concrete or wood. The planting of this invaluable evergreen can be successfully done from April until November, but April, May, August and September are the ideal months. The present is a suitable time to put in cuttings, either in flats or directly in a coldframe. Make short cuttings of two or three joints. Put these in quite closely, firm well and spray freely. Keep the frames close for a month and then gradually give more air. A large proportion of the cuttings will be well rooted before cold weather. They can be planted in nursery rows in the spring, or potted, if preferred, for long shipments. Use a sandy soil for the cuttings.

The varieties vegeta and Carrierei are specially well adapted for covering low walls, also for hedges and for growing as individual specimens. Euonymus radicans is not yet sufficiently appreciated. It is our finest hardy, low-growing or climbing evergreen. Its propagation and culture are easy and more country florists should stock up with it.

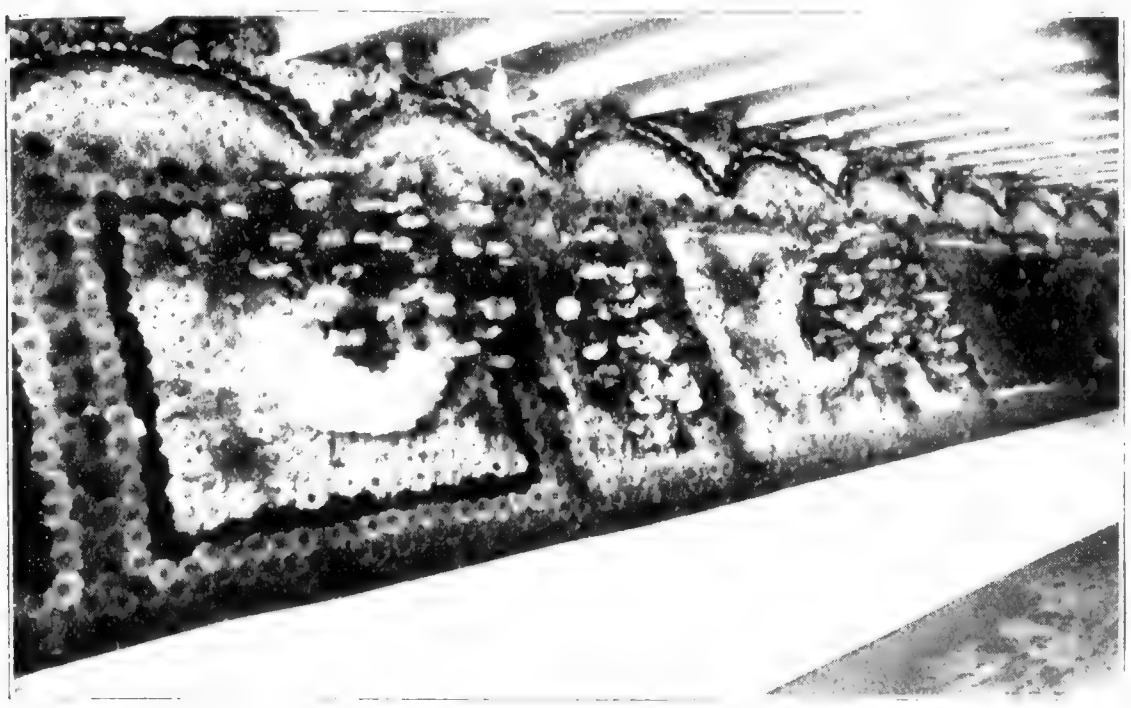
VINCENT'S DAHLIA SHOW.



The annual fall exhibition of dahlias and cannas of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. was held at its farm, White Marsh, Md., September 28 to October 2, and was the most successful show ever held by this concern. During the earlier part of the week the exhibition was viewed by many thousands of people. The rain on Friday and Saturday, however, prevented the attendance of many intending visitors.

The exhibition was held in the packing-shed, a building, 25x110, which had been repainted and put in first-class shape for the occasion. Temporary, inclined walls running the full length of the building were erected. On these were displayed the panel and block effects shown in one of the accompanying illustrations. A table seven feet across extended from end to end of the building. On it the enormous vases of cut blooms were shown. Several tubs, each containing sixty to seventy-five immense blooms on stems two to four feet long, showed up wonderfully well. The artistic manner in which the funeral designs were arranged excited favorable comment from all who saw them.

Thousands upon thousands of blooms of every imaginable shade of color were displayed inside the building, but the fields and greenhouses would have yielded a hundred times as many. The exhibition hall was a riot of color which words fail to describe. Those by whom the arrangements were devised deserve unlimited praise. The fields were a waving sea of blooms as far as the eye could look in any direction. Dahlias, with here and there a block of cannas to break the monotony of the sight, were the only things to be seen. More than 200 varieties of dahlias are being grown for commercial use by the company, besides numerous varieties in what is known as the trial grounds. These beds take up more space than a city block and are planted with novelties in the dahlia line, some of only two or three plants of an especially new variety. Here all new varieties are tried out before being listed in the catalogues. This block receives careful treatment, each plant being staked and tied and all blooms disbudded. The work is under the direct supervision of one of the sons.

It would be impossible to enumerate all the different varieties found in the trial grounds, but some of those which impressed the writer favorably are given below. One fact which stands out is the entire absence of any of the quilled, show type of blooms, the trial grounds being planted in cactus, decorative and peony-flowering types. In the general commercial collection the quilled, show type varieties are in the minority by about one to six.

White Delice is one of the newest varieties. It is identical in all respects with its parent, excepting the difference in color. Among the most striking of the newer varieties were Paul Charmant, which may be classed as a dark maroon Doazon; Geisha, semi double, red, tipped with yellow; Beloit, peony-flowering, wine color; R. L. Borden, a peculiar shade of pink, shading to salmon and yellow; Prima Donna, a pink, quilled, cactus variety, and Hohenzollern, a giant red. Numerous shades of yellow and salmon pink were seen, which were also attractive, but too numerous to mention separately. In the commercial section were the usual standard varieties, all in full flower.

The canna fields were a scene of beauty and color. All the standard varieties are grown, besides many of the newer sorts, which are grown for a time before distributing to the trade. The many greenhouses are filled with geraniums and other bedding plants. Scarlet Wonder and Maryland, both introduced by Vincent, and Beaute Poitevine, showed up well among these popular bedding plants.

September 29 was Florists' day. The trade was well represented. Those who attended felt well repaid for the trip to view this beautiful exhibition of the "queen flower of the fall season."

PROTECTION FROM FROST.

I wish to carry a number of thousands of potted plants, pansies, etc., over winter in coldframes. I have had some previous trouble, finding pots split by the frost of our central New York winters. How can this be prevented? My plan is to cover with dry leaves to a depth of one foot and provide the coldframes with a slanting, water-tight roof. Should the pots be buried to the top in the earth, leaving only the plants exposed, or should I place them close together on the surface?

C. S. M. N. Y.

The pots should be plunged to their brims in the frames, and when sharp weather arrives, fill over them with loose and perfectly dry leaves. If you do not use sashes over these, you must have tight match-board shutters. If the leaves become wet, a lot of your plants will rot. It is necessary to have them perfectly dry. It will be necessary to pack around the sides of the frames with leaves or straw, unless they are below the ground level. Pots stood on the surface would be far more likely to freeze and burst than such as are plunged. If you can get pine needles, they make a splendid covering for the plants and exclude a lot of frost.

CAMPANULA AND DIGITALIS.

Can campanulas and digitalis be forced successfully under glass? What temperature should they be given? Any information as to their culture will be highly appreciated.

L. L.—Mo.

Each of these plants can be successfully forced into flower considerably ahead of their natural outdoor blooming time. By campanula, you probably refer to C. Medium, or Canterbury bells. These should be lifted and potted now, kept outdoors for some time, then stood in a coldframe. Forcing in a minimum of 45 degrees can be started in January. They should never have a night temperature exceeding 50 degrees, as they will not stand hard forcing. When they are well established in their pots, they need abundant supplies of water and occasional applications of liquid manure. Canterbury bells need a light, sunny and airy house. The single varieties are far the best for forcing, or, for that matter, any other purpose.

Digitalis, or foxgloves, want similar cultural conditions to campanulas. Plants can be flowered in from 6-inch to 10-inch, or even larger, pots. Commercially I would favor 7-inch or 8-inch pots, and use a rich compost for both plants.

SOLANUMS FOR CHRISTMAS.

I have some Jerusalem cherries outside in 4-inch pots. They are six inches high and in bloom. Please state how to handle them to have them in time for Christmas.

G. M.—Pa.

Your plants are somewhat small, but should have ripe fruits before Christmas. Place them on a sunny bench in a house with a night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees. Give them plenty of water and some liquid manure once a week.

C. W.

Pascagoula, Miss.— L. F. Kramer has a house 40x100, with side walls six feet high, used only for cucumbers in the forcing season and allowed to stand idle all summer.

BOOKKEEPERS, ATTENTION!

The system of bookkeeping that we have used, up to the present, has proved itself entirely unsatisfactory. It is clumsy and slow, and mistakes are easy to make. We would be greatly helped if you could give us, in an article in The Review, a simple and efficient system of bookkeeping in outline.

We do business as a company, operating extensive market gardens, and having also flowers and vegetables under glass, and a store in the city, which handles all the usual flower stock.

The store account and the farm account are kept separate, but the same method of keeping books is used in both. All accounts must be balanced and a division of the profits made among the members each week. Not a great deal of money is handled in a week, so the balancing is usually done each Saturday evening. But we are usually tired and make blunders at that time.

The salesman, or wagon-man, who takes the produce to market each day, turns in a slip showing the amount taken in for each kind of produce, amount spent for household supplies for the family of each member of the firm, and an itemized list of all cash spent for supplies for the farm.

Besides this, several others of the firm frequently take in money from sales and spend, for the firm, small amounts out of their own pockets.

Checks are frequently drawn for supplies and expenses of various kinds, such as lumber, glass, plants, etc. Occasionally such articles are bought on credit, also on ten, thirty and sixty days' time.

We like to list the sales of various articles under separate headings. For instance, one page is devoted to tomatoes, another to lettuce, another to flowers from the greenhouses, etc. We like to keep separate the accounts of ordinary running expenses, such as repairs, feed for the stable, paper for wrapping, etc., and the accounts of such things as we term supplies, such as pots, boxes, glass, seeds, plants, etc.

We are all so busy we usually quit work late and, having no definite knowledge of bookkeeping, we cannot undertake any complicated method of bookkeeping. But we must have some way of telling how we stand each week.

We believe that other florists are just as anxious as we are to master this too often neglected part of the business; hence my request for a general article on the subject. Y. P. C.—Mo.

We regret our inability to supply offhand such a system of accounting as is required. The fact is, we have been looking for a long time for someone who could give us a comprehensive article that would cover this subject. The difficulty has been that the systems which really give an accurate accounting are so complicated that they call for employing an experienced bookkeeper.

What the average florist wants is a system of accounting that will necessitate extremely little work. Perhaps some reader of The Review will have some ideas on the subject to offer.

RUST ON CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

My Patty, Charles Razer and Chrysolora chrysanthemums have been attacked by rust. What must I use to rid the plants of this trouble?

N. N.—Mich.

The best preparation for killing rust is sulphide of potassium, dissolved in the proportion of one ounce to two gallons of water. If the sulphide is properly dissolved, and the under side of the leaves thoroughly sprayed with it, the rust spores will be exterminated and the rust will be prevented from spreading. Chas. H. Totty.

FERTILIZER FOR MUMS.

Kindly advise me in what proportions phosphoric acid should be used on chrysanthemums at their present stage of development. I note that in his treatise on the chrysanthemum Arthur Herrington recommends its use. My plants are healthy looking, but the stems are not as heavy as they should be, and I should like to develop them.

F. C. C.—La.

Ground bone or bone meal is the best and safest source for phosphoric acid, but its application at the present stage of growth would be of little benefit to your plants, as the phosphoric acid would only become available as plant food upon the decay and dissolution of the bone, too late to materially aid the present crop.

Quicker action would follow the use of acid phosphate or superphosphate, which you should be able to procure from a local dealer in fertilizers. Apply at the rate of one pound to fifty square feet of ground, and water in. Probably at their present stage of development the best feeding you could give the chrysanthemums would be liquid manure from a solution of cow or sheep manure, or a good surface dressing of pulverized sheep manure watered in. A. H.

BADLY INFESTED WITH THRIPS.

I enclose a few chrysanthemum leaves. Will you be so kind as to tell me what the disease is and what to do to get rid of it? It is extremely destructive and discouraging.

M. E. G. M.—Pa.

The leaves submitted had no organic disease, so far as I could see, but were badly infested with thrips, which were responsible for their condition. Individually the thrips are so small that they can hardly be seen except with a magnifying glass, but their industry must rival that of the fabled one-armed man with the hives, for they ruin many fine houses of chrysanthemums every year, working in conjunction with the spiders, red, black and yellow, which are also found on the under side of the leaves. As the chrysanthemums grow and the spraying of each separate plant becomes more difficult, these insects establish homes under the foliage and multiply with incredible rapidity. Before the grower is aware of it, his plants are in danger of being eaten up by these pests.

The best remedy I know of is cold water, applied on the under side of the leaves by means of one of the sprayer nozzles intended for the purpose. These nozzles direct a strong spray upward, washing the leaves without getting the soil too wet. It is a good idea to use this sprayer once a week, whether any insects are visible or not, and thoroughly wash the plants. If this treatment is persisted in now, before the buds are swelling, and if the plants can be absolutely clean when cool weather comes and spraying is not possible, it will save much lurid language and vain regrets.

Chas. H. Totty.

SHADE DELAYED BUDS.

We have a bed of 640 October Frost, which were planted May 31 about seven inches apart each way. Some of them had two shoots to the plant; the others were pinched out as soon as they were well set in the beds, or in about two weeks. The house was shaded about June 25 with air-slaked lime.

A good coat of manure was spaded into the bed before planting. Since then we have applied a light dose of bone meal June 19, a light mulch of well rotted manure to keep the top soil from baking, and August 10 a heavy mulch of manure, about one inch thick.

With the exception of a few crown buds taken about August 17, no buds appeared until after September 1, and they are all terminals. The plants are six and seven feet high. We should like to know why the buds are so late.

W. F. H.—Md.

It is by no means unusual for October Frost to make a long growth without throwing buds. This predilection has been increased by shading the house, encouraging the soft growth you speak of. Why some men feel they have to shade the mum houses, I have never been able to determine. When the plants are set out, instead of being shaded, they should be kept as light as possible and given all the ventilation possible, with tops, sides and doors open. Then the growth made will be short-jointed and stocky, and, in most cases, the plants will throw the buds at the proper time.

All other conditions being equal, if W. F. H. had grown his mums without any shade, he would not now be lamenting having only terminal buds.

C. H. Totty.

FUNGOID DISEASE ON MUMS.

I am sending under separate cover a few chrysanthemum leaves. They are attacked by a disease every year, causing death to some plants and loss of foliage in the tops of nearly all the plants. Is it an attack of leaf-miner or a fungoid disease? What should I do to be rid of the trouble?

W. R.—Ky.

The trouble is not leaf-miner, but a fungoid disease, caused, in part, by the hot, moist weather we have been having and by the fact that the plants are growing too closely, preventing proper admission of light and air through the rows. This fungus first appears as brown spots on the surface of the leaf, and gradually spreads until the whole leaf turns yellow. It is different from rust, because rust, while it appears in brown spots, is raised above the surface of the leaf and emits spores like brown powder, which can be rubbed off on the fingers. Spores of the leaf-spot are not so conspicuous, although they appear in great numbers. Leaf-spot will spread rapidly through the whole house if conditions are favorable for its development. The best remedy for fungoid disease is to pick off the affected leaves as far as possible without injuring the plant or destroying its appearance. Then spray the plants on the under side of the leaves with Bordeaux mixture, Fungine or any other solution containing sulphur. This spraying will kill the spores and prevent the disease from spreading. The atmosphere of the house should be kept as dry as possible, and the plants tied so as to secure light and air through the rows. When the plant makes a natural ripening of the leaves due to the wood hardening, it does no harm, for this natural hardening occurs only where the plants have been set out early, and consequently are making a hard stem. This is easily distinguished from leaf-spot.

HYACINTHS FOR CHRISTMAS.

For several years Dutch bulb growers have been devoting considerable attention to the preparation of hyacinths for early forcing, by submitting them to treatment which will bring them into bloom at or before Christmas. The bulbs are lifted early, before the leaves have died off, and are then kept for two or three weeks in a temperature of about 80 degrees. The treatment varies for the different varieties; some of the early-flowering sorts are best suited by a rather lower temperature and do not need quite so long a period of treatment, but the late varieties, as a rule, require a high temperature and a protracted stay in the hot room. In fact, each variety has to be made the subject of special study, and to be treated in exact accordance with its requirements. The least inaccuracy of observation might lead to failure, which partly explains why the treatment is not yet of general application. After the expiration of the warm period the bulbs are removed to a cool place, where they remain until the end of August or beginning of September, when the bulbs are potted.

The exhibition of prepared bulbs held at Haarlem, Holland, in December was the fourth show of its kind and proved to be a remarkable advance on any of its predecessors. Hyacinths were shown bearing as fine flowers as is usual in March.

A few varieties have always been acknowledged to be excellent for early forcing, even without special treatment, such as L'Innocence and General Pelissier. Since the special treatment has been discovered, however, several varieties have come to the front which had for years been neglected. In the light of the results of the recent show the best white hyacinth is considered to be Arentine Arendsen. It has a large, round spike, with well-arranged, plump, snow-white bells. L'Innocence was also in first-rate condition, and other good whites were Hein Roozen, La Grandesse and Christmas White. Among shades of carmine General Pelissier was of the deepest color, other excellent flowers being Garibaldi, a glowing carmine, and Mrs. Stanley, almost the same color. Charles Dickens was the best pale pink, Lady Derby was a good bright pink, Victor Emmanuel a deep rose, Nimrod soft rose, and Maria Cornelia rosy-white. Of the early blues Bismarck was the best, the color being clear and the spike large and well shaped. Grand Lilas, Schotel, and Captain Boyton were all fine porcelain blue varieties. It is thought that in the course of time growers will be able to offer bulbs prepared for early flowering with some assurance of success.

William F. Snyder's Seedling Peppers and Geranium.

SNYDER'S SEEDLING PEPPER.

A variety of ornamental pepper that is a decided advance on the celestial pepper in size and quantity of fruit or berries is announced by Wm. F. Snyder, of Hopkinsville, Ky. It is a seedling of the celestial pepper. For the benefit of Review readers, Mr. Snyder has sent a photograph of the original plant and several smaller ones, which is reproduced herewith. In regard to them Mr. Snyder says:

"The large plant in the center is the original, a seedling of the celestial pepper, and out-fruits it two to one. The plant is almost covered with the bright red fruit. The large plant, which is just eighteen inches high, has 182 ripe berries, many green berries of various sizes and a number of blossoms. The smaller sizes, in 4-inch pots, have ripe berries in proportion. The fruit stands out above the foliage, as may be seen in the illustration. Above the large plant is a branch of the celestial pepper, which affords a comparison of the size of the fruits." Mr. Snyder plans to disseminate his new pepper in the spring of 1916.

In the center of the foreground is a promising seedling geranium raised by Mr. Snyder. It is of the zonale type, and is described by him as quite dwarf and a profuse bloomer. The petals are almost white, with a decided ring of scarlet around a scarlet eye. It is well adapted for bordering beds of taller varieties, particularly Michel or other scarlets. According to Mr. Snyder, the old plant, in an 8-inch pot, at one time this summer bore twenty-seven umbels of open flowers, which almost covered the plant. Plants in 2½-inch pots frequently have three and four umbels. Not any of the leading varieties grown by Mr. Snyder compare with it in blooming qualities, he says.

Legislation and Legal Decisions

LICENSE FOR FLOWER VENDERS.

A test case, relative to street and doorway flower peddlers operating without a state license, was brought into court August 10 at Lynn, Mass. An itinerant vender of flowers, Harry Feinzig, of Boston, was arrested by the board of control, which was desirous of securing a ruling on this matter. H. Feinzig was prosecuted and found guilty of violating the laws regulating itinerant venders. He was not fined, but his conviction is intended to stand as a warning to others who set up temporary flower stands for the sale of flowers.

Since early spring many persons have set up street and doorway stands and sold flowers. The florists of Lynn contended that this business was of a temporary and transient nature, and required a state license. They carried their complaints to the board of control, and secured the ruling in this test case, which, it is expected, will free the trade from competition of this kind.

INJURY TO STOCK BY FUMES.

The Louisiana Supreme court has recognized the right of a florist or nurseryman to recover damages for injury to growing stock caused by fumes emitted from nearby factories. In the case in which the decision was handed down, the court affirmed a judgment in favor of a florist for the destruction of his plants by fumes which the wind had blown from the defendant's fertilizer factory. It was found that the florist sustained his right to recover damages by showing that at the time his plants were destroyed, the defendant's factory was freely emitting fumes, gases and acids, which were capable of destroying plant life, and that the wind was blowing the fumes toward his premises, some 900 feet away, and that there was no other known agency of destruction existing in the neighborhood. S.

PLANTS FOR CARPET BEDDING.

I expect to plant some fancy-lettered beds next season and I am taking the liberty of asking you for a few hints on the subject. What plants are the best to use? Do you think alternantheras are good for the purpose? Also, what varieties bring out the most pleasing contrasts? J. H. M.—Can.

In the way of foliage plants I would recommend Alternanthera aurea nana, golden yellow; A. brilliantissima, red and yellow; A. Jewel, red shading to crimson, yellow markings; A. paronychioides, dwarf habit, crimson and red, shaded green; alyssum, dwarf white; Alyssum Little Gem, pure white; Echeveria secunda glauca, fine for edgings or letterings; Lobelia Emperor William, dark blue; Santolina chamæcyparissus, silvery gray foliage. With alternanthera this will need some pinching or clipping through the growing season.

In the way of plants which flower persistently, any of the dwarf fibrous-rooted begonias of the Erfordii type are good, as is B. Gloire de Chatelaine. Pink and scarlet are the most decided colors in these begonias. For a blue flower one of the dwarf ageratums, like Stella Gurney, would do well in your latitude. C. W.

CUTTING BACK SNAPDRAGONS.

When is the proper time to cut back snapdragons so as to have them in bloom around the holidays? They are budding now, but not heavily.
P. H. S.—Ill.

This is a difficult question to answer. If the plants were propagated from cuttings and have been topped but once, I would advise breaking back all forward shoots. If they are seedling plants, I would let them come. Where blooms are desired in December, it is best to time your plants. Take cuttings in May or sow seed in June.
G. S. Ramsburg.

REPOTTING POINSETTIAS.

I have a number of poinsettia plants, about two feet in height, with two or three branches. They are thrifty plants in 4-inch pots. I should like to know whether the plants should be repotted into 6-inch pots. If I take cuttings now, will the plants put out new growth so as to be in bloom for Christmas, or will they be too late in blooming? A. H.—Va.

It is now too late to put in cuttings of poinsettias. The plants from which you took the tops would make feeble breaks and the bracts would be small. Shift your plants from 4-inch to 6-inch pots. Do not let them get too much potbound before doing so. Use a soil consisting of three parts of good fibrous loam, well decayed, and one part well rotted manure. Cow manure is the best. Give your plants a night temperature not lower than 60 degrees after the bracts show; then they will be well expanded for Christmas.
C. W.

WHEN TO PLANT CLEMATIS.

Will you please tell me when to plant clematis, and also if I should take cuttings or plant seeds? I took cuttings in the spring and did not succeed in getting them rooted. I shall appreciate any information. J. F. R.—Ill.

Spring is the best time to plant clematis. I presume you refer to C. paniculata, although there are a number of other hardy varieties in cultivation. This clematis seeds abundantly and is propagated from seed. Sow the seeds when ripe and carry them over in a coldframe or greenhouse. Usually they will not germinate until the following summer. If grown in nursery rows for a couple of years, the plants are quite strong. I have never had any success in planting clematis in the fall.

From Real Life.

Female Patron: One of my goldfish disappeared from the bowl last night. What could have happened to it?

Wise Florist: Did you look on the floor near the bowl?

F. P. (on the telephone an hour later): Oh, I just called up to tell you I found the poor little fish in the carpet sweeter. K. & G.

Customers' Logic.

A young man entered a flower store, seemingly regardless of a sign, "Fresh Paint," that hung on the woodwork. Discovering his trousers besmeared a fresh green, he indignantly began to "bawl out" the florist.

"It's your own fault," exclaimed the florist. "Didn't you see that sign, 'Fresh Paint'?"

"Of course I did," was the peevish reply, "but I didn't believe it."

"Why shouldn't you believe it?" demanded the florist.

"I thought it was like the sign, 'Fresh Flowers,' on those roses I bought the last time I was in here."
Sprinkleproof Sam.

An Awk'id Moment.

She: "Oh, do be keerful! You trod right on me corns."

He: "Sorry. Why do you grow such things?"

She: "I grows 'em for a 'obby, same as some grows orchids and such things."

Why Florists Enlist.

A woman carrying a large market basket and a pair of shears came to the greenhouse one day and said: "My brother-in-law is dead, and I want to get some flowers."

"What do you desire?" said I. "A bouquet or a piece?"

"Oh, just loose flowers. I expect to make my own piece, a Masonic design. I will sew the flowers on pastboard."

"All right, I can let you have some loose flowers."

"I brought my basket and shears along, and I will just help myself. You have lots of flowers."

"We always do our own cutting. About what amount do you want?"

"A quarter's worth, anyway. And please charge it."

Copies of the final premium list have been mailed to all members of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, American Rose Society and American Carnation Society, together with several hundred names not included in the membership of these organizations.

The advertising committee, represented by George Bate, reported that 2,000 pennants to use on automobiles and 2,500 window cards will be ready for distribution about October 11. His committee also will have 100,000 poster stamps. These will be used on every flower box and delivery made by the 100 members of the Cleveland Florists' Club during the next thirty days.

M. A. Vinson, secretary of the general committee, has returned from New York. As a result of his trip, twelve new firms are included in the list of exhibitors. He called on John Canning, at Ardsley, N. Y., and arranged for shipment of his large chrysanthemum plants to Cleveland.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

The J. R. Bather Co., of Clinton, Ia., has been enjoying good business. The sale of bulbs has started promisingly.

Andrew Bather, of Clinton, pointed to two large posters in his window, facsimiles of telegrams sent to Washington and St. Louis, and said his association with the F. T. D. was a most profitable one. He says business was never better.

The Alpha Floral Co., of Des Moines, Ia., is busy with decorations and funeral pieces.

Advertising has brought gratifying returns to the Wilson Floral Co., of Des Moines. That it pays to advertise is now an established fact with this concern—providing the right goods back the advertising.

The Iowa Seed Co., of Des Moines, has an original and striking display window representing the arrival of a trainload of bulbs. The bulbs used are the real thing.

Louis Henderson, of Omaha, Neb., says things are running smoothly at his store in the new Hotel Fontenelle. The handsome shop is the pride of Mrs. Henderson, who takes charge while Mr. Henderson attends to the decorative and outside work.

Hess & Swoboda, of Omaha, are cutting early chrysanthemums, of which they are making distinctive displays. Their store will be one of the sights during Carnival week.

Samuel Stewart, of Omaha, is sending such dahlias, delphiniums and the like to Stewart's Seed Store that one seems to be "way down east."

C. H. Frey, Lincoln, Neb., as usual, is right up to the minute with well grown stock, in anticipation of a banner season for practically all lines.

Roy Wilcox, of J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Council Bluffs, Ia., was on an extended visit to Canada. H. W. Voss, the store manager, reports excellent business prospects and plenty of stock.

Frank Stuppy, of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., went gunning for redheads without success, but he secured another kind of redbird. In other words, he stopped off at Lincoln, Neb., and saw the great scarlet Carnation Nebraska, at the C. H. Frey store. That Mr. Stuppy thought favorably of the Nebraska is shown by the fact that he secured all the plants he could find room for. The windows of the Stuppy store contain cattleyas of rich shades. Beauties of surprisingly clean foliage and clear color reflect the extra care taken in growing them this season. Monrovia is a good mum and sells well.

STEVIAS IN THE FIELD.

I have stevia plants in the field with seventy-five to 100 shoots on them, and they are from three to four feet high. Can I cut them back without hurting them? Please let me know what to do.

J. E. M.—Mo.

It is now rather late to cut back stevias. The last pinch should not be given later than August 1. Lift them carefully, tie the plant around with twine and try to get some earth with the roots. Shade for a few days and spray freely. Later place in a cool greenhouse.

C. W.

Aurora, Ill.—The Aurora Greenhouse Co. is building two greenhouses, 28x150, to house the large cyclamen stocks. F. C. Shaefer is manager of the concern.

Waterloo, Ia.—In the recent industrial parade on Homecoming day three florists were represented by decorated automobiles. That of Charles Sherwood was elaborately trimmed with red and yellow dahlias, with plants and greens, and won first prize. The Kemble Greenhouses featured Boston ferns on their float and made a distinct impression. The car of Gall way Bros. also was tastefully decorated.

OBITUARY

Matthew Macnair.

Matthew Macnair, one of the oldest and best known retail florists in Providence, R. I., and the proprietor and founder of the business conducted at 322 Weybosset street, under the name of the Sunshine Shop, died suddenly September 29, in front of the Beneficent Congregational church, only a short distance from his store. He was in his seventy-first year.

Mr. Macnair had just left his store and was walking down the street with his son, Charles Macnair, who has been associated with him in business for several years, when he suddenly became ill and would have dropped to the pavement but for the sustaining arm of his son, who caught him as he was falling. He died almost instantly.

Mr. Macnair was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1845, and in his younger days became especially proficient in mill work and textiles. He arrived in New York in 1870, where he was employed for several years in the wholesale woolen trade. Removing to Providence, he engaged in the manufacturing jewelry business until about twenty-five years ago, when he opened a retail flower store on Westminster street, but he removed about three years later to 322 Weybosset street, where he built up a large trade as the Sunshine Shop. About five years ago he opened a second store at 2 Broad street, corner of Chestnut street, within a block of his other place.

He was of a cheerful disposition and made many friends, both inside and outside the trade. He was a member of several business organizations, including the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, besides being prominently identified with the Beneficent Congregational church. Musically inclined all his days, he knew many Scotch songs and always spoke happily of his associations with Beecher's choir in Brooklyn. He traveled extensively in Europe and returned only a few months ago from an extended stay in the old country. He is survived by his wife and two sons, Charles and Thomas Macnair, and five brothers and two sisters. The business will be continued.

W. H. M.

Clinton, Ind.—Herman G. Hershey has finished rebuilding his two greenhouses. All outside walls were made of concrete, and the size of each house enlarged to 18x105 feet. The boiler shed also has been rebuilt.

Eureka, Kan.—L. Vanhaverbeke, proprietor of the Eureka Greenhouses, deserves to be classed among the veterans. He has been in the business thirty-eight years. His training was obtained in France, Germany and Holland.

Detroit, Mich.—Fred Breitmeyer, of Mt. Clemens, exhibited at the salesroom of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange this week several blooms of a new pink rose which is a sport of the popular variety, Ophelia. The color is a beautiful shell pink. Mr. Breitmeyer has worked up a nice stock of the variety and is figuring on sending the variety out to the trade another season.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.
Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1915: President, Patrick Welch, Boston; vice president, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo

Officers for 1916: President, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; vice-president, R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex. Secretary and treasurer as before.

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

TRAVELING salesmen returning from the west report excellent business, the recent improvement being especially marked on the Pacific coast.

IN spite of the fact that the petty swindle has been reported dozens of times, florists still hand strangers cash change for bad checks.

THAT old-time favorite, Livistona rotundifolia, the fan palm, is coming back into popularity. Perhaps, then, some day there will be call again for Latania Borbonica.

THE Christmas supply of ruscus will cost more than last year, both the bleached stock and the dye coming higher, but at the same time the quality averages better than before.

THE woods are full of men with little hammers who use them constantly. Most of us, however, prefer the man who carries a big stick but who uses it only on rare occasions.

THE first 1916 calendar to reach The Review probably will hold the season's record for size and beauty. It came, October 6, from A. W. Warren, Corry, Pa. The subject is Traver's "The Rose Girl," done in colors.

THE old-time practice of enclosing a stamp when one asks a question by mail seems to have fallen into what Grover Cleveland called innocuous desuetude—at least most of those who ask The Review for "an immediate reply by mail" are in too big a hurry to remember the stamp.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

THREE YEARS.

Hughes, H. M., Norristown, Pa.
Hoffacker, Carl, Elizabeth, N. J.

TWO YEARS.

Gillham, B. A., Rockford, Ia.
Loeffler & Benke, Watertown, Wis.
Henderson, J. L., Uniontown, Pa.
Henry, F. L., Watseka, Ill.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

WHAT THEY DO.

Regularly, week after week, The Reciew contains between 1,600 and 1,700 separate advertisements. Some of them merely are cards calculated to keep the advertiser's full name and address where the trade can find them, but the majority are written with the idea of pulling direct mail orders. And that they do it is shown by the receipt of many such letters as the following three, which were all in one mail:

Please discontinue my ad, as everything is sold. It certainly pays to advertise in The Review.—James Clelland, Grove City, Pa., October 2, 1915.

We shall have to ask you to omit our pelargonium advertisement until we catch up with the orders.—Hartford City Floral Co., Hartford City, Ind., October 4, 1915.

Please discontinue our advertisement of carnations for the season. We have had large orders resulting from this advertisement and are well satisfied with the returns.—Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill., October 4, 1915.

It would pay specially well, if you have the stock, to list items in the Classified Department that are not already listed there.

SEASON STARTING FINELY.

We all should take much pleasure in the way the autumn season has opened during the last fortnight. In pleasing contrast to a year ago, everything now seems bright and promising. The latter part of September brought a marked increase in business in many sections, and the first few days of October have seen a trade revival little short of marvelous.

Conditions a year ago were sadly disturbed; everyone was in a pessimistic frame of mind, and this included the trade itself as well as those who buy plants and flowers. Today quite an opposite condition is apparent. Business is decidedly improved in nearly all lines of activity, and florists of all degrees, and almost everywhere, are doing far better than a year ago; indeed, there are many who find business today even better than it was two years ago, which means that it is the best in the history of the trade.

In the grain states business has been good right along; there is no change today. The manufacturing centers began to feel a trade revival some months ago and the autumn finds business picking up in the sections hardest hit by the depression coincident with the war. Florists in the manufacturing cities of the east are doing well. In the cotton states confidence has returned and the people are buying flowers. On the Pacific coast florists are doing well, much better than at any time in the last year, and the production of stock there still is considerably below the demand. The improvement is general in all departments of the trade, and there is every prospect of a banner season.

NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER.

Weekly weather forecast, issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., for the week beginning Wednesday, October 6, 1915:

For the Region of the Great Lakes—There will be showers October 6 or 7 in the upper lake region, with rising temperature, and October 7 or 8 in the lower lake region, followed by generally fair weather during the remainder of the week. The showers will be accompanied by rising temperature and will be followed by falling temperature.

For the Upper Mississippi Valley and Plains States—Showers and higher temperatures October 6 or 7 will be followed by generally fair weather during the remainder of the week, with seasonable temperatures.

For the Ohio Valley and Tennessee—Cool and frosty weather October 6 will be followed by rising temperature for a day or two, and again by a moderate fall during the latter half of the week. The weather will be generally fair, although local rains are possible October 7 or 8.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The latter part of last week business was unusually good, with a short, stiff market and demand strong. The opening of this week was not so auspicious, but with the same conditions as to supply and a sharpening of the weather, which continued bright, demand quickly recovered. Quality, quite naturally, is wonderfully improved. The fact that the St. Louis market was too short to supply the wants attendant on the Veiled Prophet celebration resulted in some excellent orders being placed on the Chicago market.

Beauties are decidedly scarce and are clearing accordingly, regardless of quality or length of stem. Other roses are equally scarce, especially the pink varieties, and are generally moved as soon as they are graded. While buyers find it necessary to be on the market early to fill their wants to their liking, they have the advantage of selecting from stock of the first quality.

Although receipts of carnations are much heavier, the supply is short of the demand and wholesalers experience no difficulty in moving them at a good price. Asters have receded so far into the background that they no longer strike the eye. Dahlias and gladioli have ceased to be a feature of the market. Gardenias are in somewhat better supply and enjoy a better call than usual. Easter lilies are in strong demand and remarkably short supply, most of the growers laying off until after the deluge of chrysanthemums, which proverbially makes a bad market for lilies, only this time there is a hiatus instead of the usual overlapping of crops. Rubrums sell well. Valley is again short of the demand. The growers are realizing that to keep valley in good demand, they must not plant too many pips. Orchids are sufficient for the demand.

The chrysanthemum situation remains uncertain. The first batches of early mums continue to dribble into the market, while the second batches have not yet made their appearance. True enough, there are a few Chrysolora, and a dozen or so of Pacific Supreme, but the bulk of the receipts is Golden Glow, Smith's Advance and October Frost. While there is some excellent stock to be had, quantities of inferior mums find their way to the market, and tnis fact does not improve the demand. Single violets are available, but doubles are later than usual in putting in an appearance.

Greens continue to move in a most satisfactory manner.

September Business.

September can be set down as a good month; not better, perhaps, than the Septembers of early days, although then the volume was much smaller, but distinctly better than a year ago. The latter part of the month, after the heat wave that set the summer's high record September 14, was especially good. The market was well supplied with stock, on the whole, and for the movement at better prices than a year ago or at any time in recent months the strength of the out-of-town demand must have credit. The country trade seems to wake up earlier than the city trade. Taking it by and large, growers and wholesalers are well pleased with September and will ask nothing better than a corresponding business improvement in the months to come.

The Big Fall Show.

Robert R. Brenton, of Kennicott Bros. Co., has been appointed by the executive committee to the office of director of press publicity for the Chicago Grand Floral Festival, to be held in the Coliseum from November 9 to 14. The publicity committee states:

"At the regular meeting of the Chicago Grand Floral Festival executive committee, held at the Morrison hotel September 30, much progress was made with flower show business, those in attendance being A. Henderson, W. N.

MUM IS THE WORD.

In fact, the last word, the Flower of the hour.

"October and November are the Chrysanthemum months, you know that," said the old man as he stood by the door to his private office surveying the store. The buyer and store manager stood at his elbow, all attention, awaiting his words of wisdom.

"Yes, sir," he went on, turning to the buyer, "you know the Mum season is on, but have you looked over the Chicago Market to see where you can best get the kind of stock you want, at all times? It does not pay to buy from one House one week and another the next."

"Why, any good House handles Chrysanthemums," said the buyer with a smile.

"Certainly, my boy, but consider a moment. No matter what grade of stock you buy, you can't sell Mums really at a cheap price. You must get at least a dollar a dozen, to make it pay, even if you sell short stemmed seconds. Do you get the point?" turning to the store manager. "How is the average person, who asks for or will take Mums, dressed?"

"Well, I should say, usually very well, richly and in style," replied the Manager.

"That's just it, and a lot of them roll up in their limousines, too. A Chrysanthemum is not, can not be a poor man's flower." He turned to the buyer. "So you must be certain that you always get stock that is of the best quality.

"There are, no doubt, many places where sometimes you can get a fine grade of stock, most times a good grade of stock, but there is one House from which you may be certain that you will always get the kind of stock that will please the purchaser who wants, and is willing to pay for, the best—and that House is Kennicott Bros. Company, The House of Quality Plus, 163 No. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

"That House handles more MUMS, and to my mind, better Mums, than any other House on the Chicago Market."

The old man stood with his hand on the door knob and waited for the force of his remarks to reach home, then he faced the two and said in a now that's settled tone of voice, "Safety first, boys. As Mums are for the best trade, always get Kennicott's Quality Cuts, then you can be certain that there is not another store in town that has finer stock."

Rudd, W. J. Keimel, August Poehlmann, Peter Reinberg, N. P. Miller, George Asmus, H. B. Kennicott, August Koch and Robert Brenton.

"N. J. Wietor was elected vice-chairman of the ways, means and audit committee. E. F. Kurowski was appointed chairman of the reception committee. Payne Jennings was named as chairman of the retail florists' committee. Robert Brenton was designated as chairman of the special features committee. A. Henderson, George Asmus and N. P. Miller were made a committee of management.

"Chairman Brenton has many novel attractions in preparation for this exhibition and it now seems certain these special features will draw large audiences. Chairman Keimel promises an unusually interesting series of lectures, along popular lines, with stereopticon pictures. Chairman Vaughan, of the poster committee, reports the poster, now in the hands of the lithographer, will be ready on or before October 20. August Koch, of the west side parks, was elected chief of the information bureau.

"Guy W. French, of French & Salm, has been appointed superintendent of the show."

September Weather.

From a weather point of view, as it affects trade interests, September was eventful only in the fact that it was the first month since April with a temperature above the seasonal normal, and the only one during the entire year in which a maximum temperature of 90 degrees was reached. The average temperature actually exceeded that of the previous month of August. The rainfall was fairly well distributed and more abundant than usual. The percentage of sunshine was fifty-five, as compared with the normal sixty-four per cent.

Various Notes.

The Masonic Temple again has a flower store, opened October 2, as the Red Bud Flower & Sweet Shop. The announcement, in the form of a tasteful booklet telling the language of flowers, was quite attractive with a red rose bud, symbolic of the name, embossed on the cover. The proprietors are W. A. Walters, formerly manager of the Mitchell Street Floral Co., of Milwaukee, and C. H. Lampo, who conducts the confectionery end of the venture.

Business conditions are much better than a year ago, in the opinion of A. T. Pyfer, who says city trade has shown much improvement in the last few days.

The amalgamation banquet of the Chicago Florists' Club and the Cook County Florists' Association will be given at Hotel La Salle, October 7, at 8 o'clock. An excellent program has

That his azaleas are on the way from Belgium, via Holland, is the word received by Peter Pearson, who reports business good in all lines this fall.

One of the most interesting of local establishments is the water lily garden of George Schwing, at Fifty-seventh and Rockwell streets. Not only is the collection one of the largest and finest in the country, but Mr. Schwing is credited with a more thorough knowledge of the subject than anyone in this section of the country. His flowers are in such request that the retailers who want them go to his place for them. They have been a feature of the window displays of Lange and Mangel this summer.

September was not only better than a year ago, according to Felix Reichling, manager of Peter Reinberg's wholesale store, but was better than September in 1913, or 1912, and October starts at an even better pace.

After a trip of six weeks on the Pacific coast, Robert Newcomb, of the W. W. Barnard Co., is in town for a few days. He reports booking a fine line of business.

According to Erne & Klingel, the first violets of the season came from Park Ridge September 8, but it was not until this week that shipments assumed any size. Thus far no double violets have arrived from the east.

When seen at Kyle & Foerster's, October 4, Frank Schramm said he was indulging in a day's vacation now that his two big Foley houses at Crystal Lake are all planted up for the season. He has built two iron frame houses, each 40x225, and planted them with carnations, chrysanthemums and sweet peas. He expects to begin shipments about November 1.

Adam Zender, who is a director of the Holton & Hunkel Co., was in Milwaukee last week on one of his periodical trips.

The dyeing department of the A. L. Randall Co., occupying the third floor at 72 and 74 East Randolph street, is working night and day on ruscus and raffia. The latter is a specialty, little handled by florists, of which the concern sells great quantities, principally to school supply stores.

As a result of the announcement made in The Review by the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., a number of parties made up of growers of Chicago and vicinity have made trips to Joliet for the purpose of seeing the new scarlet carnation, Aviator. One of these parties consisted of Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, and Walter Amling and Martin Amling, both of Maywood. Speaking of Aviator, Allie Zech says it is undoubtedly one of the best carnations ever put out. There are varieties with larger flowers, but nothing that he has seen can compare with it in prolificness.

The latter part of last week, John Kruchten, of the John Kruchten Co., was in and about Milwaukee on business. According to C. L. Sherer, shipping business is unusually good.

E. C. Amling does not come to the store on Sundays, so that this year he will miss the annual felicitations that are extended October 10, when his desk usually is decorated and his friends wish him many happy returns of the day. He will be 47.

The wife of H. C. Mulder, proprietor of the University Florist, 1121 East Fifty-fifth street, is quite ill. As near as can be ascertained, she is suffering from a complication of nervous disorders.

Although moving and entertaining do not usually go together, C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, seems to be making a success of both. During the last week he has been busy moving the wholesale house from 133

North Wabash avenue to 178 North Wabash avenue and at the same time he has been entertaining at his home in Hinsdale friends from California. The night of October 4 he and Mrs. Washburn entertained the Sunday Evening Club of Hinsdale. Between these two lines of activity, Mr. Washburn has demonstrated that he can do on as little sleep as could Napoleon.

Practically all florists, both retail and wholesale, are looking forward with keen interest to the days following the first heavy frost. For Philip Schupp, of J. A. Budlong, these days hold, not only the realization of increasingly better business, but the opportunity of again indulging his passion for hunting relics of a prehistoric age. For after the frosts come the prairie fires, and after them comes Schupp.

The erection of a conservatory in the rear of his store and the construction of a mezzanine floor in the display room will soon add to the attractive features of the establishment of John Mangel, 17 East Monroe street.

Local hoodlumism is blamed by Nick Monsen, 3640 Fullerton avenue, for the destruction of a plate glass window in his establishment September 30.

It pays, in the opinion of C. S. Clausen, to be able to supply novelties along with standard stock. In the case of the gladiolus, in which he is principally interested, he says many buyers sought the novelties he offered this summer and even in the height of the glut paid better than the average price for his standard sorts, just because the newer kinds were included at the same price.

A branch store has been opened at 3842 Broadway by the Briggs Floral Co.

The ideal weather of October 3 was not allowed to pass by A. L. Vaughan without a tribute. Piloted by his daughter, Thelma, he spent the day in the country. Mr. Vaughan reports the volume of business his house is doing as highly satisfactory for the time of the year.

The installation of a heating plant in his new greenhouse in Evanston is now keeping A. E. Hunt well occupied.

A severe attack of neuralgia placed David D. P. Roy on the sick list for a few days last week.

Since the present activities of the executive committee of the flower show began, August Poehlmann spends a good share of his time in his automobile on the road between Chicago and Morton Grove.

A meeting of the directors of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association will be held October 12, at 176 North Michigan avenue.

Visitors.

The two new roses of Weiland & Risch, Champ Weiland and Feamma, received a visit in their Evanston home from Robert C. Smallwood, of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., October 4. On his return to the city salesroom some samples of the Feamma were discussed. This is a true pink in color, and has a fragrance closely resembling that of the old La France. It is a free bloomer and several who have seen it think it is destined to take the place of Killarney as an all-around rose.

Among the week's visitors was Marion W. Uhlschmidt, with Grimm & Gorly, East St. Louis, who arrived October 4 and remained in the city two days. Mr. Uhlschmidt was here on a buying trip, as the St. Louis market was cleaned out by the Veiled Prophet celebration. He said many complimentary things of the Chicago market, both as to its size and the quality of its service.

One of last week's callers at The Review office was Harry A. Barnard, representing Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, Enfield, England, who is on his annual three months' trip to call on American buyers of orchids, roses, palms, cyclamens, Manetti stocks, etc. He says he has found business just fair this trip, buyers still taking hold cautiously.

Mrs. Charles D. Bradley, of the Bradley Flower Shop, Fort Wayne, Ind., has been looking over the Chicago market while visiting relatives here.

The Market.

The cut flower market is in a sensitive condition and showed discouragingly the effects of a three days' rain last week. Fortunately for the trade, however, shipments were lighter and most of the arrivals were disposed of at satisfactory prices.

Chrysanthemums have arrived earlier than usual and, already in good variety, they are seen in the stores and windows of every wholesaler. There are plenty of Golden Glow, Smith's Advance, Dinda's new pink seedling and some choice Polly Rose, Monrovia and Chrysolora. A dozen more varieties will doubtless be added to this list before the end of the week. The indications are for the largest receipts of mums ever known in the New York market. A few sold last week as high as $3 per dozen. These were Chrysolora. Some excellent stock of other varieties was offered at from $2 down to 50 cents.

The dahlia market, after the dahlia show ended, absorbed readily every flower of size, novelty and quality that arrived. Some extra fine stock sold as high as $3 per hundred. Callas are here again, and also plenty of tritomas, daisies and large, splendidly colored heads of Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora. Valley sold up to $3 and $4 last week and down to $1, for the low grades. Shipments are increasing. Lilium longiflorum touched 8 cents occasionally; 6 cents was the steady asking price for the selected flowers. The supply is lighter.

Gardenias are here again and improving daily, the price for the best being $1.50 per dozen. Single violets, Herrick, arrived last week and the first sales were at 30 cents per hundred. They are small and, as yet, unattractive. The long dry spell and excessive heat have delayed the doubles badly.

Orchids continue heavily in excess of demand and quotations reflect the large daily receipts. It was seldom last week that more than 25 cents was asked for the choicest flowers. I saw quantities sold as low as $10 per hundred. There are thousands of flowers in the greenhouses of the orchid growers, ready for market.

Carnations are improving in size and quality. A few flowers have moved up into the $2 and $3 classes. But the majority, so far, sell at from 50 cents to $1.50 per hundred. This week will doubtless see the last of asters and gladioli. The new roses continue to improve in bud, in stem and in color, and prices are slowly advancing. Short-stemmed roses may still be had in thousand lots as low as 75 cents, and some at 50 cents per hundred. The specialties and novelties are constantly advancing in public appreciation, as the windows of the leading retailers indicate. Mock is especially good, and Shawyer and American Beauties are bringing better prices for the selected flowers—as high at times as $20 per hundred. This week opened clear and cooler. Better business from now on seems to be anticipated by all.

October 6.—The market had a surprise at the opening of the present week, for receipts were light, there was a good increase in demand and almost everything cleaned up. Monday, October 4, was the best day the market has had in a long time. Valley has turned scarce and can not always be had, even if 4 cents to 5 cents is offered. Good carnations brought $3 per hundred early this week and roses were sold out. Lilies were 8 cents and scarce. Good mums brought from $1 to $2 per dozen. Altogether, Twenty-eighth street and Twenty-sixth street and the "Halfway House" are encouragingly optimistic.

There will be a display of the new mums and roses, a lecture and something novel in the commercial department. The average attendance at the meetings this year has been the largest in the history of the club.

The tenth annual dahlia show at Orange, N. J., took place October 4. Ideal weather prevailed, and the flowers were up to the usual high standard. The Oyster Bay Horticultural Society held its show October 5 and 6. Glen Cove, N. Y., has an exhibition October 7.

Now that the weather has become seasonable, the plant auctions are drawing larger crowds and many enterprising retailers are taking advantage of the opportunity for stocking up with decorative palms for the winter season.

The Market.

The market is gradually becoming the reverse of what it was several weeks ago. Instead of being compelled to throw everything into the waste barrels, the florists now find that their customers are glad to get what is on hand. The recent cool weather has destroyed nearly all outdoor stock, with the result that the market has tightened up. There are a few asters on the market and they meet with a great demand. Gladioli are also to be seen, but of poor quality. Dahlias are scarce. There is a large call for carnations, but few are to be had. Easter lilies are becoming scarce, but there is a fair market for them. A few of the local growers are sending in chrysanthemums, but in general these are a scarce article. Valley is in great demand. Though roses are plentiful, the market is not overstocked with them. The best sellers are Hoosier Beauty, Killarney, Ward and Sunburst. Retail trade has been more brisk than usual, although there is still room for improvement.

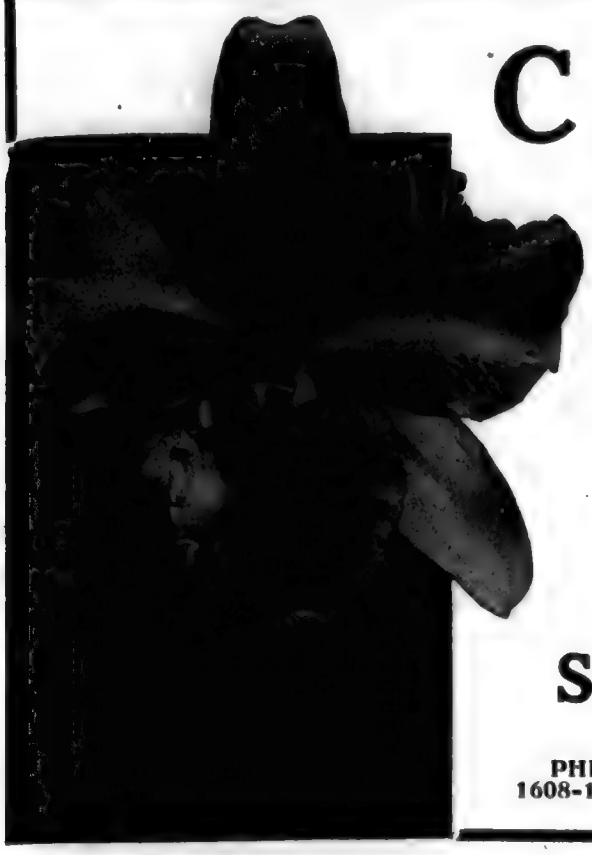
The Market.

Robert Crawford, Jr., is fond of saying that when chrysanthemums come, everything sells. This is certainly the case this season. Chrysanthemums have arrived in variety and in much larger quantities than usual so early in the season. They are selling and everything else is in demand. Better still, the market compares favorably with the first week of October of a year ago and, better still, expert judges are predicting a good season. This is what my critics are fond of calling one of those dreadfully optimistic reports, but I think they will admit it is fair.



The dahlia is the ruling flower of the day. Such fancy varieties as Bertha von Suttner and Crystal are selling at fancy prices in hundred lots; also Geisha Girl, in smaller quantities. The average price on good, ordinary dahlias is better than a week ago and they are marketed in goodly numbers. Tint of Gold, October Frost, Pacific Supreme, Glory of Pacific and Unaka have been added to the list of chrysanthemums, although Golden Glow is still the leader in the yellows and white Smith's Advance is second. Orchids continue plentiful. The debutante teas and other entertainments create an outlet for many of the chrysanthemums, though at low figures. Beauties, Russells and all the fancy and standard roses are in demand when well grown; white is in demand in any condition. The supply is not large, but the quality is improving. Bouvardias, pansies, daisies and single violets are here in moderate numbers. Carnations improve slowly. Easter lilies are selling exceptionally well. Valley is in favor. Well colored oak foliage has succeeded gum. Cosmos is plentiful; sweet peas are scarce.

Current Events.

An exceedingly neatly prepared notice of the Florists' Club meeting, held in Horticultural hall, on the evening of October 5, marked the opening of the new year, the thirtieth in the club's history. A facsimile of the blue and white club button graced the top of the sheet. Then followed the list of officers, the announcement of the speaker of the evening, the election of officers and some other matters of club interest. The notice closed with the plans of the entertainment committee and a well worded appeal on behalf of the treasurer. So potent a magnet drew a large attendance to greet the gifted L. K. Peacock, of Berlin, N. J., who spoke on dahlias, especially those varieties valuable for cut flowers. There was a magnificent exhibit of dahlias from the Peacock Dahlia Farms, including two choice baskets of these charming fall flowers arranged by Pennock Bros. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, George Burton; vice-president, John C. Gracey; secretary, David Rust; treasurer, George Craig. After the business meeting, the members were entertained by the officers of the club.

A goodly crop of retail flower stores has sprung up in the city with the opening of the fall season. The Colonial Flower Shop is the name given by Albert Saxer to his new venture at Frankford, which is starting auspiciously. Jacob Wilhelm, the well known grower of Logan, has opened a retail store at 4903 North Broad street. Frank Philips, who has had experience in England, is trying his luck at 428 South Fifty-second street, West Philadelphia, while Tissell the Florist is the name on the new retail shop at 1722 North Broad street. Add to these the Charles H. Grakelow place at Broad and Cumberland streets and you have a goodly array.

Leo Niessen calls attention to the large number of small roses available for the debutante teas this fall—a number larger than at any time in the past. Sweetheart we have had for several seasons; then there is George Elger and Old Gold, all in the polyantha class. Irish Fireflame and Afterglow give rich colors in the singles. All these varieties appeal to those of refined tastes, but they do not quite satisfy anyone who is bent on getting the largest flowers possible.

In the Plant Houses.

"When you have time, will you not come down to Norwood? It will only take you twenty minutes." This invitation from Robert Craig was an honor for which time must be taken, so the 12:37 was boarded for Norwood one afternoon last week. It took just twenty minutes, with a couple added to reach the greenhouses. There a bright-looking young man introduced himself simply: "I am Van. Mr. Craig has gone away with Mr. O'Mara and Mr. Henderson." This was Cornelius Van der Bregg, in charge of the Robert Craig Co. place at Norwood. A moment later, Antoine Leuthy, of Boston, appeared. So we three toured the houses happily.

The crotons are the glory of Norwood. This fall their color is wondrously brilliant. Varieties like Robert Craig and Norwood Beauty are pictures of highly colored foliage that one remembers. Reidii, that troublesome variety, is in fine shape. You know, when a New York retailer wants to find the caliber of a croton grower he asks for Reidii. Anyone who is not in Class A, Section 1, tries to avoid the issue on Reidii; it is an unusually difficult croton to grow. Here it is, however, in good shape and, with it, many more, both standards and seedlings. There is everything in crotons, from the little peach suitable for baskets to the immense specimen made up in tubs, suitable for a place where size is no disadvantage. The dracænas are beginning to color, for while the croton gets its color in summer, the dracæna colors in fall. There are great numbers of the popular varieties, such as Massangeana and terminalis, and a smaller number of the rarer varieties. Areca lutescens in the medium sizes occupies a whole house, while a number of foliage specialties fill a smaller house.

The gem of the Christmas plant section is the cyclamen. There are three large houses completely filled with magnificent plants of this sterling favorite. The larger sizes are especially well filled and well grown. Poinsettias and begonias are a feature of the place;

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business in general showed some improvement last week. There has been an increased demand all around and the market is again showing some life. There has been no killing frost as yet, but stock is moving nicely.

Roses arrived in greater quantities last week and the demand for them has been strong; in fact, so strong that there was a shortage in this stock. The cut from new plants is larger every day and the crop is in fine condition. Killarney seems to be the only variety that is in sufficient supply to take care of the orders. Carnations are coming in heavily and are in fine shape. The demand for this stock is large, and difficulty is experienced in filling all orders. There still are a few asters on the market, but they are moving slowly. The crop is just about gone for this year. Chrysanthemums are coming in rather slowly, but the stock received is good. It cleans up every day.

Lilies are rather scarce, as there has been a large call for them. The market was sold out daily last week. Valley is extremely scarce. The crop is off at present, and as the demand is heavy, there is none of this stock to be had except early in the morning. The first violets of the season were shown last week. There were shipments from Watertown, Wis., and from the Heitman-Oestreicher Co. From present indications, this fall is going to be fine for business and should surpass former years if conditions remain normal.

Various Notes.

John Kruchten, of Chicago, was in town September 30 and October 1, accompanied by Mrs. Kruchten. They visited relatives and friends, and Mr. Kruchten spent some time among his friends in the trade.

Adam Zender, of Rogers Park, Chicago, was the guest of F. H. Holton last week. During Mr. Zender's stay in Milwaukee a party, including F. H. Holton, H. V. Hunkel, N. Zweifel and Mr. Zender, made a trip to Sheboygan, where they visited the greenhouse range of J. E. Matthewson.

Louis Bauscher, of the Freeport Floral Co., Freeport, Ill., was in Milwaukee September 30. Mr. Bauscher is thinking of opening a store in this city if a suitable location can be obtained.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The storms that did so much damage in the Gulf cities last week reached Tennessee, but here they were no more than heavy rains. The ground is well soaked and if frost holds off a few more weeks, there should be an unusually heavy fall growth of bulbs and shrubbery. Cannas are blooming better than at any time this season. Occasional lilacs are opening their spring bloom. Dahlias are reveling in the cool, damp weather and have never averaged so large and so well colored. They are selling well. The last planting of gladioli is blooming at present and the flowers seem to be the best of the year.

Carnations are obtainable in quantities in this city at present. Roses are almost a glut in the market and the quality is good. There is a much larger percentage of the newer varieties, such as Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty, than in previous years. The local growers seem not to be afraid to go in for the new things.

Chrysanthemums are beginning to come in to add to the general oversupply of flowers. But prices are good and the sales about normal for the season. Everyone seems to feel that business will soon be good enough to clean up the heavy supply, but all are looking forward to the first good frost with longing of heart. Outdoor chrysanthemums are opening now and there are some good ones in the private gardens. The early singles seem to be the favorites.

The counter trade in Dutch bulbs is starting off well. It is surprising how many bulbs this city consumes each season, especially when it is remembered that they live for years here and increase rapidly. It might be supposed that they would soon be so common that the demand would cease.

Various Notes.

The Joy Floral Co. is selling some good chrysanthemums this week. The company recently installed a refrigerating plant and does not hesitate to say that the expense is less than for the old iceboxes.

McIntyre Bros. are again at the front with their high grade carnations. They certainly know how to grow carnations.

Hillcrest School Farm reports a heavy bulb business this fall. The farm already has moved more than half as many bulbs as were sold last season and the season has hardly opened.

Geny Bros. are installing a refrigerating plant this week. They have been cutting good mums and have done a good business the last two or three weeks. F. B.

Hicksville, O.—Charles W. Seibert has just completed a new Moninger greenhouse 30x95.

KANSAS CITY.

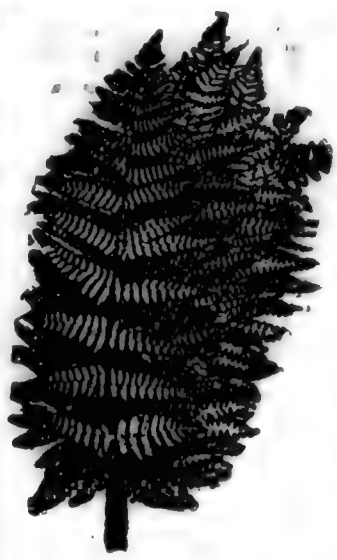
The Market.

Business was good in all lines last week, although the fashion show had little effect in the florists' line except for corsage bouquet work. It did not make up for the difference in the cost of window displays, however. A traveling salesman from a large eastern concern said the windows were the best he ever saw anywhere.

The American Royal Livestock and Horse Show is being held this week, which means that many yellow mums will be disposed of.

Funeral work has been unusually heavy, while other lines have increased also. Flowers are coming in freely and the demand increases accordingly. Carnations have been in heavy demand and not enough of them available. In the last week they have improved wonderfully in firmness. Dahlias are still plentiful and of better quality than at any time this summer. Roses are more plentiful and prices on them are rising. Chrysanthemums were more numerous last week and from the looks of the greenhouses there will be plenty of them from now on. They are of good quality.

Various Notes.



Samuel Murray reports a heavy run of funeral work all last week. His window for fashion show week was artistic.

The Elmhurst Landscape & Nursery Co., which makes a specialty of summer cut flowers for florists, is bringing in some of the finest dahlias that have ever been seen in this market. Its gladioli this summer were of the same quality, having as high as twelve to fifteen flowers to the spike at one time.

W. J. Barnes has his greenhouses in good shape, considering the amount of remodeling he has done. He has about 800 good cyclamen plants, ranging from 4-inch to 8-inch, which look especially well. His begonias and other Christmas stock are also in fine condition.

JONES, The Holly Wreath Man, MILTON, DEL.

Floral Co., while trying to avert a collision with a motorcycle last week, was thrown from his automobile, and is suffering from a broken collar bone as a result of the accident.

C. H. Hartman, a nurseryman, was badly cut and bruised when a street car struck his motorcycle and knocked him to the pavement. The mishap occurred October 3.

The George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. reports a heavy out-of-town business. The company will have a big lot of mums from its greenhouses from now on.

John Stevens says that he cannot cut enough carnations. The demand for them has been the strongest he ever has had at this time of year. He supplies 2,000 a day to one firm alone.

T. J. Noll & Co. report that consignments arriving are heavier, but that they go as fast as they come in. The demand is heavy for any flower that is good.

Visitors in this city last week were Walter Mott, representing Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works; E. C. Pruner, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co.; Robert Newcomb, representing the W. W. Barnard Co. W. J. B.

SOME NEWPORT ESTATES.

At the estate of Mrs. H. D. Auchincloss, at Newport, R. I., where John Mahan has charge, the flower gardens are extensive and contain many attractive features. The new rose garden, the trained fruit trees, the outdoor grounds and the greenhouses, all are full of interest, but the extensive and tastefully planted rock garden is the great feature. Real rock and alpine plants are grown, not coarse-growing annuals and perennials, such as are seen in so many so-called rock gardens.

The fine new estate of Commodore James, where Joseph Greatorex is superintendent, covers about sixty-nine

GREEN GOODS

For just ten years we have been handling DECORATIVE EVERGREENS and selling both wholesale and retail, but we positively will not sell any more greens in a retail way. We are right in the woods where Galax, Ferns, Leucothoe, Rhododendron, Kalmia, Hemlock, etc., grow. We deal directly with the pickers of these goods and therefore are in position to do a wholesale business, and we know that so long as we cater to the retail trade we have no right to expect business from the wholesale dealers, and experience has convinced us that the wholesale trade is worth the most to us, and we beg to advise that we are prepared to take care of orders for prompt or future delivery, and respectfully solicit a share of your patronage.

acres. The location is magnificent and the ocean views are superb. The Italian garden of blue and white flowers was beautiful. The rock gardening is well done. The roof of one of the greenhouses was pink with dipladenia flowers. An extensive new rose garden, planted with hybrid teas, both dwarfs and standards, was completed last spring.

Daniel Hay, at Mrs. French Vanderbilt's, has a fine garden covering five acres, for vegetables and flowers for cutting. In the greenhouses geraniums, chrysanthemums, orchids, roses and gardenias are chiefly grown. Gladioli here were fine. Sweet peas on bamboos nine feet high were still blooming well.

At Mrs. Thomas J. Emery's a beautiful new rose garden was added this season; also a new bowling green and vegetable garden. Among the many hybrid tea roses, Chateau de Clos Vougeot, rich crimson, and Willowmere, rich coppery apricot suffused with rose, were fine. The flower gardens, lawns and shrubberies here are extensive and well planted. In the greenhouses I noted two divisions of grapes; also one house containing nectarines and peaches in pots and another one planted with tomatoes. A. J. Dorward has charge of this interesting estate.

At E. J. Berwind's, on Bellevue avenue, a new sunken garden, entirely planted with beds of the scarlet Begonia Erfordii, with temples and fountains of marble, was added this year. The extensive lawns here are in as nearly perfect condition as it is possible to have them in America. Constant mowing, rolling and weeding, with an abundance of water, are necessary for this. There are many beautiful box edgings here, in perfect condition, and large numbers of big specimen boxes that were planted over twenty-five years ago; also great numbers of specimen bays, privets, retinosporas, etc. This estate is kept up in princely style. In the greenhouses I noted a fine batch of Amaryllis Belladonna in flower. Bruce Butterton has charge of this estate.

W. N. C.

Wichita, Kan.—The Ross Bros. Seed Co. and H. J. Hansen have donated prizes to the Wichita fair and exposition, which will be held October 4 to 14.

New Orleans, La.—Max Scheinuk has added a shop and four greenhouses to his establishment this summer. He is growing 10,000 Mrs. H. Robinson chrysanthemums and has a fine lot of poinsettias. Mr. Scheinuk has several thousand ferns ready for the market.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Henry Morris has acquired an interest in the establishment formerly conducted by the Pierce-Christian Co., and is doing business under the name of Henry Morris, manager. It is likely that the name will be changed later to Syracuse Floral Shop. Mr. Morris has been in business here for many years.

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received----------	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders--------	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florists's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,
F. H. Weber

The Market.

Steady cool weather, with the fact that most people have returned from their vacations, has had a tendency to improve business and, though the season has not yet fully opened, many retail florists report better trade. Some still find it rather quiet. Collections are reported slow by quite a number.

The social season has not yet opened. When it does there will doubtless be quite a noticeable increase in the retail trade. There is a moderate amount of funeral work at present, an occasional wedding and a slowly increasing counter trade. The growers almost without exception have fine stocks of plants. If prices are fair and they can dispose of all their output, they look forward to a prosperous year.

Carnations have been blooming some for three or four weeks, but not profusely, and the first flowers were of poor quality. Within a short time there will be an abundance of the finest of blooms. Each week sees more chrysanthemums in the market and the quality is improving. It is too early yet for the high-grade blooms or for large quantities of the flowers. Growers in and about Newark will be able to supply good stock in large quantities as soon as the chrysanthemum season really arrives. Orchids are more plentiful and of good quality. Roses are fair for this time of the year, and sufficient in quantity to supply present needs. Some fine Easter lilies are

In many cities where we have no members we would like to have the address of at least the most reliable Retailer.

BOSTON.

The Market.

It is pleasing to be able to note a great improvement in trade. There has been a striking advance in prices and a good general clean-up has taken place. The continued cool weather and the passing of outdoor flowers, added to an improved demand due to weddings and other functions, have been stimulating factors. The rose market is vastly improved. October 1 was the best day the rose salesmen had experienced for months, and the prices averaged double those of October 1, 1914. American Beauties make from $20 to $35 per hundred, with short grades from $4 to $10, and a good demand. For Ophelia, Mock, Hadley, Russell, Killarney Queen, Hoosier Beauty and Sunburst the demand has vastly improved, while for the older standard sorts even the short stems easily make $2 per hundred.

Carnations have greatly improved. The demand for white has been especially good. Select flowers make $3; other grades, $1 and $2. The quality is steadily improving. A fair number of single violets are coming in. Golden Glow and Smith's Advance are practically the only mums so far, but other sorts are due this week. Valley is selling better; so are lilies. Gladioli and asters are nearing the end. The best flowers of the latter are grown under glass. These realize good prices. Cosmos, dahlias and snapdragons sell a little better. There is now an abundant supply of Cattleya labiata. Prices on the best flowers are down to $4 per dozen. A large crop of Oncidium Rogersii is available. For asparagus and ferns the demand has improved. Plant trade is improving. Nice cyclamens, ericas and Lorraine begonias are now seen at the stores, with an abundance of fine foliage plants.

Various Notes.

Wheeler & Co., of Waban, are the largest growers of orchids exclusively in the vicinity of Boston. They have 5,000 plants of Cattleya labiata, which is their leading cattleya. Hundreds of blooms were open on these October 1. Several thousand C. Trianæ are grown, and smaller lots of C. Mossiæ, C. Gaskelliana and C. Harrisoniæ. Oncidium Rogersii and O. tigrinum carried quantities of spikes. Dendrobium formosum giganteum is largely grown and does splendidly. As many as a dozen flowers were seen on a number of growths. D. Phalænopsis is also well liked here and is preferred to Schrœderiana. One division is devoted to Calanthe Veitchii, and one house, with a large tank down the center, to Phalænopsis amabilis and Schilleriana. All the orchids are in splendid condition, and they reflect great credit on John Mutch, the able manager.

Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, returned October 1 from a two months' transcontinental trip. Mr. Christensen is a keen observer and, as his horticultural knowledge is extensive, he can talk most entertainingly of his trip. After visiting Niagara he went to Chicago, where the establishment of Poehlmann Bros. Co. and the parks were inspected. Later he went to Denver and made several side trips from there. The alpine flora on Mount Corona was wonderfully beautiful. Salt Lake City,

Twenty-five years catering to the retail trade.

Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, San Francisco, Pasadena, Los Angeles, San Diego, the Yosemite valley, the Yellowstone National park and many other points were visited. The return journey was made by Arizona, New Mexico and Texas, a short trip being made to Mexico. Stop-offs were made at El Paso and Houston. Several establishments in and around Philadelphia and New York were inspected on the way home.

The Budlong Rose Co. reports business vastly improved. Especially fine with this firm now are Ophelia, Mock, Stanley, Sunburst and Shawyer. Francis Scott Key sells well. Of Russell they have a large house just coming in.

Penn made a mammoth horseshoe, twelve feet high and six feet across, September 30, which was presented by 3,000 citizens of Fitchburg, Mass., to Pat Moran, of the Philadelphia National baseball team, then playing in Boston. The flowers used were scarlet dahlias, 2,500 in number. October 1 they had an immense number of baskets and other flower arrangements for Geraldine Farrar's opening in Carmen, at Symphony hall.

P. J. Donahoe completed sixteen years in the rose selling business October 1. Mr. Donahoe is one of the widest known rose salesmen in the east and handles only first-class flowers. His Beauties, from the Scarboro greenhouses of Pierson Bros., are always fine. He also handles the entire output of the Montgomery Co., Hadley, Mass. The Russells are superb. Ophelia also is fine, and Hadley is coming along in great shape. October 1 was one of the best rose days Mr. Donahoe had for a long time.

McAlpine Bros., Exeter, N. H., are getting some nice flowers of Taft, Double White Killarney, Ophelia, Sunburst, Killarney Queen, Hoosier Beauty and Ward, in addition to their specialty, Black Beauty.

The annual fruit and vegetable show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, held October 2 and 3, was an excellent one, the quality being unusually good. The Blue Hill Nurseries staged a fine bank of herbaceous perennials, including some excellent asters and seedling phloxes.

P. & W. O. Jahn, of East Bridgewater, are shipping to W. H. Carr a fine assortment of carnations. Enchantress Supreme sells remarkably well. Other good sorts are Benora, Pink Delight, Matchless, White Enchantress and Beacon.

Fred L. Sly, of South Stoughton, has been shipping in single violets for a couple of weeks. Both his singles and doubles are looking well.

William R. Morris, of Wellesley Hills, is sending in fine shipments of Ophelia, Richmond, Killarney and White Killarney roses. He has other varieties which will soon be in season.

The directors of the Boston Flower Exchange have declared to stockholders an annual dividend of fifteen per cent. The annual meeting will be held October 23.

The Houghton-Gorney Co. had attractive displays of orchids and dahlias in the windows October 2.

Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, still finds Queen a profitable white carnation to grow. He had no trouble in getting $3 per hundred for them October 2. Alice and Matchless are each doing well with him.

From the Mishawum Flower Co. some fine Smith's Advance and Golden Glow mums are coming in. Thomas Roland, of Nahant, is also sending in the same varieties.

Eureka carnation proves profitable with A. H. Knight, of Shrewsbury. Benora, Matchless, Pink Delight and Enchantress are his other leaders.

The Market.

At present we are enjoying delightful fall weather and, because of it, business showed some improvement last week. A good killing frost is needed before steady business can be recorded.

In the wholesale market many roses are coming in daily, of all varieties and much improved in quality, especially Russell and Hadley. Ophelia is much improved in color and stem. These, when extra fancy, clean up well. Killarney, Ward and Richmond form the bulk of the rose stock.

Carnations are becoming more abundant and their quality is much improved, but the bulk of them are short of stem. The fancies clean up at $2 per hundred. Enchantress, Ward and Beacon are in the majority. Violets are becoming more numerous and are showing better quality because of the cooler weather. They sell well. Some extra good valley and Easter lilies can be had at any time.

Among the outdoor flowers, there still are many asters, cosmos, dahlias, gladioli and tuberoses. There seems to be a good call for all of these; they are used by the retailers for window displays. Mums are increasing in quantity and some good blooms are coming in. Smilax, asparagus and adiantum have good daily sales.

Various Notes.

There will be no flower show here this fall. As the Henry Shaw prizes of $500 are available for flower shows held in this city, an effort will be made by the committee in charge of the meeting of the American Carnation Society to have these prizes offered at this meeting and exhibition, which takes place January 26 and 27, 1916. This committee, of which J. F. Ammann is chairman, will, at the St. Louis Florists' Club meeting next week, name all subcommittees in its report.

M. F. Widmer, of Highland, Ill., spent a day here last week. Mr. Widmer reported that he had cut back all his roses except Ophelia, of which he is cutting splendid blooms. All his surplus stock is consigned to this market and handled by C. A. Kuehn.

Charles Meyer, of Kirkwood, is finishing several new houses. When the houses are completed Mr. Meyer will be one of the largest growers of Kirkwood.

Last week Robert Newcomb made his first business visit to this city as the representative of W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago. Arnold Ringier, secretary of that company, accompanied Mr. Newcomb.

Horace Lloyd, head of the Shackelford Nursery Co., on the St. Charles rock road, informs me that he has bought 100 feet of ground adjoining the nursery, which will be planted with young nursery stock this fall.

B. Lechner, of the firm of Lechner Bros., bulb importers of Webster Groves, Mo., says that all of their importations of Dutch bulbs have arrived. The force has been busy filling the bulb orders.

E. L. Rogers, manufacturer of florists' wire designs, has moved his wire shop to 212 North Fifteenth street, which is closer to the wholesale district.

Several of the Belleville florists were in town last week. They reported that trade was satisfactory. E. W. Guy will leave next week for Chicago, where he will be engaged in Masonic work for a week.

meeting of the American Carnation Society next January.

Harry Young & Son, who have a retail establishment on Maryland avenue, have finished remodeling their store and have everything in shape for the fall season.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its last outdoor meeting of the year at the home of its president, Jules Bourdet, at 2 p. m., October 14. It is expected that 100 members will attend the meeting.

The street fair of the South Broadway Merchants' Association this week should result in good business for Oscar Heile and the Diemer Floral Co., who have handsome stores along the route of the big carnival.

Kirkwood, the home of a score of growers, is the oldest suburb of St. Louis. Last week it celebrated its fiftieth birthday with a big parade and barbecue, in which the florists took a prominent part. Luther Armstrong, the oldest inhabitant of Kirkwood, having lived there for seventy years, was especially honored by the florists. Mr. Armstrong is a charter member of the Society of American Florists and the St. Louis Florists' Club. J. J. B.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The weekly report shows that business has been good, indeed. The weather has been considerably cooler and stock is in much better condition. There is the promise of a few good October weddings, but the smaller social functions have barely commenced. Stock is plentiful. American Beauties are good, both in color and foliage, and sell fairly well. Other roses, such as Hoosier Beauty, Ophelia, Sunburst and Ward, continue to be favorites. Francis Scott Key is much sought after. Easter lilies are plentiful and have sold well. Callas are slowing up and are small. Valley is exceptionally fine, but the demand is not large. Gladioli are not extra good and few are seen in the market. Carnations are improving a little, but still have short stems and small blooms, and consequently meet with a small demand. Asters are slackening; there are a few good ones on the market, but the majority are small. Buddleias are fine, but do not move well. There is a fair supply of cattleyas, and the call for them has been good. Gardenias are scarce. The stock also includes pansies, coreopsis, Shasta daisies and mignonette.

There are practically no blooming plants in the market except primulas and outdoor begonias, which have been repotted. The supply of greens meets all demands. An unusual quantity of ferns has been sold during the week.

Various Notes.

John House has been confined to his home for the last two weeks, suffering from a badly strained ankle, but is getting around again.

Richard Roe, of H. E. Wilson's, has started on an automobile trip to Brockville, Ont. He will also visit Ottawa.

George T. Boucher's window presents an autumn-like appearance. Hanging from the pergola are numerous hardy hydrangea blossoms, while below is a splendid collection of ferns, with two large vases of chrysanthemums. A large cibotium makes an elegant background.

Visitors last week included Mrs. F. Higinbotham, of Victor, N. Y.; C. McCarthy, of P. L. Carbone's, Boston; Thomas Knight, of Knight & Struck Co., New York; P. M. Phillips, of S. A. Weller, dealer in jardinieres and pottery, Boston, and C. M. Archer, of the Roseville Pottery Co., Zanesville, O.

A display that attracted unusual interest was seen in the window of the Rochester Floral Co. last week. In addition to the usual lattice, a large arch of candytuft was made, with the flowers all in test tubes. Hanging from the arch were large quantities of yellow silk ribbon. Yellow mats covered the bottom of the window, on which were gracefully arranged several baskets of yellow chrysanthemums. A jardiniere stand, with a vase filled with yellow and white chrysanthemums, completed the arrangement.

Milton Selinka, of Schloss Bros., New York, visited the trade last week, showing an extensive line of fall novelties. He reports business good.

Charles W. Curtis, of Irondequoit, N. Y., is bringing in some excellent Philadelphia carnations. The color is exceptionally fine and the stems are good. His Delights are also fine.

A new yellow auto delivery car has been added to the equipment of H. E. Wilson.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE St. Louis Seed Co., St. Louis, reports the arrival of six boxes of flower seeds from Erfurt, Germany, via parcel post.

THE giganteum bulbs are due any day now. Advices from Japan indicate that there will be no surplus of the 1915 crop.

UNLESS all signs fail, the 1916 seed catalogues will show a quite general tendency to return to the simple life. Nobody is saying much about it, but a lot of hard thinking is being done over the question of cost of books. The use of fine paper, big cuts and costly printing has, in the view of many, quite possibly been overdone. Larger editions of less expensive books may be in order.

THE pickle packers, who have had rather short crops for several years, have not fared so badly this season as was at first thought likely. While many patches were lost because of excessive rainfall, quantities of stock came to the salting vats in late September, after the season usually is over. Yields run from 200 bushels per acre down to nothing. One man with 90,000 bushels in brine estimates the average yield as ninety to 100 bushels per acre. In Michigan the harvest has been above the average.

JOHN C. LEONARD, vice-president of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, has returned from a tour of the Michigan cucumber sections, and reports that of the best grade there is not more than half a crop. As a result of the shortage, cucumber seed will in all probability advance in price. The report is brought from Kentucky by A. H. Smith that the acreage of onion sets in that part of the country was unusually small. The yield, however, is quite good for the number of pounds planted. The total output, though, is so small that it will cut no figure with the Chicago market.

THE board of directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League will meet at New York October 7, the object being, according to Secretary Landreth, "to consider the subject of the alarming shortages in seed supplies, both at home and abroad. The meeting will be attended only by members of the board, the deliberations subsequently being made public to all members of the league and to such other seed establishments as work in harmony with it." "It so happens this autumn," adds Mr. Landreth, "that, while the shortage is calamitous in many articles of seed, it is at the same time serious in nearly everything."

AFTER November 1 the Shugart & Ouren Seed Co., of Council Bluffs, Ia., will be known as the Ouren Seed Co. The decision to change the corporate name was reached at a recent stockholders' meeting, when the capital stock was increased to $100,000, which is double the former capitalization. Mr. Shugart, who was identified with the company for many years, retired five years ago and the present stockholders deemed it advisable to drop his name from the title. The officers of the company are: President, C. G. Ouren; vice-president, F. R. Davis; sec-

THERE are considerable quantities of 1914 giganteum lily bulbs still in cold storage.

LOCAL frosts October 4, in the middle-western states, did some damage to sweet corn and vine seeds.

If all the candidum bulbs offered as "north of France" actually came from there it must be a more peaceful region than cable reports would lead one to suppose.

The seed stores that handle Dutch bulbs nearly all report an unusually good opening of the season. One ordinarily expects little demand for bulbs until frost has killed the soft stock in the summer beds.

HASSLACH MAKES DEFENSE.

With reference to the recent reports of the arrest of several seedsmen at St. Remy de Provence, France, charged with trading with the enemy via Switzerland, Jacques Hasslach, resenting the implication that he is a German, has issued the following statement: "I, Jacques Hasslach, seed grower at St. Remy de Provence, am a Swiss, native of Schaffhause, Switzerland. My family, father, grandfather, were all Swiss. I am living in the south of France since thirty-two years, constantly in the seed trade. I am a naturalized French citizen, not freshly, but for nine years, and have even been applied to for service at the military camp at Marseilles a few years ago. The seeds I sent out to neutral countries were authorized by license of the French minister of war and the minister of finance."

Three "Superfine" New Spencers for 1916

An Average Spray of "FIERY CROSS" reproduced from a Fordhook Photograph

"Fiery Cross"

"Fiery Cross" is a most appropriate name for a most unusual novelty. During the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, when Scotland was continually at war, the method employed by the chiefs to gather the clans to repel invaders was by means of a fiery cross, which was taken from hamlet to hamlet by the speediest man available. The fiery cross was simply a blazing pine branch.

"Fiery Cross" has all the appearance of live fire, the color being a scorching fire-red, or scarlet, without any shading and which scintillates and glitters in bright sunlight, thus adding a glowing, fire-like sheen which radiates over the flower. Unlike most of the orange-scarlet varieties, it does not scorch or burn even during extended periods of intense sunshine, therefore it can be grown in all soils without shading. The beautifully waved and fluted flowers are borne freely in threes and fours, well placed on long stout stems.

"Fiery Cross" was recommended for the Silver Medal variety of National Sweet Pea Society of England, July, 1914, which was awarded July, 1915. It received an Award of Merit at the exhibition held by the American Sweet Pea Society at the San Francisco Fair, June 10, 1915, as being the outstanding variety in the Show. Also Certificate of Merit at the Sweet Pea Exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, June 23, 1915; and Silver Medal at the Seventh Annual Exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, Newport, R. I., July 15, 1915.

Prices for "Fiery Cross" Sweet Pea

In sealed packets containing ten seeds each: Per pkt., 25c; $2.00 per dozen pkts.; $13.75 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 packets or more, $12.50 per 100 pkts.

☞ If 500 or more packets are ordered at one time and it is so requested, we shall print on the packets the name and address of the purchaser and supply free an electrotype of either the spray or single flower.

"The President"

This will compete with "Fiery Cross" as the greatest novelty of the year. It is wonderfully brilliant, in fact it might be termed a glowing scarlet self. The flowers are of largest size, carried on strong, stiff stems, usually in fours, always beautifully waved even when well expanded and most harmoniously placed. It has been termed "the brightest color we have in sweet peas" and does not burn. "It is head and shoulders above anything of a similar color" and probably will never be surpassed in the orange-scarlet section. We were awarded Certificate of Merit for "The President" by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, June 23, 1915, also by the American Sweet Pea Society at Newport, R. I., July 15, 1915, and have pleasure now in introducing this unusual novelty, simultaneously with our friends Messrs. Alex. Dickson & Son, the celebrated Rosarians, of Belfast, Ireland.

Prices for "The President" Sweet Pea

In sealed packets containing ten seeds each: Per pkt., 25c; $2.00 per dozen pkts.; $13.75 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 packets or more, $12.50 per 100 pkts.

New Spencer Hilary Christy

We were much pleased with this beautiful and distinct novelty in 1914 in the Essex cultures of our friend, Mr. Hugh Dickson, then President of the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain. The trial at Fordhook the past season has also been most satisfactory and we have great pleasure in now first offering the seed in connection with the originator. The plants grow strongly, bloom profusely, bearing flowers of good size and true Spencer type. The standard is frosted orange-cerise with crenulated fiery edge, wings rosy carmine, keel delicate fawny lemon. Its rich though subdued colorings are very chaste and refined.

In sealed packets containing ten seeds each: Per pkt., 15c; 2 pkts. for 25c; $1.00 per dozen pkts.; $7.00 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 packets or more, $6.25 per 100 pkts.

In sealed packets containing twenty seeds each: Per pkt., 25c; 5 pkts. for $1.00; $2.00 per dozen pkts.; $13.75 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 packets or more, $12.50 per 100 pkts.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

The Farmer Seed & Nursery Co., of Faribault, Minn., reports great success with the new white Danish oats and the Golden Jewel and Silver Jewel Dent corn. These have passed the experimental stage and should prove valuable to eastern farmers.

A member of the Thompson Bros. Co., of Muscatine, Ia., who recently made a tour of the company's farm and neighboring farms, reports that the corn situation is a serious one. There has been too much rain. Timothy is running short in this section.

Charles Stewart, of Stewart's Seed Store, Omaha, Neb., says the local demand for seeds has increased so greatly that he has decided to give more attention to that branch of the business and drop decorative stock, handling cut flowers only. In remodeling the store, greater depth and frontage will greatly facilitate matters. The nursery will be retained, as orders for fall planting are beyond all expectations. This is attributed to the wet summer, which has given joy to owners of gardens, for such an abundance of flowers has not been seen for many years. Billy Sunday was here, pouring hot shot into what he terms the mildewed portion of humanity. Mr. Stewart commented that a certain insecticide accomplishes big results on fungcussed vegetation.

H. G. Windheim, manager of the Nebraska Seed Co., Omaha, says the prospect for an average yield of seed corn looks brighter because of the absence of frost. There may be a considerable percentage of small kernels. Trade has been good.

The Younkerman Seed Co., of Council Bluffs, Ia., predicts an extraordinary demand for both seed and poultry supplies next season, owing to the shortage of certain stocks and close buying for some time past.

Manager Chambers, of the Griswold Seed Co., Lincoln, Neb., is of the opinion that, following the war, there will be inquiries by European houses for many of the American varieties of grain, to replace the exhausted home stocks.

The Gunn Seed Co., Lincoln, is the latest addition to the list of seed houses. E. S. Gunn, proprietor, was for many years connected with the Griswold Seed Co. and is well known locally. Mr. Gunn is much encouraged by results so far.

The Chesmore-Eastlake Co., of St. Joseph, Mo., has had an excellent seed season. Mr. Chesmore is anxiously awaiting his bulb importations. M.

A BRITISH VIEW.

The Holland bulb growers seem to have learned a lesson last season, as there appears to be an effort to protect the American market, instead of cutting it out from under the feet of those who had placed advance orders, as was done by cheap offers last autumn. There is, of course, the disposition to sell the jobber, then the jobber's customers and, finally, the planter, but this is so large a country that even the efforts of something over 100 travelers from Holland and the appointment of numerous resident representatives has not served to seriously embarrass the large buyers; they still can sell.

LECHNER BROTHERS, WEBSTER GROVES, MO.

Agents for THE GROWERS' ASSOCIATION, Anna Paulowna, Holland

England may be had from the following extract from a British trade paper: "In the Times one day last week a Dutch firm, whose name is not unknown to British growers, had a whole page advertisement of bulbs. The advertisement was a bold venture and its appeal to the sympathy and generosity of the British public was strong. It is, however, hard lines on British growers and bulb merchants that the Hollanders should be making frantic efforts to secure our retail, as well as our wholesale trade. We stand in urgent need of every bit of business there may be, and it is rather beyond reason that the Hollanders should first stock our warehouses, and then strive to steal our customers. We are so easy-going that I suppose the most we shall do is to murmur that 'it's a bit too bad,' but really the home trade should take definite steps to show the Dutch growers that there is a place to draw a line. If Holland wants our wholesale orders we must be allowed to keep our own retail trade, and I consider we are much to blame if we permit it to be otherwise, because if the Dutchmen insist upon poaching upon our proper trading ground, we should stop buying Dutch bulbs altogether."

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

TROUBLE WITH CUCUMBERS.

Our cucumbers have been dying ever since we shifted them into 4-inch pots. The largest are now about eight feet high and we are losing more than ever. The soil in the houses was steamed before the plants were set, but the potting soil was not. I do not think the trouble is wilt, as we never have had this on the place. I have found bugs about a quarter of an inch long, which have a yellow back spotted with black. I think this bug stings or bites the plants, causing them to wither and die. I notice that in the houses where the bugs are most numerous, the most plants are dying. I have not been able to find anything to kill this bug. I have used arsenate of lead, Paris green, nicotine and smoke. Some of the plants begin to wilt at the top, others farther down, on the leaf part, and still others on a lateral. The roots are perfectly healthy. Can you suggest a remedy? C. O. P.—Ia.

The particular pest you describe I am not acquainted with. Inasmuch as your soil in the beds was all sterilized, any soil pests must have come in the potting soil. You do not say that this is a soil pest. I infer that it is something on the wing, as you call it a bug, and say that it stings the shoots, thus causing wilt. Poisonous substances, such as Paris green or arsenate of lead, while good for leaf-eating caterpillars, are useless against stinging insects, and probably a soapy spray, to kill by contact, would be futile. If, however, the bug flies, is something akin to the aphides, and can be hit by a spray of nicotine, soap or something similar, such a spray should kill the pests. It is well to remember, however, that cucumbers have tender foliage and a strong spray will scorch them.

The most certain way to destroy the pests would be to use hydrocyanic acid gas. A weak dose would undoubtedly kill the bugs, but in hot weather there is great danger of also injuring the plants. A weak, all-night exposure is what I should recommend as the most positive cure. The formula for using this gas has often been given in The Review. Remember that it is a most deadly gas and use the greatest care in applying it. C. W.

ARUNDO AND ERIANTHUS.

How long should the seed of Arundo Donax, Erianthus Ravennæ, etc., remain in greenhouse beds before germinating? I wish to grow a quantity from seed. I have had no success with these, although I have purchased seed of the best firms. C. S. M.—N. Y.

Give the arundo and erianthus a brisk, moist heat and there should be no trouble in germinating them within a few weeks if the seed is fresh. Erianthus, if sown in January or February, will flower the same season. The arundo is less certain to do so and, for that reason, it is usually propagated from pieces of stem. These, if laid on damp moss or sand in a hot, moist house, will send roots out at each joint. They can then be cut in pieces and potted. Why not get some stems and try the latter plan? C. W.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

There is decidedly more snap to the business in the retail stores this week. Transient trade is better, and patrons are returning from their summer haunts by sea or mountain. Society events always begin after Fashion week, and the cooler weather also makes for good trade. The shipping trade has improved for the same reasons, residents of Arizona, Nevada and other sections served by this center having returned and begun to buy flowers again. Flowers generally are hardening in price as well as quality, roses being better than for several weeks. The supply of all kinds is about the same as last reported, a few violets having appeared and more Cecile Brunner roses.

Various Notes.

Without making any invidious comparisons, it is safe to say that the Beverly Hills Nursery, presided over by J. J. Reeves, is unique in California. We have had plant "sharps" who go in strictly for botanical curiosities and others who try to raise exotic stock not suited to the climate or needed by the trade. But Mr. Reeves has a way of finding out whether or not a plant or tree is suitable for this section, and if it comes up to standard he grows it in large quantities. The result, as stated is a unique collection of the choicest trees and shrubs that will thrive in southern California. A noteworthy point in the enormous number of grafted conifers. Many of the best kinds vary so much from seed that it is unsafe to plant seedlings. Here the grafted stock comes in. Mr. Reeves has selected trees of true or improved types and he obtains his scions from these, grafting them on seedling or cutting stock of commoner kinds. A splendid block of beautifully colored Cedrus Deodara bears testimony to the wisdom of this selection, as well as many hundreds of retinosporas, thuyas, cupressus, pinus and others. Propagation is going on continually to keep up the large acreage demanded by the trade. The stock is to be seen in all sizes. Rare forms of deciduous and evergreen trees and shrubs are everywhere, one particularly distinct plant being a dwarf spreading diosma, more free in bloom and decidedly superior in every way to the old D. ericoides. Then Mr. Reeves has raised several beautiful little myrtles, almost as fine in foliage as a heath and clustering close to the soil. Acacias and eucalypti from Australia are also among the novelties, some so distinct that they are hardly recognized as belonging to either of these well known genera. The place, in short, is full of interest to the tree and shrub lover, and Mr. Reeves is deserving of the highest praise for the splendid results obtained.

O. C. Saakes and R. W. Saakes are the recipients of condolences from their many friends on the death of their mother last week in San Francisco. O. W. Saakes was already in the northern city and his brother set out immediately on the receipt of the sad news.

G. M. Bridgford, the well-known cut flower grower of Eagle Rock, says that the 1915 season is by far the best he has ever had, and he will add heavily to his plantings this year. This kind of thing is certainly refreshing in the face of the calamity howling that has been indulged in of late in certain places.

Henry W. Turner's grand rose, September Morn, is gaining ground among the growers and retailers, largely on account of its delicate perfume and long-lasting qualities. I noted some excellent flowers of it at Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson's this week, where it is a great favorite.

The 17-acre ranch of the Johanssen Seed Co., at El Monte, is looking fine. Oscar Johanssen, who has the management of this place, is surely death on weeds, for hardly a weed can be seen all over the ranch. Roguing has been thorough this year, resulting in extra true looking blocks of all the popular varieties as grown for seed. Zinnias are especially good, the mammoth scarlet, crimson and yellow being perfect in size, contour and rich, vivid coloring. Owing to the summer heat in this section, asters are hard to keep true to form, but anything showing a single center is ruthlessly culled out, with the result that seed is saved only from the best double forms in the individual strains. Phlox Drummondii and verbenas are two kinds largely grown here; also the finest types of candytuft, mignonette and the pretty Dianthus Heddewigii in variety. While this farm is not large as compared with the company's holdings both here and farther north, the excellent state of cultivation and the splendid quality of the stock make it a great credit to Mr. Johanssen. One thing I should have noted is a perfect strain of cockscomb, grand in coloring and form, dwarf, and in every respect a winner. I was sorry to hear that, owing to sickness, Mrs. Johanssen has been unable to visit the farms this year.

"Plenty of funeral work," is the report of the Redondo Floral Co.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The local trade seems to have entered a "between seasons" period, for business is quiet. This is attributed to diminishing exposition attendance, while the usual local fall activity has hardly started. The shipping trade, however, is steadily increasing and, as stock is not overplentiful, values are well maintained. There are still a good many nice scabiosas, gypsophilas and marigolds, but most lines of summer stock are playing out. A good deal of cosmos is used, and quite a lot of amaranthus is sold. Carnations also continue rather scarce and all special quality stock is spoken for in advance, though offerings are improving. Violets are beginning to show up fairly well. Street venders are already handling a good many. Asters still are appearing, but are poor. Chrysanthemums show considerable improvement in both quantity and quality. There is a fine cut of Golden Glow, and Monrovia and Crocker are plentiful and excellent. Unaka also is showing up well and is fairly popular and the Chinese outdoor mums are coming in freely. Pompons are rather popular, but not overplentiful. There is a fine cut of dahlias, though the demand is hardly up to expectations, owing to the unusually early mum season. The late gladioli are excellent and always find a ready demand. Scarcely any lilies are coming in, but the supply of valley keeps up fairly well and finds quite a large demand. Roses are gradually improving, but there is hardly enough long stock to meet the demand. Beauties are scarce and poor. There is no surplus even of short stock. Ward, Hadley, Russell and Killarney Brilliant are all popular. There is a good cut of gardenias, but they clean up quickly and more could be sold. Orchids are limited to a few fine sprays of oncidium. The large cut of cattleyas will not be in for several weeks. Greens continue in strong demand. Flowering plants are rather scarce. Less cockscomb is seen and while a good many cyclamens have come in, they move off quickly.

Various Notes.

The municipal primary election last week gave rise to some business, especially baskets and bouquets presented to Mayor Rolph, who was reëlected by a substantial majority. A lot of these were made by Pelicano, Rossi & Co., which was quite fitting, in view of the active electioneering done for Mr. Rolph by Angelo J. Rossi.

Frank Pelicano is now bringing in an unusually fine cut of dahlias and is selling a good many to other stores, though he finds the market for them hardly as good as he had hoped.

week and looks for the normal increase in activity during the fall.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is bringing in a fine lot of late Mrs. Francis King gladioli and also is showing some fine Harrisii ferns. A large number of these have been sold in the last few weeks. This company's new iceboxes are completed and in use and the shipping business will soon be in full swing. So far they are shipping violets only to a few points within the state.

It looks as if the chrysanthemum growers might make some money this year. The mums are bringing good prices and are coming along evenly, not all in a bunch as they did last year. There is a big planting of Appleton that will come in late, making an extremely long season.

Albert O. Stein had another fine decoration last week at the Fairmont hotel, where he furnished the setting for a banquet for 100 people, in honor of the Swedish Commission at the exposition. In the decoration he used 110 dozen Crocker chrysanthemums and a big lot of E. James's mauve cockscomb.

Daniel MacRorie, of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., is leaving for a trip to southern California. This company has recently furnished a large quantity of tropical stock for the Hawaiian building at the exposition.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee says the violet plants are looking fine, though she is not picking any yet and will not bring in her shipping stock until about the middle of October. She says she is having no trouble with red spider. She is already beginning to ship a good many mums and roses. Mrs. Darbee has just received notice that Wells Fargo & Co. are putting on a new refrigerator way car service, to leave Tuesdays and Fridays, similar to that operated by the American Express, Wednesdays and Saturdays. This will enable local shippers to dispatch goods in refrigerator cars four days in the week. The new service will make delivery at all points along the line, going as far as New York. This will be a great help to those who are getting stock from California, as well as to the local shippers.

Much interest was taken in the meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, October 2, as this was the last meeting before the fall flower show, to be held October 21 to 26, under the auspices of the society, in conjunction with the Chrysanthemum Society of America. The show will be held under especially favorable circumstances, owing to the facilities of the exposition and the inducements for participation on the part of growers all over the country. In view of this and the large number of attractive prizes offered, the show is expected to surpass anything of the kind ever held before on the Pacific coast. H. S. G.

worth noting. The cut of roses is increasing and their quality is excellent. Ophelia, Kaiserin, Cecile Brunner, Hoosier Beauty and Killarney are leaders. Home-grown chrysanthemums are showing improved quality. Single violets, bouvardias and valley are good. Carnations are scarce and inferior. The market is well cleaned up daily, at prices which average well for the season.

Exhibits at State Fair.

In planning the new pavilion which was opened this year, the state officials recognized the desirability of using flowers around the exterior. Alongside the entrances and in front of each column on the colonnade, buttressed beds were built, and several ground beds with concrete borders were located near the corners and between the entrances. As this is the first permanent building in a general plan to replace the old wooden structures with concrete, the floral decorations about it are of special interest. H. W. Skiff, the gardener in charge, has made a good showing under unfavorable conditions and has grown a variety of plants about the old buildings, wherever he could find a place for them.

Commercial display beds were planted by the Portland Seed Co., Clarke Bros., J. J. Butzer, Gill Bros., the Willamette Dahlia Co., and Cherry City Dahlia Farm. These were not competing.

The indoor exhibits were in charge of Prof. A. L. Peck, of the department of horticulture of Oregon Agricultural College. In the dahlia section the Willamette Dahlia Co. was awarded first prize and Gill Bros. second for professionals, and S. Penniston first for semi-professionals. Mr. Penniston brought his exhibit from Ashland, Ore.

In the section of general exhibits, Carl F. Ruef, of Salem, was awarded first prize and Rahn & Herbert Co., of Clackamas, second, for professional exhibits. The prizes were $100 and $50. There was a considerable list of prizes for special professional exhibits and the amateur section contained many items. Before another fair is held, this premium list will be revised to provide for a more diversified display.

The Oregon Agricultural College, through its extension department, had a good exhibit of blooming and foliage plants and kept its greenhouse foreman there to answer questions.

Entries were open to all and the show was free to the public.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 22 to 24, 1916.

THE tendency to shade prices whenever a man comes shopping to place a good order for nursery stock is due, as much as anything else, to a more or less general belief that production has outstripped demand.

JOHN S. KERR, of the Texas Nursery Co., Sherman, has been on a trip in the valley of the Rio Grande, where 80,000 young Bartlett pear trees planted under the Elephant Butte dam soon will come into bearing and are expected to create an improved market for all fruits by attracting buyers to the district.

AS a result of extensive tests, the entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture have found that calcium arsenate, a new insecticide, gives promising results in the control of certain insects that do damage by chewing on fruit trees. Among the chewing insects against which the arsenate of calcium proved effective, in laboratory and field tests conducted at Benton Harbor, Mich., are the codling moth, the fall webworm, the tent caterpillar and the tussock moth. The details of the various experiments are published in Department Bulletin No. 278, "Miscellaneous Insecticide Investigations."

FLORIDA NURSERY LAW.

Under the Florida plant act of 1915, Florida nurseries are inspected several times per annum. A nursery is open for inspection at all times without warning.

All shipments originating outside of the state must have plainly marked thereon a statement or tag showing the names and addresses of both the consignor and consignee, the general nature and quantity of the contents and the name of the locality where grown, together with an inspection certificate issued by the nursery inspector or corresponding state official where the plants were grown, together with a permit certificate issued by the Florida nursery inspector. These permit certificates will be consecutively numbered and will be issued at cost as follows:

200 tags	1.75
300 tags	2.00
500 tags	2.50
1000 tags	3.50

The nursery company is required to furnish the nursery inspector, at Gainesville, Fla., a duplicate invoice of every order upon which a permit certificate is used, this invoice showing an exact record of the contents of each bundle and the number of the permit certificate used thereon. To obtain the permits, a nursery without the state must file with the Florida nursery inspector at Gainesville an approved and satisfactory certificate issued by the proper government or state official at the point of shipment, together with the cash for the number of certificates desired.

Owing to the prevalence of citrus canker, the importation into Florida of all kinds of citrus trees or parts thereof has been prohibited. The importations of limited quantities of new or rare varieties may be allowed by special permit of the state plant board.

All apple, pear, peach and plum stock shall be fumigated with hydrocyanic acid gas immediately before being delivered for transportation into Florida.

All correspondence should be addressed to F. M. O'Byrne, nursery inspector, State Plant Board, Gainesville, Fla.

TEXAS NURSERYMEN MEET.

The Texas Nurserymen's Association, at its fifteenth annual session, held at Waco, September 28 and 29, reëlected William B. Munson, of Denison, president of the body. It is his second term in that office. Vice-president J. M. Ramsey, of Austin, also was reelected.

New officers chosen were John S. Kerr, of Sherman, secretary and treasurer, a position which he has filled once before, and E. W. Kirkpatrick, of McKinley, member of the executive committee of the Texas Farmers' Congress.

Two important conclusions were arrived at and embodied in the report of the meeting. One was a resolution endorsing the uniform inspection law to govern nurseries and orchards, as recommended by the National Association of Inspectors and Nurserymen. The second was a report by the horticultural committee, which aims to secure for the nurserymen a share of the state fund available for extension work in agricultural and horticultural development. The association gave its support to the movement to establish a state board of horticulture in Texas.

In the discussion of the extension fund and its administration, the speakers complained that although the nurserymen were pioneers in starting the extension work, they have been more or less ignored.

PETERSON NURSERY

inspection was directed mainly at the Oklahoma law, which is said to discriminate against Texas nurserymen. J. R. Mayhew, of Sherman, Tex., a member of the executive committee of the American Association of Nurserymen, read a report of the legislative committee in which it was explained that the objectionable paragraph in the Oklahoma law is that which requires a nurseryman in Texas to file a bond of $1,000 before he will be permitted to solicit business in Oklahoma. The Texans have no liking for red tape.

The report dealt with the inspection rules and regulations of Oklahoma also. Steps have been taken to force a legal test to see if the attitude of the Oklahoma officials toward Texas nurserymen can be sustained by law. It is claimed that the law as it now operates is discriminatory against the growers of the Lone Star state.

President Munson, in his annual address, commented on the situation developed by the war. The last year, he said, was a good year for stock, but the war had scared the nurserymen, some of them cutting prices, and this had a bad effect. He thought this should be discouraged.

The following members delivered addresses or took part in the discussions of subjects of interest to the association:

J. H. Arbenz, Sarita, Tex.; Ed L. Ayers, chief inspector of orchards and nurseries; J. L. Downing, Wichita Falls; J. S. Kerr, Sherman; M. Falkner, Rockdale; J. George Bowyer, San Benito; J. B. Baker, Fort Worth; Hermann C. Locke, New Braunfels; Eltweed Pomeroy, Donna; J. M. and F. T. Ramsey, Austin; C. C. Mayhew, Sherman; L. J. Tackett, Fort Worth; E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney; A. C. Franklin, Rockdale; J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie.

ORANGE, N. J.

George Purdue, 574 Main street, reports that fall business is starting well, after a dull July and August. The dullness during the summer months, however, was no more than usual at that season of the year.

The Manda Floral Co., West Orange, of which Joseph A. Manda is proprietor, is painting and putting the finishing touches to its new store, preparatory to the formal opening. The fall season will start early in October with an orchid show. This company makes a specialty of orchids, having many varieties under cultivation.

W. A. Manda, of South Orange, has replaced eleven boilers with two of the Kroeschell make. He has installed many new benches in his greenhouses and is now shifting his plants to make room for outdoor stock. Mr. Manda shades most of his glass with cheesecloth.

S. A. Rogers, who recently left the Bound Brook Nurseries to establish nurseries of his own at Liberty Corner, has acquired the store at 435 Vose avenue, South Orange, which was conducted for forty years by his uncle, Michael Lyons.

James Greer, of South Orange, has built a new office building, which is connected with his home and the largest greenhouse. R. B. M.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The cool weather last week did not serve to increase business to any marked extent, but reduced the supply of stock and the sacrifice prices which had been prevailing for some time were conspicuous by their absence. The feature of the week's business was the scarcity of white flowers of all kinds, especially roses. Lilies, white carnations and dahlias were bought as fast as the wholesale houses offered them. During the latter part of the week the demand was greater and it seemed as though the supply grew smaller. A few white mums came in and were eagerly sought for. Golden Glow is arriving in limited quantities and selling well. Roses, other than Killarney, are in good demand. Carnations are in better supply and are quickly sold; the quality is gradually improving. In the green goods line, both smilax and Asparagus plumosus are in oversupply and the sales for them are small. Dahlias sold well during the latter part of the week, especially in the markets. The quality of dahlias has greatly improved with the coming of cooler weather.

Various Notes.

James Glass is erecting a 35-foot brick smokestack, to replace the iron one temporarily erected last year, following the wrecking of the original stack during a gale. His poinsettias and cyclamens are in good shape.

Pierce & Co. have several large wedding orders booked for this month. Lawrence Kreuder, one of the firm, was on a business trip to Philadelphia last week.

W. J. Myers has a new car.

De Forrest Terry has given up the store he formerly occupied at 1409 West Baltimore street.

One of the rose houses at the B. G. Merritt range, at Colgate, has been infested with a tiny worm, which enters the rose bud in a small state and then eats the entire bud. Even the youngest shoots have fallen prey to this pest, which has withstood all attempts to destroy it by insecticides. No one who has seen it is familiar with it and the experts from the Maryland Agricultural College are experimenting with the worm. They hope to provide a means for its extermination, as it bids fair to destroy the entire crop of blooms for some time to come.

At the next club meeting, October 11, Richard Vincent, Jr., will speak on the S. A. F. convention and the wonderful scenery of California.

Visitors last week included S. S. Pennock, C. U. Liggit, I. Rosnosky and D. T. Connor, all of Philadelphia, and James Hooper, of Richmond, Va.

New Nephrolepis Fern

JOHN WANAMAKER

In presenting this fern to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself.

A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzeli, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzeli, and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis.

Strong plants from 2¼-inch pots, $3.00 per doz., $20.00 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

The following ready for delivery:
4-inch pots, $50.00 per 100; 6-inch pots, $1.00 each; 8-inch pots, $2.00 each; specimens in tubs, $5.00 each.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

The Market.

When the bad weather came last week, the bottom dropped out of the market and since then it has been a problem for the salespeople to keep up a semblance of activity. Even the funeral trade, which is a mainstay of Birmingham florists during hard times, has dwindled to nothing.

Everybody is anxiously awaiting the chrysanthemums. A few have shown up elsewhere in Alabama, but as yet we have only had a little coloring to show. Every retail store is laying in supplies and stock, in anticipation of a heavy fall business. One of our best reasons for this view is an official report to the effect that November 1 will see every unit of the iron and steel industry in this section in full blast. This will make current thousands of dollars and the florists are determined to get their share. It has been several years since the steel companies have been in full operation.

Various Notes.

Herman Owens, of T. G. Owens & Sons, reports that the rose stock is in a better condition than ever before. Mr. Owens has had some wonderful Radiance and Mock on display at the Second avenue store. This firm expects to handle a large amount of wholesale trade this fall.

The McDonald flower store, on First avenue, has had several improvements made during the last month. The display window recently featured a miniature Japanese garden.

The Parker estate reports a splendid crop of cyclamen. The carnations are doing well.

The Elmwood Nursery Co. has some excellent azaleas coming on and predicts a price of $7.50 each during the holiday season.

W. J. Z.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Evans Floral Co., with greenhouses on East Main street, has opened a cut flower branch in the lobby of the Virginia hotel, at Third and Gay streets. Miss Griswold is in charge of the new place, which has a nice counter, icebox and some window space, which makes a nice showing.

Miss Thompson is to entertain a number of the younger folks in the trade next week and they are to try to organize a social club and have a different member entertain them once a month. Miss Thompson is connected with the Columbus Floral Co. and thinks they can work up a good membership, having about forty at present.

The Dahlia Show.

The dahlia show held last week in Exposition hall at the Lancaster county fair was a decided success. More than 100 of the newest varieties of dahlias were shown. They were staged September 28 and lasted throughout the week.

In the general florists' class, Frank A. Suter received first money and also a silver cup for showing the most varieties, locally grown.

David F. Rose, an amateur exhibitor, received first prize in cactus, show and peony-flowered classes, three vases to each class.

H. D. Rohrer showed thirty-two varieties. A. F. Strickler had a creditable display, as did B. Frank Barr & Co. Adam Felsinger, of Lancaster, staged, for exhibition only, fifty vases of finest quality dahlias.

S. S. Pennock, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, judged the exhibits. The committee in charge of the dahlia display was made up of Albert M. Herr, H. D. Rohrer, George G. Goldbach and A. F. Strickler. They were ably assisted by a number of the club's members.

Exhibitors from out of town were the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh and Cleveland; S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; John Young, East Prospect, Pa.; R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md.; Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia. John F. Rupp, Shiremanstown, Pa., showed a vase of his new blue petunia, a beautiful shade. A number of out-of-town florists attended the show.

The local newspapers pronounced the show one of the principal features of the fair and complimented the Lancaster County Florists' Club on the effort.

Various Notes.

The club will hold its next meeting October 21. Robert Pyle, of West Grove, will give an address. A full report of the dahlia show will be made.

Charles B. Herr entertained the glad hand committee of the Florists' Club of Lancaster at croquet September 30. J. Wade Gayley and Ira H. Landis, of Paradise, Pa., played against J. Rutter Hess, of Gap, Pa., and Mr. Herr. Landis and Gayley won.

George G. Goldbach is confined to St. Joseph's hospital, where he is suffering from an attack of blood-poisoning.

The Market.

The market last week showed a wonderful improvement and stock sold at much better prices. The sudden change in the temperature had worked havoc in many lines, but the cool weather has resulted in the production of some exceptionally fine dahlias. Carnations are improving and are in salable shape, bringing about $2 per hundred. Orchids are overplentiful. There is little sale for these flowers at this time of the year and the price has fallen considerably. White roses, while not overplentiful, are obtainable in sufficient quantities to meet all demands. On the whole, roses are poor, on account of climatic conditions. This fact makes the northern asters, which appeared for the first time last week, all the more welcome. They are coming into the market in large quantities, but are cleaning up well on account of heavy funeral work. White, yellow and pink chrysanthemums are now to be had in far better quality, while the quantity is increasing.

Various Notes.

Adolphus Gude, Jr., who has been spending the summer vacation on the sweet pea ranch of A. C. Zvolanek, Lompoc, Cal., has returned to Washington to resume his studies. While in the west he visited both of the expositions and on leaving for Washington visited several of the large cities, as well as spending some time in the Grand Canyon of Colorado.

George H. Cooke furnished four handsome pieces for the State Department for the four men who lost their lives on the submarine F-4, who were buried in Arlington cemetery last week.

Fred H. Kramer has been receiving large quantities of bulbs from Holland, another shipment having reached him last week.

Among the visitors in Washington who came to participate in the encampment of the Grand Army were A. A. Reed, of Whitman, Mass.; U. Cutler Ryerson, of Newark, N. J.; Emma Baumer, of Louisville, Ky., and H. B. Ruppert, of Boston.

The encampment of the G. A. R. came to a close October 2, after a week of extensive entertainments. Fully 50,000 visitors were in Washington for the occasion. All are loud in their praise of the good work done by the citizens' committee which handled the arrangements. At the head of this committee was William F. Gude, who was on the job day and night for more than three weeks, supervising all of the details in person. It is planned that the appreciation of the citizens of Washington of his efforts shall take the form of some fitting testimonial, the plan for which is already under way. Associated with Mr. Gude were George H. Cooke, president of the Florists' Club; Fred H. Kramer, and others, while O. A. C. Oehmler was prominent among the Sons of Veterans, who acted as an escort for the old soldiers and were otherwise engaged in making their stay in this city a pleasant one. C. L. L.

Glenview, Ill.—After thirteen years of experience with H. P. Gerhardt, Richard Gould has started a florists' business of his own.

The Market.

The market has tightened up to such a point that at the close of last week and during the first part of this week everything cleaned up. Prices are better than they were. Shipping business is excellent.

Roses are in heavy supply and of the highest quality. The offerings include a large cut of Killarney and White Killarney, American Beauty, Richmond, Ophelia, Shawyer and Taft. Carnations are meeting with an active demand. Easter lilies are not quite so plentiful as they were, but rubrums are in good supply. The first of the early chrysanthemums are in the market. They clean up readily. Other offerings include dahlias, cosmos, valley and orchids. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Nearly all of the local florists gathered at the Murphy home September 29 to pay their last respects to their old friend and associate, William Murphy.

C. E. Critchell has been putting many cases of ferns into cold storage during the last fortnight.

Charles Pfeiffer & Sons have been sending many excellent dahlias to the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange.

L. H. Kyrk has been receiving some good smilax from Spring Valley, N. Y.

Recent visitors included H. G. MacLellan, representing Ove Gnatt, of Hammond, Ind., and S. Mayerhoff, representing the Pompeian Artware Co., Brooklyn.

SCRANTON, PA.

The Market.

Business last week was exceedingly good, counter trade showing a big improvement. We are receiving some fine Golden Glow and Smith's Advance chrysanthemums, but there is not much demand for them. Roses are plentiful. Dahlias are selling better this year than in previous years, all of the florists having had heavy calls for them. Cyclamen has made its appearance in several of the stores.

Various Notes.

A. L. Besancon & Co. had a busy week. This firm had the decorations for the Belin reception and dance. The color scheme of brown, yellow and red was carried out in the ballroom. The orchestra was screened by white latticework, entwined with autumn leaves, and baskets of tritoma marked the sections of the screen. A hedge of dahlias in red and bronze formed the entrance. In the hall Italian baskets of dahlias and southern smilax were used. The library was decorated with baskets of dahlias.

Thomas Arner has the honor of growing the largest tomato in the city. It weighed twenty-two ounces.

A. MacDonald, of Moosic, is the proud father of a baby boy.

The New York Floral Co., of Yonkers, N. Y., will open a store at the corner of Wyoming and Spruce streets.

The Baldwin store reports a busy week of funeral work. Mr. Baldwin is cutting a large quantity of mums, for which he finds a ready sale.

Greenhouse Heating.

HOW MANY 4-INCH RUNS?

Will you please tell me how many 4-inch heating pipes would be required in a greenhouse 36x75 feet to keep the temperature between 50 and 60 degrees in zero weather? The house runs east and west, and is sixteen feet high. The walls are seven feet high, and are three feet wood and four feet glass. The house is exposed to the wind, and is heated by hot water. A. S.—Ill.

To heat the house described, about 900 square feet of radiating surface will be needed. This will require twelve runs of 4-inch pipe. Of these, at least three or four should be flow pipes. If 50 degrees will answer in the coldest weather, the number of runs might be reduced to ten.

I should prefer to use smaller pipes, and suggest four 2½-inch flow pipes, and fifteen 2-inch returns.

FOR ADDITIONAL RADIATION.

Please let me know whether I can use the following arrangement for additional hot water piping for four houses, each fifty feet long. The houses are on a hillside and the boiler is at the bottom of the hill. The boiler is rated to heat 1,000 running feet of 2-inch piping and I intend to use that much.

The boiler is at the east end of the lowest house. I intend to run a 2-inch pipe from the boiler to the highest house on the hill, then run the pipe under the bench fifty feet west, return fifty feet east, drop the pipe three feet in the next house, run it fifty feet west, come back fifty feet east, run it fifty feet west in the same house, drop it two feet in the next house and run it to the boiler. The second feed pipe would go from the boiler to house No. 3, run fifty feet west, fifty feet east, fifty feet west again, drop to the last house, run fifty feet east, then again fifty feet west, and back to the boiler fifty feet east.

Will such an arrangement work? All the pipes are so situated that the water will have a natural fall to the boiler shed. The expansion tank will be at the end of the first house on the hill and will hold twenty gallons. I must have the new pipes under the benches, as the present ones are all above.

C. A. D.—Ohio.

Unless the returns are at least ten feet above the top of the boiler, the Cast Iron Boiler Cracked in Two Years

"We have a No. 4 Kroeschell Boiler. It takes care of 7000 sq. ft. of glass; it would take care of twice that amount.
I first had a new cast iron boiler which lasted two years, when it cracked to pieces. The second was a second-hand boiler.
I consider your boiler the best paying investment I ever made.
You can refer anyone to us."
Marysville Floral Co., Marysville, Ohio.

Cast Iron Cannot be Compared with Kroeschell

"We bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1904. It takes care of 5000 sq. ft. of glass, and we could add 2000 more. We are very well satisfied. We used a cast iron boiler before we had yours. It cannot be compared with the Kroeschell Boiler. Your boiler has certainly a great capacity for heating water."
Hall & Robinson, Montreal, Canada.

Kroeschell Better Than Cast Iron

"I bought a No. 6 Boiler in 1903. It has now 10,000 sq. ft. of glass, and we could add 3300 more. This is ahead of five or six cast iron boilers which I have used. I saved $50 per season on the coal bill."
M. C. Ward, Quincy, Mass.

"I bought a No. 4 Boiler in 1902. Has 7000 sq. ft. of glass; could add 2000 more. It is perfectly satisfactory. Would keep only Kroeschell Boiler. Would not have a cast iron boiler for a gift." Geo. Engel, Xenia, Ohio.

Mr. Engel has increased his plant and ordered another No. 4 Kroeschell.

Better Than Cast Iron

"We bought a No. 1 Boiler in 1902. It is very satisfactory. We had several cast iron boilers, but like yours much better."
E. Ferrand & Sons, Detroit, Mich.

Cost of Heating One-half Less Than With Cast Iron Boilers

"I bought a No. 3 Boiler in 1901. We had a corrugated cast iron fire box boiler and a sectional cast iron boiler before we bought yours in 1901. The cost of the heating with your boiler is one-half less than it was with my cast iron boilers. Your No. 8 Boiler, which we bought recently of you, is not being run to its capacity."
Wm. Geenen, Kimberly, Wis.

Has enlarged place and installed another No. 6 Kroeschell.

Kroeschell vs. Cast Iron

"I have one of your new 1910 model Kroeschell Boilers, and same has proven very satisfactory. We have no trouble to keep temperatures in the coldest weather. We fire once or twice during the day, and once at night, and have had the best satisfaction I have ever experienced in a boiler. Formerly I had two cast iron boilers; one cracked and I took both of these boilers out. My coal bill with the cast iron boilers ran from $195 to $207 per season during the past seven years. This year, with your boiler and soft coal, my coal bill was only $103, and I still have some coal left. Your boiler is the best and cheapest on the market, not alone for the price, but also in fuel saving. I am very glad that you are so well known in Buffalo, N. Y. I have never heard anything but praise, in which I join heartily. Wishing you every success, I remain,

Some Ready Helps to your Heating Problems

RIGHT NOW is the time when any delays in getting just the right thing for the right place, in connection with your heating installation or repairs, is a mighty serious thing to you.

It's the time when our Handy Hand Book is invaluable, as in it you can find everything in the line of fittings you might need, from the simplest to the most complicated connection.

Any fittings you buy of us, you know are not only made the very best they can be made, but they are absolutely practical. Our half a century's experience is back of them, and our guarantee backs up that backing.

When, as in the case of our automatic Headers, for example, you can make the one fitting do the work of several, you cut down both on cost of the fittings and the cost of the labor. But that isn't all; your coils are automatically relieved of all air pressure. The economy of your heating is increased.

Take the matter of pipe supports—we have one for every place and purpose, whether it be a single hook for clamping to a pipe column, spool bearers for steam, adjustable cradles for swinging the pipes under the benches or a special eight (8) hook hook, for attaching to flat iron side posts—we have them all.

Of course, as a grower, we will gladly give you the very lowest discount price on all fittings as well as on a Burnham boiler.

We can make shipments these days in regular jig time. Take down your Handy Hand Book and send along your order.

length of the pipe, if arranged as proposed, will make the circulation extremely sluggish. It would be preferable to run two 2½-inch flow pipes, supplying with each of them the radiation in two of the houses. The size of these flow pipes may be reduced to 2-inch after the radiation in the first house has been connected. Two-inch pipe should be used for the radiation in the houses, and the returns, instead of running back and forth through the houses, should be connected directly with the main returns, which should be of the same size as the main flow pipes. Where more than two lines of 2-inch pipe are needed in a house, one 2-inch flow can be used to supply as many as three or four 2-inch returns.

Since the circulation to the highest house will be most rapid, valves should be provided to equalize the circulation to the different houses.

CHIMNEY NOT LARGE ENOUGH.

Enclosed is a rough sketch of my greenhouses. I am using a Wilks hot water boiler, 42x48. I cannot heat the small house with the six 2-inch returns now installed. I am putting in another boiler, 36x48, of the same make. Can I use the present six 2-inch returns and how many more will be needed to heat the small house to a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather? The chimney has a flue 12x12 inches and is twenty feet high; will it serve for both boilers?

W. S.—Ill.

The sketch shows two houses 100 feet in length and twenty-seven and fourteen feet in width, respectively, with two feet of glass in one exposed wall in each house. For the narrow house I would suggest the use of three 2½-inch flow pipes, running one upon each plate and the other two feet under the ridge. As returns, use six 2-inch pipes in three coils, connecting one of the coils to each of the flow pipes. The boiler for this house should be rated for 900 to 1,000 square feet of radiation.

While the chimney is amply large for one of the boilers, it would not answer for both of them. The flue for a boiler large enough to heat the small house should be ten inches in diameter. A taller chimney would give better results.

A NEW KEROSENE BURNER.

I have a small greenhouse, 12x25, about eight feet high and containing about 300 square feet of glass. Do you think I could heat this house with a coal oil burner that generates gas from the oil, as told in the enclosed circular from the Kero-Gas Co., of Kansas City, Mo.? The circular, you will notice, contains illustrations showing the use of the Kero-Gas burner for both cooking and heating. Would it be necessary to run pipes from the heater under the benches?

C. F.—Kan.

I have no knowledge of the Kero-Gas burner described in the circular, but kerosene contains more heat units than most of the common fuels and, if the burner described vaporizes it properly, will be found economical and efficient.

Unless some method of distributing the heat is provided, it will not be possible to secure a uniform temperature in cold weather, especially when high

The Heating Problem Solved

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—

Smooth, perfect finished castings.
Push nipple connections.
Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals.
Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task.
Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean.
Grates that are made for hard usage and long service.
And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

Put Your Heating Problems Up to Us. We've Been at it for 44 Years.

Is this the kind of boiler you have?

If so, you are getting the best possible service. If not, it will pay you to consider the following facts:

Wilks Hot Water Boilers

are built to fill the requirements of the florist having 3000 sq. ft. or less of glass. Constructed of the best quality steel, strongly riveted and calked, with no cast-iron sections, they will give the most perfect service possible.

With a magazine holding enough coal for twelve hours or longer, they keep an even and continuous fire for that length of time, requiring little or no attention.

For the man who does his own firing they are ideal, permitting him to enjoy a full night's rest without worry as to the condition of his fire.

Our Catalogue contains useful information and tells all about our heaters, showing their economy and giving a plan for heating a model greenhouse. Send for it.

winds prevail. For 300 square feet of glass about 100 square feet of radiation will be needed, for 60 degrees. This will be furnished by 200 linear feet of 1½-inch pipe.

I do not know what the effect of Kero-Gas upon plants would be, but coal gas is extremely injurious, and I would consider it safest to locate the heater so that the gas could not reach the plants in the house.

ONE SMALL GREENHOUSE.

We have a small greenhouse, 14x30 and nine feet high to the ridge, which we wish to heat with hot water. Will two 2-inch flows, branching from a 2½-inch main flow, with ten 1½-inch returns, be sufficient to heat the house for such stock as geraniums? The top of the boiler is on a level with the greenhouse floor. The house runs east and west and is well sheltered on the north by a nearby residence and on the west by an adjoining shed. One end is glass and the other end is partly glass. The north wall is of matched lumber and is six feet high. The south side contains two and one-half feet of glass. What boiler capacity will be necessary?

D. W.—Minn.

To heat the house described, a boiler with a rating of 250 square feet will be needed and it will be more economical if of 300 square feet.

The temperature desired is not stated, nor is the outside temperature given, but the use of two 2-inch flow pipes and ten 1½-inch returns should hold the house at 60 degrees when the temperature is 20 degrees below zero outside. The flows may be on the plates and the returns on the walls below, or beneath the side benches. It is sometimes desirable to have the radiation extend along the end of the house. If the end is much exposed, I would suggest that one 2½-inch flow pipe be placed a foot below the ridge and dropped down at the farther end of the house, to supply two coils, each containing three or four 2-inch pipes, which should run across the end of the house to the corners and along the side walls back to the boiler.

The Market.

Crisp autumn days with plenty of sunshine have done wonders in putting "pep" in the flower business. October wedding anouncements are numerous and funeral work is greatly in demand. Decorations for department store openings, churches and social functions are using the stock up each day. Although there have been no killing frosts up to the present, outdoor flowers are scarce and dahlias are the only appreciable outdoor flower on the market. Asters are hardly to be reckoned with. Greenhouse stock is much improved. Roses are fifty per cent better in quality and command good prices. Ophelia, Russell and Shawyer are the leaders. Chrysanthemums are fast increasing in supply and the demand is exceedingly good. Pink October Frost is the leading variety, being the largest on the market at present. Carnations are increasing in supply and are in demand for funeral work especially. Lilies are meeting with a good call for decorative work.

Various Notes.

David Vesey is building a handsome new residence on Forest Park boulevard.

Mrs. Charles D. Bradley, of the Bradley Flower Shop, is spending a week in Chicago as the guest of relatives.

The Flick Floral Co. has been busy with decorations for the department store of Wolf & Dessauer and the Gates Cloak House. Many chrysanthemums and roses were used. The decorations for the new Morris Bank were also done by Miss Flick. R. F.

SEDALIA, MO.

The state fair flower show was the greatest in the history of Missouri. The attendance was good. The awards in floriculture were as follows:

Roses—Archias Floral Co., first; State Fair Floral Co., second.

Carnations—State Fair Floral Co., first; Archias Floral Co., second.

Palms—Archias Floral Co., first; State Fair Floral Co., second.

Blooming plants—Archias Floral Co., first.

Begonias—Archias Floral Co., first.

Ornamental foliage plants—State Fair Floral Co., first; Archias Floral Co., second.

Ferns—State Fair Floral Co., first; Archias Floral Co., second.

Most artistic design—State Fair Floral Co., first; Archias Floral Co., second.

Among the out-of-town visitors were Mr. Chick, of Kansas City, and W. B. Ayres, of Independence. Governor's day was the biggest day of the fair. Mrs. Magor was presented with a bouquet of a dozen mums, Golden Glow, by the Archias Floral Co. The Archias Seed Co. won on its seed exhibit.

The State Fair Floral Co. will occupy new quarters near Third and Ohio streets, an ideal place, convenient to the transfer station. J. H. H.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh now is having delightful summer weather. Last week we had three light frosts, none of them the killing kind, but for some reason all outdoor stock seems to have dropped out of sight. This has made a better demand for all good indoor stock, but not enough to boost prices to any extent. There are plenty of roses of all kinds except the special grades of white. Chrysanthemums and carnations are coming right along and Beauties are plentiful and good. Lilies and valley were somewhat scarce last week, but, taking it all in all, business has been quite good. September closed satisfactorily and all indications are for a good season.

The retail stores all report trade as above that of last year. The stores all are looking fine with their new decorations.

Various Notes.

The McKees Rocks Flower Shop has gone out of business.

The Woodville Floral Co. will open a branch store in the west end this week.

The Blind Floral Co. is rearranging its store and the work will be completed in a few days, when it will be one of the most attractive in the city.

The year has brought many new faces among the wholesale employees, a number of the old ones dropping out of the game.

John Frampton has gone back to the Zieger Co., his first love.

Turtle Creek now boasts of a flower shop.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday, October 5, to discuss dahlias and other things.

Ben Elliott is convalescing from the whooping cough, which he caught while out on the Pacific coast. Clarke.

Anamosa, Ia.—G. Lehmann has earned the right to be known as a veteran of the florists' business, for it was not until this year, Mr. Lehmann's eightieth, that he decided to retire. E. L. Harvey, son-in-law of Mr. Lehmann, is now managing the business.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Prices have taken a decided boost on nearly all stock. Carnations are up to $2 and $3 per hundred; dahlias, $1.50 to $2; roses, $3 and $6; Easter lilies, $10 and $12. All stock cleans up quickly. Early mums are much in demand—quite a contrast to last year, when extra fancy blooms went begging for buyers. Valley is in much better supply; the demand still is strong.

Second Eliminative Bowling Match.

The bowlers are having lots of fun finding out who will be the five high average men to constitute the Cleveland team in the flower show bowling tournament. The results of the second series of three games were as follows:

Player.	1st	2d	3d	T'l.
H. Bate	171	198	179	548
H. P. Knoble	158	226	163	547
C. G. Graham	185	171	161	517
J. Strejcek	182	182	130	494
F. A. Friedley	136	144	176	456
G. Bate	146	163	115	424
A. Lingman	136	140	125	401
J. Rowlands	143	135	155	433
P. Bachofen	131	145	109	385
C. E. Russell	133	124	128	385
W. Calhoun	133	99	136	368
S. Berthold	130	95	124	349

The final three games will be bowled October 11, at Erie alleys, when the five highest men for the nine games will be winners of berths on the 5-man team to represent Cleveland in the flower show tournament. F. A. F.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

Business is still on the up-grade and, judging by the demand for stock, the doubtful times are over. Unfortunately, with Thanksgiving day due October 11, the florists will perforce miss the chrysanthemum trade and there is poor consolation in the reflection that the rainy season is mainly responsible for this tiresome setback. The muggy weather during September brought on such a glut of roses that orders this week have not been half filled, all varieties having been brought up with a sharp turn since the cold weather set in a few days back. Carnations are coming along slowly, and violets, which are a hundred per cent better in quality than last year, will be cropping in profusion in a fortnight. Orchids are much in demand and large shipments are made daily across the border; the sale of orchid plants also is increasing.

Various Notes.

William Sewell, who for many years designed for J. S. Simmons & Son, of Toronto, has been given charge of the design department at the Dale Estate.

Invitations were received for the opening of Dunlop's new flower store at 8 West Adelaide street, Toronto, October 6. The store is one of the largest in Canada and will continue under the management of genial George A. Geraghty.

T. W. Duggan returned October 1 from a motor trip to Detroit, via London. W. G. P.

ORDINARY vs. LIQUID PUTTY.

During June and July, 1912, our greenhouses were constructed, and liquid putty was used. We now find that the glass will have to be reputtied. Our local hardware man has written to firms in St. Louis and Chicago, and they all state that liquid putty is a failure. It is our belief that liquid putty will be much cheaper to put on than ordinary putty, for the reason that liquid putty can be put on with a machine in much less time than ordinary putty with putty knife. We ask that you let us have your advice in regard to the use of liquid putty.
R. F. C.—Tex.

The general run of liquid putty on the market is not nearly so durable as ordinary putty, especially those brands prepared for greenhouse use. I should prefer to use ordinary putty in which about five per cent of white lead has been thoroughly incorporated. If liquid putty is to be used, I should add the same amount of white lead, but should not expect so durable a job as with common putty. It will also require careful attention to the cleaning of the putty guns. T.

CLAM SHELLS IN SOIL.

I should like to know whether decayed clam shells are of benefit to ground on which flowers, trees and shrubs will be grown. There is a large mound of them near the lots where I am going to start in the nursery business. H. K.—Cal.

There is a little fertilizing agency in clam and other shells. The whole shells are useful as drainage in pots or flats. They are more valuable in the land if ground up and would be most beneficial on heavy, retentive soils. Do not, however, expect any startling returns after using them. C. W.

Fairmont, Minn.—John McCullough, of Reinbeck, Ia., is to erect three greenhouses here this summer, each 25x125.

The Marietta Floral Co. retains its greenhouses, which hereafter will be devoted to vegetable growing.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Breaking in between the asters and the chrysanthemums, dahlias have been playing a conspicuous part in the activities of the market. For the first time the granges and similar associations throughout the state have been holding dahlia exhibitions, with the result that there has been an unusual demand for these flowers, especially the light-colored cactus varieties. The advance guard of the chrysanthemums has appeared in good numbers, whites being quite plentiful and retailing from $1.50 up per dozen. The early cuts of carnations are better and roses are showing a decided improvement in quality.

Various Notes.

Among the heaviest taxpayers in the town of East Providence, according to the annual assessment just filed, are Joseph Koppelman and wife, $16,350; George H. Johnson, $7,415; Lawrence Hay, $6,225, and Andrew J. Olsen and wife, $5,200.

Charles Smith and wife celebrated the eighteenth anniversary of their wedding on Sunday, September 26.

G. S. Congdon, whose greenhouses, at Bristol, were badly damaged by hail early in the summer, has decided to discontinue business this winter.

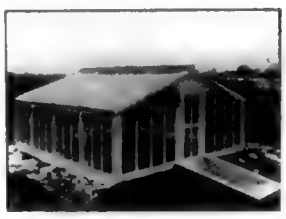
John Roth, for several years with Charles H. Hunt and later with Joseph Koppelman, is now associated with Frederick Dietz, 24 French street.

William H. Tarbox, of West Greenwich, had an exhibit of asters at the Danbury, Conn., fair last week, made in the form of a windmill, eight feet in height, partly covered with moss. More than 2,000 asters were used.

Swan Peterson is having a new greenhouse, 20x100, erected at 56 Central avenue, East Providence.

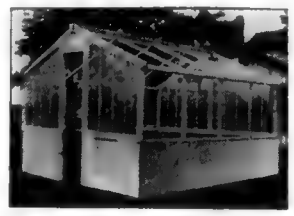
The largest taxpayers in Cranston, according to the returns of the assessors, include the following: Frank L. Budlong, $19,960; J. A. Budlong & Son Co., $112,485; Budlong Rose Co., $144,530; Emma T. O'Connor et al., $131,170.

Walter S. Sword and wife, of Valley Falls, have returned from a vacation trip to Montreal.



A new greenhouse is being erected on the grounds of the Butler hospital, on Blackstone boulevard.

E. A. Chipman, at Woonsocket, has been making an offering of 2,000 house ferns at 10 cents to $5.



Edward T. Ennis, of the Hampden Meadow Greenhouses, has completed the repairs to his houses, which were badly damaged by hail last summer.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

HOW THE "ANKLET" BOUQUET MAKES GOOD

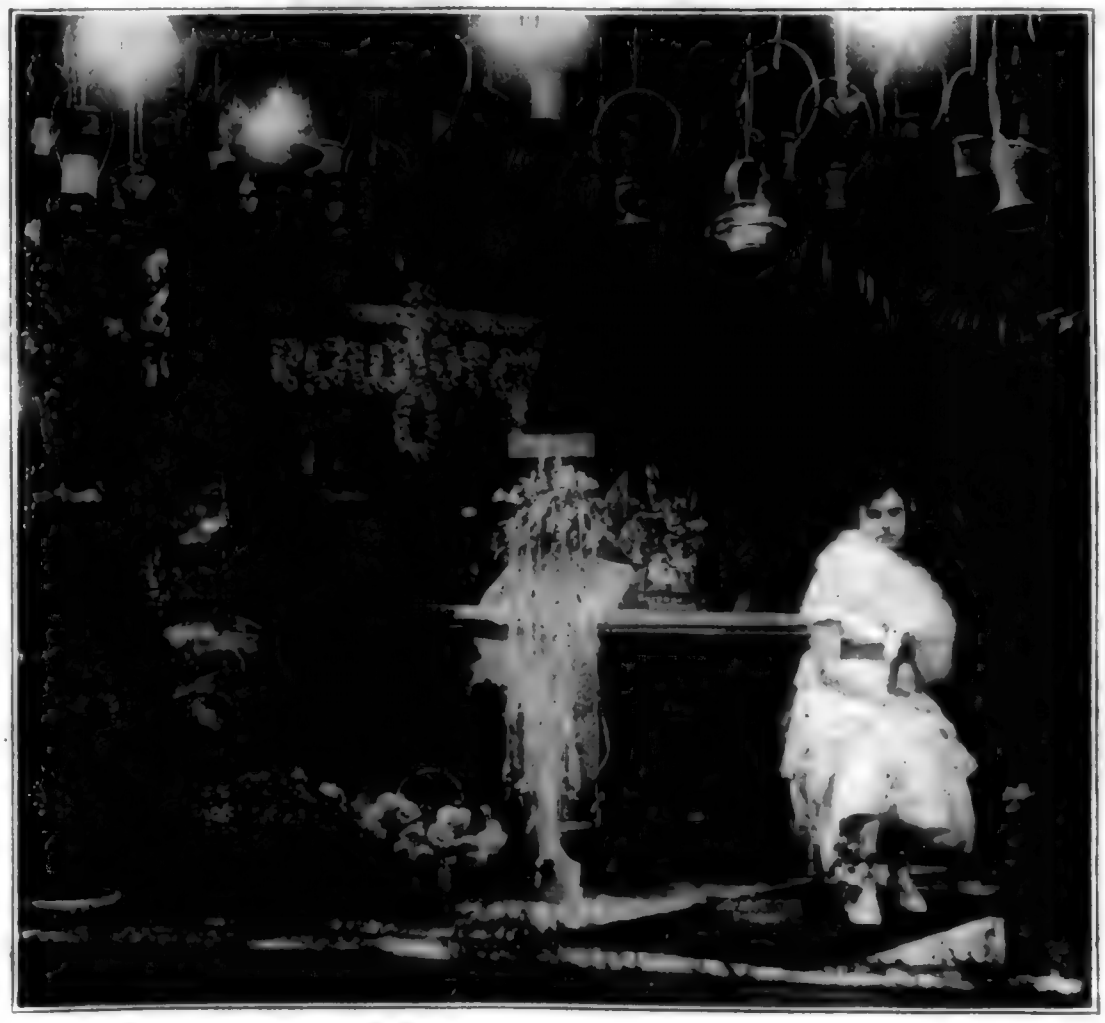
The latest creation in cut flower arrangements is the so-called anklet bouquet, conceived either by a soubrette or a florist who was trying to do something "different." While possessing, perhaps, certain attractions for persons with overweening desire for the conspicuous, the only real use for the idea lies in its advertising possibilities.

THOUGH itself no glittering success, the tale of the tango bouquet never will be told of its unregenerate progeny, the anklet, nicknamed from bracelet. The reason is that while a florist might with perfect propriety recommend to his most discriminating customers the trial of one of the various forms of shoulder or arm bouquet, he would be a most rash, thoughtless and undeserving retailer who would even suggest that a lady tie flowers on her leg—no matter how near the shoe!

The anklet bouquet is a freak; it makes a dandy ad, under certain circumstances, but that is as far as it goes. It will make people talk, but it never can be sold, except, perhaps, now and then for stage use.

How It Happened.

The genesis of the anklet bouquet is perfectly simple. When the new close-position dances came in they proved destructive of the flowers that formerly were sold in such large quantities, made up in bouquets for the corsage. Not only were the flowers crushed, but the costumes were soiled. An up-to-date florist, who did not intend to sit passive and watch a passing fad cut a slice off his profits, got busy and devised a way of offsetting his losses. The result was the so-called tango bouquet, much advertised and, for a time, a hit. As most florists know, the tango bouquet was worn over the shoulder, around the neck, or on the arm, and therefore was not subject to the hard knocks the corsage bouquet received. After The Review illustrated some of these bouquets in one of its leading articles, hundreds of florists tried them and last season many were sold in place of corsage bouquets, but it is probable that the demand for them today is comparatively insignificant.



Making Talk.

In the attempt to elaborate the tango bouquet many freak ideas were developed—some of them good for advertising purposes, but all of them short-lived. It was inevitable that someone should conceive the notion of decorating the dancers' feet. Of course, as a novelty the anklet bouquet is interesting, but it is quite plain that it never will have any real possibilities so far as sales are concerned. The burlesque or musical-comedy queen may adorn her ankle with flowers to furnish material for her press agent, and the anklet bouquet occasionally may be reported as seen at the barbers' ball, but it seldom if ever will be in evidence at the tango tea or debutantes' cotillion.

There is a way, however, in which the anklet bouquet can be turned to good account—in advertising. Unpalatable as the fact may be, the truth is that the commendable commonplaces seldom cause comment—it is the unusual, the odd, the fantastic, the bizarre that sets the tongues a wagging. That is the use of the anklet bouquet. One wouldn't offer it as the example by which his taste or discrimination was to be judged, but for a show window demonstration during the county fair or in fashion week it would be the means of pulling the crowd away from the drug store window with its woman combing her wonderful hair amid bottles of the elixir; it even would win the walkers from the grocer's sidewalk kiosk where the well-known colored gentleman in cook's attire hands out samples of corn flakes—and as for creating talk, these others would not be one, two, three.

In the Window.

It was in such a manner that C. W. Crum employed the anklet bouquet at the Des Moines store of U. L. Crawford and to say he made a hit is putting it mildly. He employed a model to pose in the window and supplied her photograph, with her flowers, to the local papers. He got columns of publicity and made his style show window the talk of the town. Everybody came to see the lady with flowers on her ankle.

Style Show Week Window with Anklet Bouquet on Living Model.

Of course Mr. Crum did not make the mistake of showing nothing more salable than the anklet bouquet. There were many conservative, recommendable things there to catch the eye of the spectator. Corsage bouquets, brides' bouquets, ferns, baskets, cut flowers—all that the window could artistically contain was on display, and if "Once a customer, always a customer" is the motto at the Crawford store, the sales record at the end of the year

These Sunlight Sashes as adjusted on the greenhouses are removable at will. They may be transferred to Cold Frames or Hotbeds and are incomparably superior to all others for such use.

They are complete in themselves, for they have two layers of glass enclosing an air space that is a better protection than mats and shutters, and does away with buying and using these extra covers. Besides, the plants get all the light all the time and are stronger and earlier, also far more profitable.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

HOW THE "ANKLET" BOUQUET MAKES GOOD

The latest creation in cut flower arrangements is the so-called anklet bouquet, conceived either by a soubrette or a florist who was trying to do something "different." While possessing, perhaps, certain attractions for persons with overweening desire for the conspicuous, the only real use for the idea lies in its advertising possibilities.

THOUGH itself no glittering success, the tale of the tango bouquet never will be told of its unregenerate progeny, the anklet, nicknamed from bracelet. The reason is that while a florist might with perfect propriety recommend to his most discriminating customers the trial of one of the various forms of shoulder or arm bouquet, he would be a most rash, thoughtless and undeserving retailer who would even suggest that a lady tie flowers on her leg—no matter how near the shoe!

The anklet bouquet is a freak; it makes a dandy ad, under certain circumstances, but that is as far as it goes. It will make people talk, but it never can be sold, except, perhaps, now and then for stage use.

How It Happened.

The genesis of the anklet bouquet is perfectly simple. When the new close-position dances came in they proved destructive of the flowers that formerly were sold in such large quantities, made up in bouquets for the corsage. Not only were the flowers crushed, but the costumes were soiled. An up-to-date florist, who did not intend to sit passive and watch a passing fad cut a slice off his profits, got busy and devised a way of offsetting his losses. The result was the so-called tango bouquet, much advertised and, for a time, a hit. As most florists know, the tango bouquet was worn over the shoulder, around the neck, or on the arm, and therefore was not subject to the hard knocks the corsage bouquet received. After The Review illustrated some of these bouquets in one of its leading articles, hundreds of florists tried them and last season many were sold in place of corsage bouquets, but it is probable that the demand for them today is comparatively insignificant.

Making Talk.

In the attempt to elaborate the tango bouquet many freak ideas were developed—some of them good for advertising purposes, but all of them short-lived. It was inevitable that someone should conceive the notion of decorating the dancers' feet. Of course, as a novelty the anklet bouquet is interesting, but it is quite plain that it never will have any real possibilities so far as sales are concerned. The burlesque or musical-comedy queen may adorn her ankle with flowers to furnish material for her press agent, and the anklet bouquet occasionally may be reported as seen at the barbers' ball, but it seldom if ever will be in evidence at the tango tea or debutantes' cotillion.

There is a way, however, in which the anklet bouquet can be turned to good account—in advertising. Unpalatable as the fact may be, the truth is that the commendable commonplaces seldom cause comment—it is the unusual, the odd, the fantastic, the bizarre that sets the tongues a wagging. That is the use of the anklet bouquet. One wouldn't offer it as the example by which his taste or discrimination was to be judged, but for a show window demonstration during the county fair or in fashion week it would be the means of pulling the crowd away from the drug store window with its woman combing her wonderful hair amid bottles of the elixir; it even would win the walkers from the grocer's sidewalk kiosk where the well-known colored gentleman in cook's attire hands out samples of corn flakes—and as for creating talk, these others would not be one, two, three.

In the Window.

It was in such a manner that C. W. Crum employed the anklet bouquet at the Des Moines store of U. L. Crawford and to say he made a hit is putting it mildly. He employed a model to pose in the window and supplied her photograph, with her flowers, to the local papers. He got columns of publicity and made his style show window the talk of the town. Everybody came to see the lady with flowers on her ankle.

Of course Mr. Crum did not make the mistake of showing nothing more salable than the anklet bouquet. There were many conservative, recommendable things there to catch the eye of the spectator. Corsage bouquets, brides' bouquets, ferns, baskets, cut flowers—all that the window could artistically contain was on display, and if "Once a customer, always a customer" is the motto at the Crawford store, the sales record at the end of the year should show a gratifying increase over that of last year.

Retailers who use their heads as well as their hands in running their stores have material for a good advertising "stunt" in the anklet bouquet.

AN APOSTLE OF ART.

He Carries a Notebook.

Samuel Seligman, the affable gentleman who sells fabrics and ribbons to the trade and does other good works for his firm, is a man of ideas. Now comes Mr. Seligman with some thoughts on art, fresh from his typewriter. He protests that too many florists still copy the Chinese conception of art. Since autumn weddings and social affairs demand the utmost of the florist in the exercise of the decorative talent, and because nary a bride was satisfied with less, Mr. Seligman steps forward as the apostle of the higher art in floral decoration.

Chinese art is content to rest itself in the object and therefore it becomes a matter of intricate skill, which works itself out into wonderfully delicate carvings, tapestry and ornament. Nowhere is there a thought of concealing the art, as the modern æsthetics require. Rather, the attention is directed toward the art, or artfulness, of the work. Here is where criticism No. 1 occurs. The New York apostle of art considers this a fault in the Japanese bowls and single flower holders. They call attention to the incomparable beauty of a few flowers, rather than to the masses of many.

The Whole Harmony.

For an Oriental bride this might be the thing, but evidently Mr. Seligman wishes to impress upon florists the idea that the American conception of art—what we are pleased to call the higher art—enjoins the artist in flowers to strive toward an impression of intrinsic beauty of arrangement in the whole, a pleasing color treatment which does not center the eye on a few bright spots, and variety which is not conspicuous. He then suggests that while brides and debutantes are in season, and the new autumn flowers come in ever greater variety, the great annual opportunity of the florist is at hand. Endless are the color combinations which nature permits.

Mr. Seligman describes the effect achieved in the color scheme of a standard sent recently to one of Detroit's debutantes.

"This standard," says the critic, "was a standard of peach-colored silk, with a quaint colonial bouquet at the base, the standard upholding a concave bouquet in which a cluster of pink buds formed the center. The buds were encircled with valley, which, in turn, was circled with primulas, then Aaron Ward buds, then forget-me-nots, etc., circle after circle, blending from one delicate coloring into another, the whole being fringed with maidenhair fern. To eliminate the oft occurring paper collars, the piece was edged with a ruffle of lace."

Birds are the Latest.

Another novelty observed by him was a wicker bird cage. Each wicker bar was outlined in tiny pink buds and baby-pink silverine, showering around it. The canary was there, of course, but was quite outshone by the scenery.

A striking effect was secured at a recent dinner by a large black and white basket, filled with flowers of a black and white combination. Black and white bows adorned it, and black velvet, covered over with white lace chiffon, forming a ruffle around the edge of the basket, completed the study.

In the larger decorations for altars there is unbounded opportunity for studies like these. Again Mr. Seligman is ready with some descriptions of "altars he has seen."

"On one altar," he writes, "I saw a sunburst of lilies that hung over the white, satin-covered prayer desk, and above it, great clusters of autumn tinged hydrangeas, intermingled with hundreds of pretty, fragrant white and pink wistaria blooms. The bride's bouquet was of pink orchids and valley, tied with duotone lace, having just a hint of pink. The shower was of narrow silverine. The house decorations consisted of dahlias, chrysanthemums and gladioli. On the bride's table was a unique, blue bird cage, mounted above a mass of Aaron Ward roses and so arranged that the canaries seemed to be sheltered in an arbor of roses. The roses were tied in streamer effect with narrow, blue silverine, to match the blue of the bird cage."

Crawford's Model Showing Anklet Bouquet.

Color Harmony.

A rare effect was obtained in an altar decoration where the altar was entirely banked with towering plants and lighted with a seven-candle candelabra. Ranged about the sides were several large Venetian baskets, filled with brown-shaded hydrangeas, touched with pink, together with outdoor, autumn grasses, gathered from the woods. At this wedding the omber effect was carried out in the color scheme. The result was most pleasing.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Chairman George Asmus, of the National Flower Show committee, has called a meeting of the committee to be held October 19, at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, Philadelphia, at 10 a. m. At this meeting the schedules of the rose, carnation, sweet pea and gladiolus societies will be completed and much other business relating to the show transacted. On the day previous to the meeting members of the committee will meet the chairmen and members of the different local committees to discuss details of the work of preparation for the show, and if any member of the trade has a suggestion to make either in regard to schedule or anything else bearing upon the conduct of the show, it would be well to communicate with the management in order that it receive proper consideration. As all know, the committee is composed of members of the S. A. F., who are located widely apart, thus being representative of different communities. Consequently it is not possible to have frequent meetings, and this opportunity to bring anything before the committee at this meeting should not be neglected.

Preparations in general are well advanced and a great deal has been accomplished. Space in the trade section of the show is in good demand, reservations aggregating in value $6,000 or more having been made even at this early date. It is expected that every foot of space available for trade exhibits will be sold a long time ahead of the show dates. The greenhouse builders, plantsmen and others have made early selections of locations. But a few of the choicer blocks of space are left.

The committee is now prepared to receive offers of special prizes from the trade and from others whose business brings them in touch with enterprises of this character. It need not be pointed out that the publicity to be derived from our special prize list is worthy of consideration by all; and again, there should be some feeling of pleasure resulting from a helpful effort in anything which will advance horticultural interests. As the second preliminary schedule will go out shortly after the meeting of the National Flower Show committee, donors of special prizes should communicate their wishes to the secretary without delay.

The all-important business of selection of a design for the show poster has been taken up by W. F. Therkildson and his committee, and the result of their efforts will be presented at the forthcoming meeting. Some novel plans for publicity are expected to be evolved by this committee.

The plantings on the plots outside of Convention hall this summer have, as Robert Craig says, furnished good subject matter for publicity for the show, and it is to be regretted that the approaching frosty season necessitates the withdrawal of the crotons, the beds of which have daily attracted thousands.

Looked at from every standpoint, the Fourth National Flower Show, March 25 to April 2, 1916, bids fair to more than warrant the slogan that it will be the greatest horticultural event of 1916, and then some.

BAUM'S BRIDE WINDOW.

Next best to a living figure in a show window seems to be a dry goods store bride; it never seems to grow old. The one illustrated in this issue is reproduced from a photograph of the window with which C. L. Baum, of Knoxville, Tenn., took the prize, October 6, offered by the local board of commerce for the most artistic arrangement of home products. The window represented a bride carrying a shower bouquet of orchids and valley, accompanied by a flower girl carrying a basket of Ophelia roses. This window attracted more attention than any seen in Knoxville for some time. Fifty-three firms, in all lines of business, competed for the prize.

PLANTING SPANISH IRIS.

Will you please tell me how to plant Spanish iris? I have put seven bulbs in each 4-inch pot, with the top of the bulbs slightly out of the soil. When should I bring them inside for forcing? I have the British Queen, Louise and Cajanus. W. A.—Wis.

The 4-inch pots are much too small for flowering Spanish iris. If you use 6-inch pots or deep pans, placing ten bulbs in each, you will have much better results. Or, if you want them for cutting, the best plan is to plant them in flats five inches deep; a flat 12x24 inches will hold seventy-five to eighty bulbs and bloom them well. This iris can also be planted in benches or beds in a cool house. You should cover the bulbs entirely. Keep them in a coldframe until after Christmas; then place them in a night temperature of 50 degrees. They must not be subjected to a high temperature, or they will be a failure. C. W.

REPOTTING CYCLAMENS.

We have some cyclamens in 6-inch pots. They are beginning to bloom and are fine, large, thrifty plants. Would it be advisable to shift these into 7-inch or 8-inch pots, or would it be better to let them bloom in the 6-inch size? D. & K.—Mich.

Unless you want to hold your plants for early spring, it would be better not to repot them now. Probably you can sell them most profitably at Thanksgiving and Christmas, and in this case a repotting would be inadvisable. Feed the plants, if well pot-bound, with weak liquid manure once a week. C. W.

CARNATIONS

STUNTED CARNATION PLANTS.

We have to ask you to help us out when we are in trouble. We are sending you two carnations that were benched in the early part of June. We are at a loss to know what to do with them in this condition. We find that shot-bugs are plentiful among the plants. Some of the plants are in a healthy condition, but none have grown as large and as fast as we think they should. They were pot plants. The soil we used was brought from the hills and mixed properly with cow manure. We shall thank you to reply at once, so that we can get busy.

C. F. C.—Miss.

If it were a month earlier, I would advise you to tear out those carnation plants and replant with new, field-grown stock. They have not made enough growth to produce a profitable crop this season. Perhaps, in your southern climate, it would be practical to replant even at this late date. You will know better than the writer about that, however. To get rid of the sow-bugs, get some sugar and mix with it enough Paris green to give it a lively green color. Drop a pinch of this here and there, along the edgeboard, etc. You might also spray the plants with arsenate of lead. This insect is not difficult to get rid of; all that is required is a little persistence.

A. F. J. B.

WIREWORMS IN BENCH SOIL.

Will you kindly let me know what I can do to kill wireworms in my carnation benches? The soil is new, but some of the plants have already been nearly ruined by the worms chewing the roots or burrowing in the stalks. Last year about half of my plants were ruined. This year I took particular precautions to get soil free from the worms, but there are a few in it already. Can I use carbon bisulphide, and to what extent, without harming the plants? I know of nothing else that would serve as a remedy, unless used so strong that it would injure the plants. I believe there are two species of worms that are generally known as wireworms—the wheat wireworm, or Agriotes mancus, and the so-called common wireworm, or Melanotus communis. It is the wheat wireworm, I think, that is giving me trouble.

H. W. L.—N. H.

Any of the salty fertilizers, such as kainit and nitrate of soda, are supposed to be distasteful to these worms. Ordinary salt is also recommended, and in this instance, where carnations are growing in the soil, could be used safely in moderate quantity. I would suggest that you experiment a little, before you make an application to a whole bench, in order to determine the effect a certain quantity will have on the plants. I would suggest a 2-inch potful to a row across a 5-foot bench, as a starter. You might be able to increase this without injury to the roots. Sprinkle it evenly over the soil and water in. Carbon bisulphide might be found satisfactory, but would be much more expensive and more troublesome to apply. After you have determined what is the most practical remedy in the greenhouse, you will be able to decide how to treat your field.

THE ARCHIAS BOOTH.

The autumn fairs afford a fine chance for florists to put their wares before the public. That this is thoroughly appreciated by the Archias Floral Co., of Sedalia, is shown by the accompanying illustration, reproduced from a photograph of its booth at the Missouri state fair, in which it made eight entries and won eight ribbons, four blue and four red. The florists' exhibits at the fair this year were much better than heretofore and a thorough credit to the trade in connection with the largest exhibits in the horticultural and agricultural departments ever known in the history of the fair.

CARNATION SOCIETY MEETING.

A meeting of the board of directors of the American Carnation Society will be held at Cleveland, O., Friday, November 12. The Cleveland Florists' Club's rooms in the Hollenden hotel will be placed at our disposal and the meeting will be called at 4:00 p. m. Any members who happen to be in Cleveland at that time are invited to be present.

DUTCH BULBS

OUTDOOR PLANTING.

Best Time to Plant.

The last half of October and first half of November is the best season for outdoor bulb planting. Of course it may be done even as late as Christmas, if the ground is open, but, while this late planted stock may flower, the quality will be inferior, as bulbs fritter away much of their strength if kept in boxes and bags after the proper planting season has arrived.

The majority of Dutch bulbs prefer what is best described as a medium loam, although they can be grown in the two opposite extremes of soil, light sandy and heavy clay, the last named needing a liberal addition of sand or gritty material to improve it. The manure used should be well decayed; new manure is decidedly injurious. Old mushroom manure or that from a spent hotbed is excellent, and the soil should be well pulverized before planting.

Depth to Plant.

Tulips need planting an average depth of four inches, hyacinths four to five inches and narcissi three to five inches, according to the size of bulb. The smaller bulbs, such as crocus, snowdrops, scillas, chionodoxas, erythroniums, fritillarias, etc., can be covered two and one-half to three inches. Where special bulb beds are planted it is an advantage to have them crowned, making the center several inches higher than the sides. When finished off perfectly flat there is more danger of water standing and bulbs of this character, while they do not mind the most severe frost when mulched, are seriously harmed if water stands over them. Therefore, see that they have well drained ground.

Tulips are far the most important of bedding bulbs and their importance increases steadily. The bulbs since the European war are all of much better quality than we previously received, and now that the Hollanders have started to send us bulbs more nearly approximating in quality what they have always sent to the belligerent powers, we may reasonably hope that they will continue so doing.

Some Good Tulips.

While beds of mixed tulips are showy and not displeasing, those containing a single variety are much to be preferred. A few of the best tulips for bedding, which are of reasonable cost, are: White—Joost van Vondel, White Swan. Yellow—Chrysolora, Ophir d'Or. Orange—Prince of Austria. Pink or rose pink—Cottage Maid, Pink Beauty, Queen of the Netherlands. Red and yellow—Keizerskroon. Rose—Proserpine. Scarlet—Belle Alliance, Scarlet Pottebakker, Vermilion Brilliant. Crimson—Couleur Cardinal. If asked to select a half dozen of the best bedders in a variety of colors I would pick White Joost van Vondel, Keizerskroon, Pink Beauty, Chrysolora, Proserpine and either Couleur Cardinal or Prince of Austria.

"What varieties go well together?" is a query often asked. If more than one variety is used in a bed it is important that colors harmonize. The following sorts blend well: White Joost van Vondel and Chrysolora, White Joost van Vondel and Ophir d'Or, Prince of Austria and Vermilion Brilliant, Chrysolora and Couleur Cardinal, Proserpine and White Pottebakker, Pink Beauty and Chrysolora, Couleur Cardinal and Ophir d'Or. Do not use White Swan with other varieties, as it is a late bloomer.

Darwin and Cottage Tulips.

Do not neglect the Darwin and cottage tulips when it comes to bedding. Ten years ago hardly a named Darwin was offered in America, but now every important store carries twenty-five to fifty or more varieties. They come a little higher than the early tulips, but make a far better showing, with their taller and more stately stems, and, furthermore, they are grand for cutting, the bulbs also lasting better from year to year than those of the ordinary bedding tulips.

Here are a few splendid Darwins for bedding or planting in clumps in the borders: Clara Butt, salmon rose pink; Gretchen, or Margaret, blush pink, carries several flowers to a bulb, a grand bedder; Mme. Krelage, deep rose; Gustave Dore, bright rose; Wedding Veil, pale lilac, shaded white, beautiful; White Queen, or La Candeur, nearly pure white; Glow, scarlet vermilion; Pride of Haarlem, crimson rose; Minister Tak, rosy scarlet; Kate Greenaway, soft lilac; Dream, violet mauve; Rev. Ewbank, lilac mauve. Of the extremely dark tulips La Tulipe Noire is far the best and comes nearest to being a really black color, being maroon black. It is somewhat high-priced, but is a magnificent variety. The flowers are of great size and have wonderful lasting qualities.

There is no true yellow Darwin of value, although several are of bronze shades, but in the cottage section are some splendid ones, such as Inglescombe Yellow, Gesneriana lutea, vitellina, a sulphur yellow, and retroflexa. A few other grand cottage varieties for bedding or cutting are: Gesneriana spathulata, Inglescombe Scarlet, Inglescombe Pink, Gesneriana rosea, Golden Crown, Bouton d'Or, or Golden Beauty; Picotee, or Maiden's Blush; Elegans and La Merveille.

Hyacinths for Bedding.

Hyacinths are not grown to anything like the extent of tulips and do not seem to gain in favor. They flower earlier than tulips and are, for that reason, worthy of some attention. They look heavy and cumbersome when compared with tulips or narcissi, but a bed in flower certainly makes a beautiful picture. Plant the bulbs six inches apart each way, covering four to five inches deep.

A few good bedding sorts are: Gertrude, bright pink; Charles Dickens, salmon pink; Robert Steiger, deep crimson; Norma, waxy rose; Mme. Van der Hoop and L'Innocence, pure white; Yellow Hammer, pure yellow; Queen of the Blues, light blue; King of the Blues, indigo blue; Grand Lilas, porcelain blue. The foregoing are all single varieties and are much more satisfactory than doubles for bedding. The same holds good of double tulips and narcissi.

Narcissi in the Open.

For bedding or massing the large trumpet narcissi are the most effective. The medium and short trumpet sections are better for planting in rockeries, for mixed borders and for naturalizing in grass. As a general rule the big trumpet sorts do not last from year to year as well as the other sections.

The following are good for bedding: Emperor, Empress, Golden Spur, Henry Irving, Glory of Leiden and Trumpet maximus. Sir Watkin, of the incomparabilis section, is a mammoth flower, fine for bold effects, as is Barrii conspicuus and incomparabilis Beauty.

Narcissi, however, to be seen at their best, should be planted in grass, preferably where they can have some shade from trees. They are particularly effective along the borders of streams or ponds, especially the poeticus section. No formality should be tolerated when naturalizing bulbs. Scatter them broadcast with the hand and plant each where it falls. A few reliable narcissi for naturalizing, which will not run out, are: Large trumpet — Barrii conspicuus, Leedsii Mrs. Langtry, incomparabilis Stella, incomparabilis Cynosure, Leedsii Duchess of Brabant. Short trumpet—Burbidgei, poeticus, poeticus ornatus, poeticus poetarum. Poeticus is undoubtedly the finest narcissus for naturalizing. Next to it should come Leedsii Mrs. Langtry. These are fine near water, where poeticus grows with especial vigor.

Miscellaneous Bulbs.

Other bulbs well adapted for naturalizing purposes are: Crocus, all varieties; snowdrops; Scilla Sibirica, S. nutans and S. campanulata; chionodoxas, Fritillaria Meleagris, Puschkinia Libanotica, Eranthis hyemalis, erythroniums, trilliums, which prefer a somewhat moist, shady location, and Allium Neapolitanum. No bulbs should be planted in lawns, as their foliage has no time to mature before the grass requires cutting.

A few other bulbs adapted for outdoor culture, not mentioned in the foregoing lists, are Spanish and English iris, Ornithogalum Arabicum, crown imperials, or Fritillaria Imperialis, and leucojums. The irises in particular are quite hardy and extremely valuable for cutting.

Don't Cover Too Soon.

Avoid placing any winter covering over bulb beds until they are well frozen. If placed over them while the ground is soft, the tops will push up into the mulch and get badly broken when the covering is removed. Do not pile on a heavy covering over any Dutch bulbs, merely sufficient to prevent the frost and sun from heaving the ground.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

CHARLES L. BROCK.

TAKING time by the forelock, President Patrick Welch has brought Charles L. Brock into the limelight by placing on him the responsibility for the S. A. F. Convention Garden of 1916. Mr. Brock is superintendent of parks at Houston and the logical man to carry along the work begun by Theodore Wirth, J. B. Shea and John McLaren, who have made the Convention Gardens what they were. Mr. Brock has done splendid work in developing the Houston parks and has a large force of men now employed in landscaping. He has an ideal site for the garden and the early appointment at the hands of President Welch is to afford him time for the development of its possibilities.

Every country florist should help to develop the bulb business. He can do this in no better way than by planting one or two attractive beds at his own home or near his greenhouses. This makes the best kind of advertisement. Everyone is interested in the bulbous flowers which bloom in the spring. They are cheering after the long winter and for this reason appeal with particular force to us all. There is room for an immense development in this field and it is up to the trade to do its part in encouraging and developing it.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

ROSES IN THE SOUTH.

By the time this appears in print, firing will have become general. Notwithstanding the cold and rainy spells of the last few weeks, we have entirely escaped the mildew, and this we attribute to having the doors open day and night and the side glass all removed. It is always soon enough to replace the side glass when firing begins. Thrips may be expected at any time now, but a few applications of some of the tobacco extracts generally exterminate them, as well as any other insect pests. The plants should be making a good crop now, but if you cut them hard, especially if the plants were only young plants set out this summer, you are damaging your chances for a later time. It is much better to cut the flowers with short stems and conserve the energy of the plants.

To have a crop at the holidays, all teas and hybrid teas must be pinched about October 25 in the north and about November 1 in the south. American Beauties will have to be pinched about one week earlier. Let the pinching period begin a day or two before these dates and extend a day or two after them and you will find your crop in good shape about two weeks before and after Christmas. To get extra long stems on the Killarneys, allow only one break to develop after pinching out the bud. A good mulch of cow manure will be needed to bring on the crop in good shape. To pile the manure in ridges between the rows is better than spreading it evenly all over. Watering must be done a little more carefully now, although if the plants are growing strongly, it is not so easy to overwater them. Syringe early and have the house dry by night.

Ventilation is more important now than ever. Open up a little at a time as the temperature rises in the morning and decrease gradually as it falls late in the afternoon. It will be possible for quite a while to have the ventilators open a little at night, even if you are running steam. Never by any chance close the ventilators on mild nights and shut off steam to save coal. It is all right to do without steam on nights mild enough to allow the ventilators to be raised a few inches, but not otherwise. A night temperature of 56 degrees is right for most of the roses. Beauties and Mrs. Russell need 60 degrees at night. The outside temperature fluctuates greatly in the south. There may be a night or two when it is as high as 60 degrees and in twenty-four hours it may be down to 20 degrees or even lower. The effect of these fluctuations is more felt by the plants than if they varied from freezing to 25 degrees. While the lower temperatures occur only on a few occasions, they are apt to result in a decided check to the plants, as many houses are not piped sufficiently for these lower extremes.

On damp, cloudy days the temperature should be from 60 to 64 degrees, with a little steam and a little top ventilation. On bright, warm days it may get up to 80 or 85 degrees, and still be all right if the ventilators are opened enough. Keep a moving, buoyant atmosphere in the houses at all times and you will have little to fear from mildew. It is always safe, however, to paint one, or perhaps two, pipes in each house every week with a sulphur paint, as a preventive. L.

LILIUM GIGANTEUM IN SOUTH.

The bulbs of these liles should be potted up as soon as possible after arrival. Use good loam and at least one-fourth good cow manure. See that the soil is well broken up with the shovel and provide good drainage. When potting, it is always well to leave one inch of the pots to be filled later with a top-dressing of soil and manure in equal parts. This top-dressing takes care of the feeding roots at the base of the stem, and these are important factors in producing fine flowers. The pots can be set under benches in the carnation houses and left there until after the holidays. Give a good watering at first, and thereafter only enough to keep the soil moist. Coldframes, even when well protected with sashes, are not ideal places to start these lilies, excepting probably in the most southerly sections, where freezing temperatures rarely occur. L.

EVERGREENS FOR THE HOME.

One of the striking features of the demand as recently noted by many nurseries has been the increase in the call for evergreens for use around the city home. Indeed, so attractive has this opportunity for profit looked that some of the specialists in evergreens have prepared large stocks of the most adaptable varieties, even going so far as to offer them in tubs and window boxes as well as balled and baled, while many retail florists are finding evergreens a ready selling extra item of stock. Of course the first use of such hardy stock was around hotels and apartment buildings in New York, but it soon spread until now every small town has its homes with winter window boxes and tubs of evergreens, as well as evergreens on the lawn. Florists easily make sales when they propose, instead of taking the window boxes to storage for the winter, after the geraniums and vincas are killed by frost, that they be filled with hardy stock of rich green that will last the winter through.

CHICAGO CLUBS HOLD GET-TOGETHER DINNER

NOT in years has there been such a large attendance at any function of the Chicago Florists' Club as on the occasion of the amalgamation banquet of the club and the Cook County Florists' Association, at Hotel La Salle, October 7. A count discovered 108 present, whereupon the officers of the club agreed that there is nothing like the lure of a banquet and a good program for bringing out the stay-at-homes. The menu was sufficiently satisfying in itself, but when accompanied by a rapid fire of conversation and good-natured badinage, by way of sauce, it was highly delectable. Nor was the music forgotten, for piano and song entertained whosoever would listen.

Mr. Henderson Presides.

After the coffee, when the cigars were well lighted, H. N. Bruns, chairman of the banquet committee, introduced Alex. Henderson, the toastmaster of the evening. It has seldom been the club's good fortune to have one so well adapted to the duties of that office as Mr. Henderson. There was always the intimate, personal touch so necessary in introducing a speaker.

First on the list of speakers was W. J. Keimel, president of the club. He spoke on the benefits of the florists' club to the trade: Personal contact, coöperation, the broadening effects of conversing with others, not only in the same branch of the trade, but in all its branches; the opportunities the club affords the retailer of bringing his wares to the attention of the general public, thus increasing his business, which in turn would operate for the benefit of the commissionman and the grower.

The Horticultural Society was the subject assigned to W. N. Rudd, who spoke briefly of the altruistic aims of that organization and of its generous conduct in the past in all activities promotive of the love of flowers and the advancement of the florists' trade. Mr. Rudd also expressed for all the general satisfaction felt on this occasion of reunion of forces.

All of those present had looked forward to the pleasure of hearing E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., discourse on the roses of today as compared with those of the past. To the keen disappointment of all, it was learned that Mr. Hill had not yet returned from California. In his stead, Richard Salm made a few well chosen remarks on the Mrs. Charles Russell rose.

Wants Affiliation.

August Poehlmann was scheduled to speak on the Society of American Florists, but some unknown circumstance prevented his reaching the banquet hall. That he started in his automobile is an established fact, as Adolph Poehlmann testified. Toastmaster Henderson, always equal to the occasion, took this opportunity to remind those present that when the club can show 100 members of the S. A. F. on its roll it will be entitled to representation on the board of directors of the national organization. Then, without warning, he called on P. J. Foley. He, however, is never to be taken so unaware that he cannot acquit himself with credit.

Oddly enough, as he himself maintained, Leonard Vaughan was called on to regale the club with reminiscences of the trade. He divided his reminiscences into two classes: Things we want to forget, and things others want us to forget. By request, as he said, he confined himself to the first class.

If brevity is the soul of wit, A. T. Pyfer is indeed spiritual. His remarks on the carnation were of undoubted truth, but his audience would gladly have heard from him at greater length.

Flower Shows.

The superintendent of the fall flower show, Guy W. French, spoke earnestly of the support all florists should give to those who, giving their own time and energy, are putting their shoulders to the wheel to make this show the greatest in the history of the Chicago trade. He also expressed his keen appreciation of the confidence reposed in him by his fellow members.

The toastmaster referred to the national flower show to be held in Philadelphia and in this connection called attention to the fact that when the Philadelphians wanted a manager for their show they turned their eyes toward Chicago and said, "Let George do it." Everyone knows George Asmus. When you think of flower shows you think of him. And the national flower show was the topic of his talk. He told in an interesting way of the work being done and of the wonderful prize list—a list which totals $20,000 in value. Then he dwelt a few minutes on the coming Chicago show.

A guest of the evening was C. C. Pollworth, of Milwaukee. He slipped into the room quietly and found a place back of the toastmaster, but he did not escape the attention of that gentleman, who immediately introduced him as a speaker of the evening. Mr. Pollworth rose to deny this charge, and while doing so proved its truth by talking most entertainingly on the activities of the trade and saying many complimentary things about the Chicago club.

The Suburban Member.

To travel a thousand miles to attend a banquet is a most unusual thing. Yet that distinction belongs to H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg. He spoke briefly of Canadians, of conditions in Canada, and of the pleasure he experienced in meeting with old friends.

A sketch of the present activities of the Chrysanthemum Society of America was given by its secretary, C. W. Johnson. Some interesting features of the coming Cleveland show also were mentioned by him.

It was most fitting that the topic "How Flower Shows Help Business" should be assigned to N. P. Miller, for he has perhaps been as closely identified with those of the past as any man in the trade. After contrasting the number of florists in Chicago in the auto-show days with the number since the advent of the autumn exhibition, he laid emphasis on the show as an advertising medium. "What," said he, "made possible the popularity of the Mrs. Hadley, the Ophelia, the Sunburst, the Mrs. Aaron Ward and the Mrs. Charles Russell rose? The flower show! For without the agency of the flower show you cannot reach the public and Enclosed please find my check in settlement of advertising account to date.

I have learned something from your paper that I never knew previously, viz: A banker pays you 4 per cent on your money invested with him, but The Review pays 600 per cent, and more yet if you have the goods, on money invested in its advertising space.

Faithfully yours,

A. W. Warren.

create flower lovers that become flower buyers.''

How to Get Publicity.

In introducing the newly chosen director of press publicity for the fall flower show, the toastmaster said many complimentary things as to the energy and force of that gentleman. These expressions seemed a bit strong at the moment, but when Robert R. Brenton rose to address the club, and his sharp, dynamic utterance searched out every corner of the room, they seemed quite mild. In terse, punchy sentences he gave those present some facts to jot down on the tablets of their memories. ''Publicity,'' he said, ''is the easiest thing in the world to get, if you do your part. You want publicity—the papers want news. It's up to you to create news. To do this you must do something that was never done before. The flower show next month is your opportunity.''

The boutonnieres were Mrs. Charles Russell roses from the greenhouses of French & Salm, Union Grove, Wis. Among the table decorations were vases of Sunburst, Milady, Ophelia and Mrs. Russell roses, tritoma and delphinium. The latter were from Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs.

The Business Session.

The business session preceding the banquet was brief, yet into it was crowded much work of importance. Secretary French reported that he had collected during the last month more than $300. Applications for membership were received from Peter W. Hofelder, 3720 Ward street; Clarence B. Lemer, 3656 Ogden avenue, both of Chicago, and F. J. Littleford, Downers Grove, Ill. The following were elected to membership: Otto Amling, Ernst C. Amling and Herbert A. Amling, all of Maywood; August A. Frega, Bellewood, Ill., and John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind. The following were reinstated: A. C. Spencer, H. C. Wullbrandt, E. C. Pruner, Henry Wehrmann, E. F. Winterson, Jr., and Charles Swanson, all of Chicago, and Fritz Bahr, of Highland Park.

A communication from the Cleveland Florists' Club, inviting the Chicago club to send a bowling team to its fall show, was referred to the sports committee. A communication was received from John Young acknowledging his appreciation of the distinction conferred upon him in electing him an honorary member of the club.

Even under the pressure of short time, opportunity was made to discuss the advisability of entering a bowling team in the Chicago Mercantile League. The question was decided affirmatively by vote and the details referred to the committee on sports.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Samuel Murray, of Kansas City, Mo., in surveying the effect of his arrangement of cibotium, cocos, Adiantum Gloriosa and beautifully colored pineapples, remarked that the display window was the eye of the store and everything else should be in harmony, bespeaking the character of the establishment. An enthusiastic patron declared that Mr. Murray was an admirer of the Bard of Avon, for the walls of the store were an exact reproduction of the interior of Anne Hathaway's cottage. The whole arrangement was splendid; the two pillars ornamenting the icebox, the ascent into the sanctum, and, last but not least, the descent into the basement, which underlies the vault of a bank next door. The merry jingle of golden coin can be heard when all is quiet, but that is not often, for business has been unusually brisk. I was just in time to see Miss Hayden putting the finishing touches on some fine funeral pieces. A basket of Beauties and a piece composed of white delphiniums and white chrysanthemums were particularly pleasing to the eye. The crowning piece was a full-sized casket cover, with the center arranged as a mound and composed of Russells, cattleyas, valley and ferns. The price to be charged was given me in a whisper, for only thus could it be imparted. A trip to the greenhouses disclosed a splendid lot of begonias, among them the new variety, Mrs. J. A. Peterson, in a condition that would delight the Wizard of Westwood. Poinsettias and peppers were numerous. Nothing but plants are grown and Colonel Shays has ample scope to show his skill in this direction. Arthur Newell has no houses, but he keeps an eye on the market for the best material, with which his splendid store is well supplied. Messrs. Newell and Murray are joint owners of a ranch in the Texas Pan Handle, but do not wish to be classed as Texan panhandlers.

Robert S. Brown, of Kansas City, says he could have used 5,000 Rex begonias if they had been available. He hopes some enterprising craftsman will grow a good, healthy stock for next year. Mr. Brown has occupied the same spot for many years and intends, eventually, but not now, to retire to his farm.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co., of Kansas City, is making a fine display of a group of crimson cockscomb, surrounded by greens.

The George M. Kellogg Co., of Kansas City, is receiving some excellent stock from Pleasant Hill. Store Manager Parker says business is good.

Leon Foster, manager for Furrow & Co., Oklahoma City, invited S. S. Butterfield and myself to the weekly luncheon of the advertising men connected with the leading stores of the city. The informal talk that followed was interesting and impressed me more than ever with the wisdom of advertising one's goods in the trade journals. Mr. Butterfield gave a stirring talk on behalf of the Civic Improvement Association.

C. P. Mueller, of Wichita, Kan., has executed some pretty effects in the carpet bedding in the interior of the Exposition building. The most elaborate setting is a wheat field, showing the development of wheat from the stubble to the finished product. Standing at either end is an exact reproduction of a Dutch windmill. Many plants and cut flowers adorn the various exhibits, but wheat is everywhere; even the electric poles on the streets are covered. The wheat was woven by the Mueller staff before it was placed on the poles and stores.

The Hubbard Seed Store, of Topeka, Kan., secured six first premiums at the state fair. Competition was spirited. Arlo Hubbard, recently with W. W. Barnard Co., has charge of the greenhouses and is sending in some well grown stock. A shortage of French bulbs is reported, several consignments having gone down with the steamer Arabic.

NEW YORK.

The Market

The wholesale cut flower market has turned over a new leaf. Last week ended with a creditable record. It has been many a week since the outlook was so encouraging.

Some of the philosophers with years of experience say, "Wait a week or two, when the mum tide is high, and see the prices fall." One retailer said the quotations Saturday made him "feel like Christmas." Prices were better all along the line. Everything, even orchids, felt the uplift. Whether the advance has come to stay, is the problem everyone would like to solve. Perhaps the light shipments, and the natural rise in values when society comes to town for its winter season, may account for the improvement—for the banquet celebrations have begun, the President and his fiancee have been here, the October weddings are many and decorations liberal.

American Beauties are up to 30 cents again, and all roses are advancing, especially the novelties. Some of these are now $10 per hundred. For the rest a top of 8 cents was general last week. All grades were higher, except the smallest and short-stemmed roses. The No. 2's were worth $3 per hundred at the close of the week. Some grand stock of Sunburst, Hadley, Mock, Ophelia, Key and Russell found places in the gaily decorated windows of Fifth avenue and of Broadway.

Carnations, except the small ones and short-stems, still are below requirements, only a few being up to standard. The best advanced to 3 cents and 4 cents as the week closed. The market was almost bare of everything October 9.

Orchids have risen to 35 cents for the best. A few selects touched 40 cents. The supply is decreasing and it will be some time before they fall to the ridiculous quotations of September.

There are no more asters; gladioli are done and dahlias nearly so. The few good dahlias still arriving sell at $3 per hundred. It has been a good year for the dahlia.

Easter lilies continue scarce and firm at from 6 cents to 8 cents. An occasional sale is made at 10 cents. Valley was high all last week, 4 cents being easily obtainable. Even the short stock sold at $2 per hundred. A scarcity this winter seems assured and prices seem sure to go even higher than those now prevailing.

A dozen choice varieties of the chrysanthemum are bidding for public recognition, and a veritable flood is expected this week and next week.

The market has plenty of all other flowers of the season. No frosts have yet visited the immediate vicinity of New York. The rainy season seems to be over and Indian summer is still to come.

Selected dahlias are bringing excellent prices this week, especially during the general shortage of everything excepting chrysanthemums.

Enormous sales of boxwood have been made lately and large purchases are made weekly at the auctions. Palms and ferns are in great demand. Retailers are stocking up for the winter.

The October weddings are far more numerous than was anticipated. Nearly every retailer of reputation has booked his share of them. Society is returning to the city rapidly. There will be no travel to Europe until the war is over. Hence it will be a gay season in New York, and the florists expect the most prosperous winter they have known.

Club Meeting.

The usual meeting of the Florists' Club was held October 11 and the average attendance of over 100 was maintained. The exhibits were of a high standard, the turkey collation the best of the year.

Patrick O'Mara read resolutions on the death of Samuel Thorne.

F. R. Pierson, chairman of the joint show committees of the club and the Horticultural Society, made an interesting report. A. L. Miller moved the appointment of a committee on special prizes, and President Bunyard named F. L. Atkins, C. H. Totty, Max Schling, G. E. M. Stumpp, Wm. Duckham, L. C. W. Tuthill, R. J. Irwin, Julius Roehrs, E. C. Vick, Philip Kessler and F. H. Traendly.

Chairman Henshaw, of the Cleveland show transportation committee, recommended use of the New York Central, leaving New York at 5 p. m. and arriving at Cleveland 7 a. m. If a sufficient number attend, special rates and Pullman are available. A bowling team, led by Joseph Fenrich, will go.

A. S. Baldwin, of Madison, was elected to membership, and E. McCarthy was proposed. Messrs. Dinda, Baldwin, Gellhar and Sheepers were introduced and made brief addresses, pledging loyalty.

W. A. Manda received special mention for a fine assortment of show and cactus dahlias, which were highly commended.

Charles H. Totty showed his immense yellow sport of Chrysanthemum Mrs. G. Drabble, which the committee judged worthy of further consideration. Mr. Totty also staged a fine assortment of mums and dahlias, for which he received a vote of thanks.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., staged a fine assortment of mums, which received thanks and a cultural certificate.

P. W. Popp staged an assortment of over fifty dahlias, the exhibit being highly commended.

For Frank Dinda, of Farmingdale, Guttman & Raynor showed a large vase of that grower's new pink chrysanthemum, which scored eighty-five points. They also staged Charles Weber's Laura Weber, Victory from Rowehl & Granz and their white sport from Prosperity, the committee awarding these the thanks of the club.

Mrs. Stout, of Short Hills, N. J., who won high honors at the recent dahlia show with her Sunshine, again exhibited it and was highly commended.

Various Notes.

R. Vincent, Jr., president of the American Dahlia Society, announces that a meeting of this organization will be held in New York, November 6.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co. has opened a retail store at 182 Faxton street. The company has had large advertisements in the Sunday papers, featuring bulbs of all kinds.

B. Willig, of Poughkeepsie, a skillful grower of mums and carnations, was a recent visitor. He reports George Saltford, formerly a wholesale florist of West Twenty-eighth street, as now superintendent of parks in Poughkeepsie.

The Onaway Florist was reopened at 903 Seventh avenue, October 11, with George C. Sims again manager.

Frank Verona, who opened a flower department in one of the big stores in Philadelphia, with H. Steinhoff, of West Hoboken, is again back in the service of C. C. Trepel. He has the management of the retail branch at One Hundred and Seventh street and Broadway.

The conservatory of Mr. Trepel's store at Eighty-ninth street and Broadway is now open. This is one of the show places of upper Broadway and reflects much credit on the builders, S. Jacobs & Sons, of Brooklyn.

Mr. Dean, head salesman for Charles Millang, has been seriously ill with intestinal inflammation. He is a son of James Dean, former president of the S. A. F.

Riedel & Meyer, Inc., opened their new store, at 49 West Twenty-eighth street, October 11. The usual floral and gold-plated horseshoes were in evidence, and congratulations were many.

Badgley & Bishop, Inc., have succeeded Badgley, Riedel & Meyer. The company has a new auto, which Mr. Badgley says is the first auto delivery car used in the wholesale cut flower business in New York.

Joseph Trepel has one of the handsomest stores in Brooklyn, at his headquarters on Lewis avenue and Hancock street.

The New York Florists' Supply Co. is already quite at home in its large new store, at 103 West Twenty-eighth street. Five rooms are devoted to the cold storage department.

Young & Nugent have been busy with funeral work. One large delivery coach last week carried over a dozen wreaths and designs, with orchids and roses, to fill one family order.

A. Kottmiller's store has been entirely made over and is now one of the neatest and prettiest on Madison avenue. His prize-winning conceptions at the dahlia show were a practical advertisement that will bear fruit.

A. T. Bunyard is back from his successful summer season at Newport, R. I.

Gunther Bros. have done their share again this year in popularizing the dahlia. John Gunther, who is a baseball fan, journeyed to Philadelphia last week to root for the Boston Red Sox.

Charles Millang is still bringing to the market his own growing of gladioli.

There is a daily novelty window at William Kessler's, the handiwork of Mr. Bradshaw. It was stated erroneously in The Review last week that William Kessler had been with his brother, Louis, on a trip in the west.

A. Herrmann, of 404 East Thirty-fourth street, says business is making its usual advance for the year. Foreign importations are greatly restricted, but he finds that the demand for local stock is steady and increasing. Mr. Herrmann is represented on the road by his son, who has just returned from a southern trip.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society held a meeting October 11, at the offices of Traendly & Schenck, 436 Sixth avenue.

Samuel A. Woodrow is out of town, superintending the landscape contracts on several large estates.

C. H. Totty's wonderful mums are arriving in the New York market. As usual, they top the metropolitan display.

Two new retail flower stores were opened last week on Madison avenue. The stores, respectively, are those of H. H. Burns, at Fifty-second street, and A. M. Rigo, at Sixty-eighth street, both excellent locations.

The bowling experts of the New York Florists' Club will open the season at Thumm's alleys November 1. John Miesem and John Donaldson were in the city last week from Elmhurst, N. Y., attending the preliminaries.

J. Austin Shaw.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Early mums are coming in now in much better quantity. Chrysolora is arriving and it is such an easy doer that everybody grows it. Roses are improving, as are carnations. Valley and lilies remain scarce.

Show Publicity and Plans.

Among the many novel advertising plans being carried out by the publicity committee of the Cleveland flower show is the use of the popular poster stamps. These small stickers are reproductions in miniature of the post cards used by the show. It is the committee's aim to get the widest circulation possible for these stamps and a quantity will be sent to anyone, anywhere in the United States, upon request. The local growers and dealers connected with the show and all exhibitors will be provided with them for use upon their business correspondence between this time and the date of the show.

Permission has been granted the show committee to place bay trees along Euclid avenue, from Public square to the Coliseum entrance, during the exposition. Each bay tree will support a small card directing the observer to the show. The publicity committee expects to make this the most attractive and novel scheme of street advertising that has ever been used in the city.

The entertainment committee is busy with the plans for the varied entertainments and arrangement of the business and semi-social program during show days. This committee is headed by G. W. Smith, and his aids are C. J. Graham, George Jacques, S. N. Pentecost and F. C. Witthuhn. The rooms of the Cleveland Florists' Club, Hollenden hotel, will be the meeting place of the various organizations as well as the scene of many social events.

Provisions will be made for the meetings of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, which has its annual exhibition and convention in conjunction with the show; for the fall exhibition and meeting of the American Rose Society, and other important events. The executive committee of the American Carnation Society will have a place on the program, as will the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, which comes for an adjourned meeting, and the adjourned meeting of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio.

Various Notes.

The Jones-Russell Co. opened its branch store, at Euclid avenue and the Taylor Arcade, October 9. It occupies half of the room with a confectioner. Tasteful corsages filled the window, and the icebox and counter were well supplied with choice cut stock, crotons, cyclamens, begonias, ferns, etc. The store is in charge of H. G. Evans, formerly of Holm & Olson, Inc., Minneapolis.

T. J. Kegg & Co. opened their new store at Madison square, Seventy-ninth street and Euclid avenue, October 9.

Frank Ritzenthaler is rapidly improving. He is able to sit up now and begins to talk of bowling in the flower show tournament. Let us hope he does.

Charles Balluff, formerly of Chicago, Springfield, Ill., and Indianapolis, is now with C. M. Wagner, 1327 Euclid avenue.

Headed by Frank R. Williams, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., and George W. Smith, of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange, about forty wholesalers, store men and growers met at the Hollenden hotel, October 12, to attend a farewell dinner given to L. F. Darnell, who, for twenty-seven years, has been treasurer and general manager of the J. M. Gasser Co. Songs were sung, speeches made and a general good time was enjoyed by all. Mr. Darnell leaves in a few days for a trip to his old home in Maryland.

Visitors this week were Charles Loechner, New York; Edwin J. Fancourt, Philadelphia; W. E. Cook, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., New York.

LANCASTER, PA.

During the last week the temperature several times nearly reached the freezing point. Many of the carnation growers are cutting fine stock for this time of year. The early mums are at their height, with Chrysolora all aglow with big, bursting buds.

Rudolph Nagel is erecting two fine new houses. His mums are among the best seen so far.

Fred Ritchy is erecting two houses, each 24x117.

Charles M. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., is finishing a new house, 50x400, which is already planted to peas.

Peter Brown's establishment, where geranium cuttings and pansy plants are the specialties, is in the pink of condition.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira H. Landis, of Paradise, are receiving the congratulations of their many friends. It's a boy.

A number of Lancaster county florists motored to the York county fair last week. The exhibits of H. S. Brandt, the Schaeffers and August F. Plitt were especially noteworthy. Harry A. Schroyer again judged the floricultural classes, in his usual able manner.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, held a dahlia show in the department store of Watt & Shand, where many choice new varieties were on display. It is interesting to observe the attention paid to these shows by garden lovers.

Elias Lefever's new house, 36x100, at Fertility, Pa., is planted to Mrs. Ward carnations, from which he is cutting choice stock.

W. A. Hammond's display of mums last week was unusually fine for the season. H. K. R.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business last week was about the same as the preceding week, except for a decrease in funeral work and some increase in counter trade. One balanced the other. A heavy frost last week put a finish to all outdoor stock, which will make a big difference in the prices of cut flowers from the greenhouses, if the chrysanthemums do not come in faster than is expected. There were plenty of all kinds of cut flowers last week and they cleaned up rather fast. All cut flowers now arrive in much better shape, especially as regards the firmness of the flowers and the length of stems.

From all reports the indications are that business for the coming winter is going to surpass any previous year.

A visit to the different growers will show a big increase in the growing of potted plants, cyclamens and begonias being the principal stock grown.

Across the state line business is good. A much larger counter trade has been noticed, with about the usual amount of funeral work. Kansas and Missouri nurserymen also report a good fall business and are pleased with the way orders have started to come in.

Various Notes.

The Forest Hill Greenhouse is sending in some good white and yellow mums. The company expects to build more houses in the near future.

Adolph D. Mohr has a fine lot of pot plants for Christmas and also a nice lot of young table ferns.

The American Royal Livestock and Horse Show was well attended by people carrying large mums.

R. S. Brown & Son report a good shipping business. They are now cutting yellow and white mums and their carnations have commenced to come in more strongly.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. had a good run on funeral work last week. They are cutting plenty of good carnations and some extra good mums.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. is showing some nice cyclamen plants in bloom. They have devoted more space this year to pot plants than in any previous year. Hayes Riker, foreman, and Thomas Martin, from the greenhouses, were in the city last week.

Miss J. F. Murray reports business good. She made a blanket of 750 Ophelia roses last week.

Walter R. Heite has more space this fall devoted to sweet peas than ever before. His mums are good and he is cutting a lot of yellow at present.

Henry Kusik is away on a three weeks' trip to Billings, Mont.

T. J. Noll & Co. report that the demand for stock is heavy, especially from out-of-town customers. It is hard at times to fill some of the orders, as there is not enough stock to meet the demand.

Arthur Newell has received a large lot of Chinese and Japanese novelty wares that he thinks will make a hit with the public. W. J. B.

DENVER.

The Market.

Business is improving steadily, as a heavy frost has killed all outdoor flowers. Carnations are good and there are just about enough of them to supply the demand. Roses are arriving in large quantities and are exceptionally fine. Some good cattleyas are to be had and they find a ready sale. Snapdragons, lilies, chrysanthemums and valley are also offered. Good pot plants are to be had, including cyclamens, primulas, and such begonias as Lorraine, Cincinnati, Chatelaine, B. luminosa and Prima Donna.

Various Notes.

Frank Fraser, for several years with the Alpha Floral Co., has bought the Arapahoe Flower Shop.

The Boldt-Lundy Flower Shop has added an Overland delivery car to its service.

The Mauff Floral Co. has just finished glazing the new houses at the Logan avenue place.

Herbert Claussen, formerly with the Park Floral Co., expects to open an up-to-date flower stand in the new Union station as soon as it is completed.

The Park Floral Co. had the decorations for a large dinner party given by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., at the Country Club. The decorations were carried out with yellow chrysanthemums and autumn foliage. The favors for the ladies consisted of corsages of orchids and valley.

The Speth Floral Co. has moved into the new store at 1201 East Colfax avenue, just three doors west of the old location. The new store is highly attractive and is one of the finest in Denver. R. S.

Des Moines, Ia.—C. W. Crum is no longer associated with U. L. Crawford. Mr. Crum was for some years with various Chicago retailers and came here to join the forces of the Iowa Seed Co., going with Mr. Crawford when that gentleman opened his new store in the Shops building.

New York, N. Y.—The freighter from Marseilles that arrived October 5 brought 120 cases of immortelles, consigned as follows: McCallum Co., forty; Russin & Hanfling, fifty; Pennock-Meehan Co., thirty; Bernard, Judae & Co., fifty; Downing & Co., forty-six.

Batavia, N. Y.—Mrs. Adelaide Bey Noack, wife of Gustav Noack, was buried October 6. She died two days earlier at her home, 3 Richmond avenue, where she had been suffering from an attack of blood poisoning which began eight months ago. She was born at Rochester, N. Y., in 1880, and married Mr. Noack in June, 1911. She was a member of the Presbyterian church and of the Eastern Star. She is survived by her husband, by her son, Norman, and her daughter, Elsa, and by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Bey, of Rochester, and a brother, Leonard Bey, Jr.

OBITUARY

George G. Goldbach.

George G. Goldbach, of Lancaster, Pa., died at St. Joseph's hospital, October 4. Death was due to blood poisoning, which was due to picking a pimple.

The funeral was held October 8. The Lancaster county florists gathered at his home and later attended the services at St. Anthony's church.

Mr. Goldbach first worked at the trade with A. D. Rohrer & Bro., where he spent a number of years. Later, with his brother Herman, he conducted a retail and market business. A few years later the partnership was dissolved and the deceased erected an extensive range of greenhouses. He purchased a store on North Duke street, where he disposed of most of his flowers. He was an enthusiastic member of the Lancaster County Florists' Club.

Mr. Goldbach was born in Lancaster, being a son of Lawrence Goldbach, who survives. His mother is dead. Mr. Goldbach is survived by his wife, who was Miss Ida Ransing, and three children, Agnes, Jervis and Gertrude. He was a brother of Mrs. Oscar Hilbert, Herman, Amelia, Mary, Frank and Elizabeth Goldbach, of Lancaster, and Charles Goldbach, of Philadelphia. Mr. Goldbach was a member of St. Anthony's church, the Knights of Columbus, Pennsylvania Catholic Beneficial Society, the local lodge of Moose, Conestoga Council, No. 463, Royal Arcanum, the local aerie of Eagles and the Lancaster Florists' Association.

Oglesby Paul.

Oglesby Paul, landscape gardener of Fairmount park, Philadelphia, died suddenly while on a visit to friends at Boston, Wednesday, October 6. The funeral took place from his home at Villa Nova, Pa., October 9. His wife survives him.

These are the facts—the cold, sad facts. A life full of energy and enterprise ended before reaching its prime. A man who has done much for horticulture has gone.

Mr. Paul was a landscape gardener of ability. He layed out and improved many fine places of Philadelphia and elsewhere. His work at Fairmount park was marked by a determined effort to turn the waste spaces to account. The parterre, or sunken garden, was only planted during the summers before his time. When Mr. Paul assumed command the garden was planted each fall with tulips and narcissi, so that there was always a crop in the ground. The great lecture room in Horticultural hall, used at rare intervals, was turned into a cactus house. The guard room and front room in the hall were removed to give more greenhouse room. The echeveria-alternanthera dates that had ornamented the east end bank of the hall for twenty years or more were replaced by Scotch firs of dwarf habit. The new type of cannas were introduced. These are a few of the improvements made by Mr. Paul. They suffice to show that his work was fully abreast of the times. Phil.

Oshkosh, Wis.—In a recent automobile accident, Joseph A. Oles, 256 Spruce street, sustained severe bruises of his neck and shoulders.

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

TALK about sticking close to your work: Violet Rose is a lady florist in the City of Brotherly Love.

THE flood of chrysanthemums is rising day by day, but thus far the trade channels have been ample to take care of them. There will be more mums to market in the next six weeks than ever before.

THIS should be a fine season, if quantity of stock prepared for sale means anything. Practically everyone has spent a busy summer getting ready for autumn and the first frost finds florists as a class better prepared than ever before to put good stock on the market in quantity.

NOT only are the azaleas coming, but it can be said that a part of them actually have arrived. The Noordam, which sailed from Rotterdam September 18 and reached New York October 4, settled the question. It brought 945 cases of plants, most of which were azaleas.

IT is common to ask for a remittance with order, and frequently someone admonishes buyers not to delay, but a recent ad told the whole story in "Dash, Please." It was a case where the appreciative proofreader did not have the heart to interfere with the work of an inspired compositor.

THERE is an old saying, "Busy as Bees," and that Liverpool concern of the name must be living up to the reputation, for twice it has sent The Review advertising orders across the Atlantic by wireless. The Review receives frequent orders by cable, but Bees is the first advertiser to make regular use of marconigrams.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

THREE YEARS.

Plummer, F. W., Kewanee, Ill.

TWO YEARS.

Robbel, A. W., Marine City, Mich.
Meader, H. E., Dover, N. H.
Murphey's Sons, R. H., Urbana, O.
Karlick, John, Thomas, Wash.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

BUSINESS INCREASES.

The increase in business in the last week has been so great as to justify special comment and it is noteworthy also for the fact that it has been general over the principal cut-flower-consuming section of the United States. First frosts and general weather conditions have operated to reduce supplies on nearly all markets and the increase in demand has been such as to give the trade increased confidence in the fundamentally sound condition of the business. The result, for the moment, has been a cut flower market in many cities too tight for the best results. What is wanted is a supply of good stock large enough to fill all orders at fair prices.

WHAT THEY SAY.

The worthiness of a trade paper as an advertising medium is invariably determined by the esteem in which it is held by its readers. It is that ironclad gauge that has won for The Review special distinction. The following letters are just two of the testimonials that arrived in the course of a day's business. If all the bouquets were printed, this entire page could be filled every little while:

I have taken The Review for the last five years and hope to receive its weekly visits for the next twenty-five years. Enclosed find $2 to cover two years' subscription.—H. E. Meader, Dover, N. H., October 4, 1915.

I happened to see a copy of The Review some time ago. There was more information in that one copy than in a book I paid $1.50 for. That is why I am anxious to get in my subscription. —Sherman L. White, Gallipolis, O., October 5, 1915.

PROSPERITY IN BIG CROPS.

The florists of the United States never have had a bad year when farm crops were good.

Consequently the government crop report of October 7 may be taken as a sort of blanket insurance policy for the trade—only it must never be forgotten that "the Lord helps him who helps himself." Good business seldom comes to a sloth.

The grain crops for 1915 are even better than last year, when, it will be remembered, they were the means that gave middle-western florists a normal year's business while trade in the other parts of the country was dull. Here are the latest government figures:

Crop	Oct. 1, 1915	Final Estimate, 1914.
Corn	3,030,000,000	2,673,000,000
Wheat	1,000,000,000	871,000,000
Oats	1,520,000,000	1,141,000,000
Barley	237,000,000	194,953,000
Potatoes	368,000,000	405,921,000
Apples	71,600,000	84,400,000

Prices are not now quite so high as a year ago, but no doubt this is better for florists as a body.

Another government report that spells prosperity for florists has to do with exports, which in part are grains, but mostly manufactured articles—war supplies. The exports are the greatest in the history of the United States, while imports are light, giving us now the greatest balance of trade in our favor ever known.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Review would like to publish a weekly news-letter from each city of importance in the trade. There are several in which the number of people engaged in the business, and their activities, afford interesting matter that now goes unchronicled. Among them are:

Utica, N. Y.
Louisville, Ky.
St. Paul, Minn.
Minneapolis, Minn.
Houston, Tex.
New Orleans, La.
Omaha, Neb.

Who wants to put these towns on the trade map?

NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER.

Weekly weather forecast, issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., for the week beginning Wednesday, October 13, 1915:

For the Region of the Great Lakes—Local rains are probable about October 15 in the upper lake region; otherwise generally fair weather will prevail. It will be somewhat cooler in the upper lake region, but on the whole temperatures will be moderate.

For the Upper Mississippi Valley and Plains States—Fair weather will be followed by rain October 14 or 15 and again by generally fair weather during the remainder of the week. It will be warmer in the plains states and probably somewhat cooler about October 15 over the northern districts.

For the Ohio Valley and Tennessee —Rains October 13 will be followed by generally fair weather during the remainder of the week without decided temperature changes.

For South Atlantic and East Gulf States—Partly cloudy weather with occasional showers is probable October 13 and 14, with generally fair weather thereafter. Temperatures will be near and slightly above the seasonal average.

For the West Gulf States—Showers October 13 will be followed by generally fair weather during the remainder of the week; no decided temperature changes, although somewhat cooler in the interior.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Not in years has the Chicago market experienced in October the degree of shortness that has prevailed during the last few days. There is not one item that tends to the long side. And the general condition has been heightened by the fact that all outdoor stock is off the market. Every wholesale house has been compelled to turn away business, while the cutting of orders and substitutions have been quite the order of the day. Yet in spite of these conditions, regular patrons, both city and out-of-town, of the various houses have been well cared for.

The supply of Beauties is far short of the demand and prices are accordingly stiff. Quality in a part of the stock is all that could be desired, but there are many growers still fighting black spot and the flowers received, because of the cold weather, are unusually tight.

Anything in the shape of a rose, be it long or short, fancy or poor stock, clears with an astonishing rapidity. Short roses are practically unobtainable, but as all lengths are scarce, there is never a quibble as to length, quality or color. The variety that leads this week is the one that chances to be most abundant.

Even if the market were long, the carnations that are being received would call forth favorable comment. Good color, solid flowers and stiff stems of fair length characterize the stock generally. Little opportunity, however, is afforded for inspection, as carnations are in view only as they are in transit from the receiving to the shipping boxes or the city bundle.

Chrysanthemums, too, are short of the demand. The second batch of early mums is remarkably tardy in arriving on the scene. Chrysolora is the best variety now available. Unaka is available on orders for pink. Valley continues scarce, and is not always forthcoming even when a stiff price is offered. Easter lilies and rubrums find a ready sale. The receipts of cattleyas are cleared without difficulty. Gardenias are insufficient in supply to meet the requirements of the market. Single violets are arriving in small numbers, but no doubles have been reported; they are remarkably late.

Greens are no exception to the general rule and are selling well.

Growers Will Move.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association, which has been in its present location, 176 North Michigan avenue, for a period of five years, closed a deal October 12, at a meeting of its directors, whereby it secures under a lease, expiring April 30, 1921, 4,000 square feet of street floor space in the new Le Moyne building, at Lake street and Wabash avenue. The new location is most advantageous, extending alongside the main corridor of the building, with entrance on Wabash avenue. The arrangement of the building permits the use of two addresses, 184 North Wabash avenue and 31 East Lake street. The association will take possession Novem-

The Fall Show.

The executive committee for the fall show holds a weekly meeting at the Hotel Morrison. A. Henderson, W. N. Rudd, W. J. Keimel, George Asmus, Guy W. French, E. F. Kurowski, Arnold Ringier, E. Kanst, Robert Brenton, Payne Jennings, N. P. Miller and M. Barker were in attendance at the session October 7.

"Routine business connected with the coming exhibition, to be held at the Coliseum November 9 to 14, occupied the attention of the committee the greater part of the afternoon," reports the chairman of the publicity committee, "and reports from chairmen of the various subcommittees showed substantial progress. Manager French announced that a large number of special prizes have been secured and others promised. Arrangements are being made for extensive exhibits from the various park systems and plans for Robert Brenton's novel flower dance feature are going well. The name of Professor H. B. Dorner, of the University of Illinois, has been added to the lecture program, his subject being "Garden Flowers," with an extensive exhibit of stereopticon slides. E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., has promised a talk on garden roses. Exhibitors in the non-competitive trades' display will be given one trade ticket good the first day of the show for each square foot of space taken.

"E. F. Winterson has been appointed chairman of the trade tickets committee."

The following will be invited to serve as a jury of award: E. A. Kanst, Chicago, as chairman; Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; James Wilson, Des Moines, Ia.; W. A. Kennedy, Milwaukee, Wis.; J. E. Matthewson, Sheboygan, Wis.; August Koch, J. F. Kidwell, C. A. Samuelson, A. Lange, George Wienhoeber and H. N. Bruns, Chicago.

A little group of young ladies prominent in Chicago society posed on the roof of Hotel La Salle, October 12, for the benefit of the flower show. Each held some flowers, Beauties or chrysanthemums, while the photographer and publicity director, R. R. Brenton, took the pictures and saw that the wind carried nothing of value off the roof. The ladies, who are members of the board of directors of the Sunshine League, will assist in the Various Notes.

So far as heard from, the first azaleas to reach Chicago this season are those of Peter Pearson. They left Rotterdam September 18 and opened up in fine condition in Mr. Pearson's place October 12.

October 12, at St. Henry's church, Miss Cecelia Muno, daughter of John Muno, 2464 Kenilworth avenue, and sister of George Muno, was wedded to H. C. Steffen. The bride is well known in the trade as the niece of N. J. Wietor and his brother, Henry, and as the sister-in-law of Dominick Freres. Adam Zender, Peter Reinberg and George Reinberg are also numbered among her kinsmen. Mr. and Mrs. Steffen will make their home in Rogers Park.

was what might be termed a diary-album of Mr. Bassett's overland trip from Pasadena to Chicago and return last summer. The album contains over 100 views taken by him while on the road and each view is described in a connected series of lectures that were written on the spot. Mr. Washburn says the Motor Age magazine desires to publish both views and lectures, as they are not only of great interest, but possess a practical value for motorists.

After a trip through the Weiland & Risch greenhouses in Evanston, John Risch is more persuaded than ever that the Mrs. Moorfield Storey and the Champ Weiland roses are in a class by themselves, as evidenced by the way in which they are forging ahead of other varieties in the matter of growth.

H. E. Philpott, president of Pyfer & Co., is spending the week at Wilmette, lending a hand on the work of Pyfer & Olsem, which he enjoys more than most men do a vacation.

Visitors.

E. W. Guy, one of the oldest florists in the state, is up from Belleville on a Masonic errand, but is spending his spare time at points of trade interest.

A visitor on the trade this week is Frank Smith, of the Smith & Fetters Co., Cleveland, O.

Returning from a five weeks' visit to California and Oklahoma, Charles T. Stevens and his wife, of Plymouth, Mass., stopped in Chicago last week and were entertained by T. E. Waters, manager of the supply department of the Poehlmann Bros. Co.

Among those who visited the market this week was E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., who stopped here on his way home from California.

The annual dahlia show of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, October 7. Splendid exhibits were staged and competition was unusually keen. The class of table decorations was one of the main features of the show, there being eight entries. R. Jones, gardener to Percy Chubb, won first prize for the best table decoration. J. Adler, gardener to H. Ladew, was second, and H. Jones, gardener to Dr. Ayres, was third.

Among the principal prize-winners in the other classes were J. Kirby, gardener for Mrs. W. J. Matheson; P. W. Popp, gardener for Mrs. H. Darlington; P. Charbonnard, gardener for Mrs. C. D. The Market.

The exciting question of the day, a question that will not finally be settled until after The Review goes to press, is an important one. Have the dahlias been frozen? The wholesalers are evenly divided on the question; some say dahlias are over, others that they are not. The fact that a killing frost visited this neighborhood on the night of October 10 is undisputed. The protected lowlands suffered most. The higher, more exposed fields merely got a chill that injured the open blooms in some cases, but did not spoil the plants. The flow of dahlias continued October 11 and 12 in a lesser degree, but whether it will continue after that is the question. It seems probable that some of the growers will have dahlias when this column appears and that there will be a fair, but not heavy, supply of these showy fall flowers.

The jolt given the dahlias is untimely. Generally, the wholesalers are rather relieved when Jack Frost closes the dahlia season, but today matters are reversed. The market is so sparsely supplied with greenhouse-grown flowers that the dahlias are a necessity to fill the gap. Conditions are unusual. There are so few flowers in proportion to the demand that practically everything sells on sight and many orders are refused. Such a state of affairs has not existed for a long time. It is primarily due to the cool weather immediately following a period of extraordinary heat. This hot spell knocked out cosmos, hurt the dahlias and shook things up generally, both outdoors and under glass. It is probable that the acute market conditions will be relieved in a few days, as new shippers are coming in nearly every day, growers that have not been heard from since the fall season opened.

The supply of carnations is nearly double that of two weeks ago and is still increasing, while chrysanthemums are certain to increase steadily for several weeks. Easter lilies and lilies of the valley have been in most active demand. So, too, have been roses, of nearly any good variety, and chrysanthemums. Dahlias have sold well; orchids are in better demand.

This, briefly, is the condition of the market in mid-October, a condition that affords reasons for looking forward to a good season.

Current Events.

John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists, has sent out a well written circular letter to all the florists in Pennsylvania, urging them to join the national society now. The strong argument is used that in these times of overproduction our interests may be advanced by concerted efforts, when singly it would be impossible. Attention is called to the fact that the National Flower Show to be held in Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2, is sure to be a great success and that, in view of this fact, the society deserves the support of every florist in the state. The membership dues of $5 for the first year cover admission to the show, so that every florist who joins may feel that he is not only helping the national society, which has done much for him in many ways, but he can also go in and out of the show with the back of his coat chalked, so to speak.

Ranstead street is becoming a floral thoroughfare from a wholesaler's standpoint. Edward Reid originally discovered Ranstead street; so, taking his place as a center, we find Stuart H. Miller and the Joseph Heacock Co. on the east, while the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange and Walter Davis lie to the west. Returning to the starting point, it is interesting to note that the discoverer of Ranstead street is prophesying a good season, the best we ever had. This is amazing to those who know Mr. Reid. He is a man of the Thomas Cartledge type—"Go slow, boys"—one who believes in looking before leaping, one who does not believe in taking foolish chances; in short, a conservative business man. It seemed to me that this statement, coming from Mr. Reid, was most encouraging, because the general view is that while business conditions are better than they were one year ago, they are not nearly so good as they were two years ago. I was further interested in learning that Mr. Reid had some Chrysoloras that have been snapped up at $3 per dozen, the top market price so far, and more of the same variety ordered in advance. When asked about roses, Mr. Reid said that his Beauties were of the Reid brand and that he considered Ophelia and Sunburst to be sterling market varieties. After a look at the icebox, which was certainly in a healthy condition, I left with the earnest hope that Mr. Reid's first optimistic prophecies might be fulfilled.

Various Notes.

Walter Davis opened for business at 1713 Ranstead street October 11. His first day was encouraging.

Recent visitors included Herman Warendorff, of the Ansonia, New York; Mrs. John Walker, of Youngstown, O.; Miss Lydia Schultheis, of Scranton, Pa.; T. Malbranc and Mrs. Malbranc, of Johnstown, Pa., and George W. Hess, of the Botanic Gardens, Washington, D. C.

L. B. Eastburn, of Kennett Square, Pa., is proving that dahlias can be successfully grown on Pennsylvania soil.

George Anderson believes that John Cook's rose, My Maryland, is the greatest commercial variety in cultivation today.

W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., should have been credited with a choice exhibit of dahlias, I think they were all seedlings, at the Florists' Club meeting October 5.

William J. Baker is receiving calla lilies, the first seen here. They are of fine quality.

Professor George B. Kaiser spoke on "The Orange and Its Relations," before the Germantown Horticultural Society, October 11.

George Aeugle reports a strong demand for lilies and valley at the store of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. The supply of carnations is increasing.

Raymond Brunswick smilingly remarked that the interest in the world series overshadows everything else.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

There was a general good feeling all around last week, because business showed a great improvement. Instead of the former conditions, when benches were heaped up with outdoor stock, everything moved nicely and cheap stock was practically out of the question. As there is nothing except a few dingy asters, candytufts and coreopsis from outdoors, we are relying entirely on greenhouse stock. The demand for roses was exceptional last week. The roses have been in splendid condition of late, the cooler weather having benefited them greatly. American Beauties are good and have a rich color. Easter lilies are neither plentiful nor so good as they might be. Callas are scarce. Valley is in better demand and is good. Carnations are not up to their usual condition, but they are improving. They are not overplentiful. Japanese lilies were useful last week for funeral work. Tuberoses are excellent and sell fairly well. A few bachelor's buttons and forget-me-nots are handy in corsage and basket work. Orchids and gardenias are good and sell well. Fine consignments of yellow and white chrysanthemums arrive each day and are quickly disposed of. Dahlias in many shades and varieties were the feature of the week. They have been of first quality, but not too plentiful. There is plenty of green stock for all demands.

Various Notes.

The new flower shop on East avenue, of which Edwin C. Armbrust is proprietor, had its formal opening last week. There is every indication that the business will be a success. There were numerous flower gifts for the opening, one handsome vase of American Beauties coming from the store force of S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, where Mr. Armbrust was employed for some time. The store is artistic in its appointments, the walls being done in silver gray, and the desks, tables, screens, etc., are finished in fumed oak. The refrigerator, a McCray, is in white enamel. A number of friends and acquaintances visited the store during the opening week.

The extensive alterations at the store of H. E. Wilson, 88 East Main street, have been completed. A large window graces the front of the store, the entrance being at the side. The window has a tiled floor of green and white design. Large mirrors give length to the window. At the top of the window is trelliswork, worked into a diamond design. Strong reflectors add to the effect at night. The color scheme throughout the store and window is green and white.

Ernest F. Hoehl, of S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia, was in town last week.

The largest stock of bulbs that ever came to Rochester is on display at James Vick's Sons' store. The company reports business as being unusually brisk, aside from the many mail orders. At the farm, the work is heavy. Most of the seeds from the annuals are being taken care of. The crop is large.

The Market.

There has been steady improvement in market conditions since the coming of cold weather. The supply has slackened and there is a better demand for all varieties. Northern roses are meeting with a better demand. There is a shortage of good white roses. Killarney Queen and Double White Killarney are bringing up to $8 per hundred. Of the locally grown roses, Killarney Brilliant, Ophelia, Radiance and Taft are moving steadily. Mock roses are holding their own, considering the lateness of the season. Carnations continue scarce. The top price is about $3 per hundred. The market cleans up daily on them. Violets have made their appearance. Chrysanthemums are finding a better market. The heads are larger and stems and foliage better. White and yellow October Frost still predominate. Orchids are finding a better outlet. Easter lilies are scarce. There is a good demand for lily of the valley and not enough to supply the wants.

The stores were exceptionally busy last week with funeral work. Also the announcement of the forthcoming wedding of President Wilson and Mrs. Norman Galt produced quite a stir in florists' circles. The shipping business to the south in the last two weeks has been good.

Various Notes.

Among Washington's royal rooters who went to Philadelphia to witness the baseball battle between the Phillies and Red Sox were William F. Gude, Adolph Gude and George W. Hess. After the games, William F. Gude and Mr. Hess went to Barnegat Bay, where they were the guests of Commodore John Westcott.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Last week there was a noticeable increase in the demand for all kinds of cut flowers, but the supply was inadequate, both as to quality and quantity. Chrysanthemums are the feature of the market and, with a few days of sunshine, they will bloom in all their glory.

Growers hereabouts were much relieved last week by the arrival of the first bulbs and azaleas. There had been some doubts as to whether these would come this year.

Various Notes.

The flower department of S. S. Kresge, 191 Westminster street, was opened last week by A. Solomon.

John J. Kelley, Valley Falls, had forty designs for a funeral recently. He reports good business.

George L. Stillman, of Westerly, has had exceptional success in exhibiting his dahlias at the various fairs and shows this fall. He recently received several prizes at the Trenton, N. J., fair.

S. J. Reuter & Son, Westerly, have been awarded the contract for grading and laying out the new addition to the Oak Grove cemetery, at Ashaway.

The Lapham Floral Co., of Central Falls, will open a store in the new Fanning building, on Broad street, Pawtucket. W. H. M.

The announcement made last week that G. S. Congdon, of Bristol, had decided to discontinue business, was incorrect. Mr. Congdon has repaired the greenhouses damaged by hail this summer and is doing business as usual.

Wholesale Florists

A. L. YOUNG, Pres. and Treas.
H. R. SCOMMODAU, Vice-Pres.
F. LIGHTFOOT, Sec'y

54 West 28th Street
NEW YORK

WE ARE PLEASED to announce the incorporation of A. L. Young & Co., which has been organized with a broad charter to conduct a Wholesale Florist business, and any other business appertaining thereto, on co-operative principles, and which will therefore not be a close corporation. It will be open to all interested in the florist business, growers, retailers, etc., to become members and participate in the conducting of a business which they are all more or less interested in and thoroughly acquainted with, offering all an equal opportunity for promoting the welfare, progress and prosperity of their own business, and sharing in the benefits and profits of their own enterprise and industry.

We believe this the ideal method of conducting a wholesale florist business, especially under present conditions. It is desirable to secure a number of practical co-workers, therefore the capital stock has been divided into preferred shares at the popular price of $10.00 each, Full Paid and Non-assessable.

The President is reliable and capable and has conducted a profitable business successfully for over ten years and will continue, together with the co-operation of other members thoroughly trustworthy and reliable, to conduct this business even more successfully, which started July 1, 1915, entirely free from any liability or debt of any kind.

No officer shall receive any salary for his services as such until a minimum dividend of at least 6 per cent has been earned on the stock. Systematic audits and reports compiled by competent accountants will be made at regular meetings.

The earnest support already given is gratifying, and is a sufficient guarantee of the success of the company and an assurance of the still greater success it is destined to become.

Only people interested in the florist business are invited to join us and become members. Send for particulars. Do not put this off until next month or next week. DO IT RIGHT NOW.

Yours for business,

A. L. YOUNG, Pres.

The Market.

During the early part of last week business was only normal, but during the latter half trade picked up wonderfully. The cool weather decreased the supply of stock and made flowers scarce, especially roses. October 9 the wholesale stores sold out completely and were compelled to refuse orders on some things. Mums are arriving in larger quantities, but not enough to supply the demand. Golden Glows still

THE THIRD EDITION

OF THE

Album of Designs

(A Book Every Retailer Needs)

THE original Album of Designs was published in response to many requests from florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book that could be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it was not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it would be when ready for use. With the publication of this album it became possible to show the finished work in beautifully printed pictures. The first edition sold like hot cakes, and a second edition went quickly. Now a third edition is off the press. Everything is in it—all the standard designs and many new and heretofore unpublished pieces.

96 pages, nearly 300 designs and decorations, beautifully printed on heavy glazed paper, handsomely bound in a cover that will stand wear are the most numerous of the mums. Smith's Advance and a few Pacific Supreme are coming in. Roses still are shy. Carnations are improving in quality, but there are not enough of them. Dahlias are coming heavily, but only the best are sold to any advantage. Single violets and peas were added to the list last week, but they are small-flowered as yet. Valley and lilies were in good demand and rather scarce, many early fall weddings requiring all the available stock. The only thing plentiful is greens, in which an abundant supply of both asparagus and smilax is available.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore was held October 11, with President Hamilton in the chair. There was a good attendance and an interesting meeting. Prof. T. B. Symons, secretary of Maryland State Horticultural Society, was present and outlined the plans for the coming fall show. Judging from his remarks, it will outclass any others held heretofore. William Feast, chairman of the floral committee, told of the work so far accomplished. The talk given by R. Vincent, Jr., on California, was interesting and well received. He spoke of the wonderful scenery on the way and especially of the beauty of the c ast from a floricultural standpoint. The financial secretary read a list of names of members in arrears for dues and all owing over one year's dues were ordered suspended from the club. After the question box was discussed a late adjournment was taken.

street, October 4 to 8. A good collection of flowers was on display.

The Leo Niessen Co. is well pleased with the service given by its new auto truck.

The various committees of the Maryland Horticultural Society held a meeting at Hotel Rennert, October 7, to discuss plans for the Maryland week exhibition at the Fifth Regiment armory, November 16 to 20. The floral committee, of which William Feast is chairman, has paid special attention to the classes for amateurs, a new class that was added to the premium list in order to interest the many amateur gardeners of the city.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. is receiving some of the first single violets of the season. Hoosier Beauty roses are arriving from James Hamilton, of Mount Washington. Many of the florists believe that Hoosier Beauty is the coming red rose. Its keeping qualities and fragrance are big points in its favor.

Frank Kocourek is the proprietor of a new flower store recently opened at 1834 Ashland avenue.

The new committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, appointed at the request of the Women's Civic League for the purpose of coöperating with the league in its backyard beautifying movement, recently made a tour of the many yards that had undergone treatment by the league. Gardens had been made out of litters of tin cans and weeds. This movement deserves the hearty support of the trade, for it results in good business for the florists. W. F. E.

The Market.

With the weather cold and snappy, the flower business has increased fully fifty per cent. There is again noticeable the call for flowers for table decorations and corsage work that has been almost nil during the summer months. A heavy frost put an end to dahlias, gladioli and all outdoor flowers and this also will have a tendency to restore the cut flower market to its normal stage. Choice chrysanthemums are to be had now in various colors, and roses, especially the Killarneys and Lady

Club Meeting.

An important meeting of the Toledo Florists' Club was held October 5, at the Hotel Secor. Plans for the annual chrysanthemum show, to be held November 7 to 9, were decided upon. The dates were arranged so as not to conflict with the show to be held at Cleveland. The show, it is anticipated, will be the most elaborate ever given in Toledo. It will be staged at the Museum of Art. C. Steffens, manager of the museum, together with the art board and the directors of the Florists' Club, are coöperating to make the show the best yet. William Krueger, of Krueger Bros., is chairman of the show committee. The committees on display, advertising, reception and arrangement are hard at work. Prizes will be awarded for the best groups of mums in clusters of twenty-five and for the best single varieties; also for pompons and chrysanthemum plants. Prizes are offered for the best baskets of flowers and for the best table decorations. The leading retail florists have already secured space and the prizes for table decorations seem to be most sought. The reception committee is arranging a fine program for out-of-town guests, and has the assistance of the Toledo Club.

The annual election of officers took place at this meeting, after a banquet served to fifty members. George Bayer was elected president, Harry Heinl, vice-president, and A. C. Kneisle, with Schramm Bros., secretary and treasurer. As a token of gratitude and appreciation to Max Spanner, the retiring president, and George Schramm, former secretary and treasurer, J. L. Schiller, on behalf of the club, presented to each a silver loving cup.

Various Notes.

During the last three months two new flower stores have been started in this city. One of these is the Park Flower Shop, at 726 Madison avenue. The second is the Lindley Floral Co., situated a few doors from the former stand of the Art Floral Co. Henry E. Klunder, formerly with the Art Floral Co., is manager of the new store. Both of the stores are doing a nice business, considering the time of the year. All the local florists wish them success.

Miss G. Winters, forelady for George Bayer, is confined to Robinwood hospital as the result of a nervous breakdown.

Metz & Bateman have been busy with work for the conclave of the Knights Templar.

Harry Heinl, of West Toledo, is cutting some fine Killarney and Ophelia roses.

Some fine carnations grown by Henry J. Miller were on display in a local shop window last week. Mr. Miller will make an exhibit of carnations at the fall flower show.

Krueger Bros. have some splendid poinsettias for pans for the holiday trade. They have been sending thousands of these to wholesale florists in Chicago and Philadelphia.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists — those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received----------	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders--------	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florists's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

The Market.

Prices were high for most flowers in the wholesale market last week. Chrysanthemums were more plentiful. A greater number of varieties were shown and the flowers were of better quality. The poorest blooms cost $1.50 to $2 a dozen, wholesale, and the better flowers $3 and $4 a dozen, with some of the fancy flowers going above that. Carnations were of better quality and more plentiful, though not yet so abundant as they will be in a few weeks. These cost 3 cents and 4 cents each in the wholesale market.

Roses were fairly abundant and of good quality. Easter lilies were numerous and brought good prices. Cockscomb was displayed in several stores. Asters are still coming into the market, but each week they are deteriorating in quality. Some of the retailers are decorating their windows in part with wild flowers and autumn foliage. Orchids are more plentiful and are a feature in the window displays of several florists.

Inquiries are being made regarding the filling of fern dishes for winter and the filling of winter window-boxes. Firms that deal in bulbs are displaying and advertising them prominently. Some florists are also pushing the sale of small nursery stock suitable for fall planting.

the neighborhood is normal. The counter trade is small.

Dominico Orgo, 171 Ferry street, states that while business is a little quiet with him, it is a little better than it was last year at this time, and he looks for good business during the coming winter. Many in his locality were out of work last winter and spring and now have old bills to pay, besides laying in their winter supplies and clothing. Mr. Orgo thinks, however, that the florists' business will be good at Christmas and after.

A certificate of incorporation has been filed for C. E. Bauman, Inc., whose registered office is in the Woodruff building, Rahway, N. J. The corporation was formed to engage in horticulture and gardening. The authorized capital stock is $125,000. The incorporators are Camille E., John R. and Adolph H. Bauman.

Philips Bros., 938 Broad street, Newark, report that the fall trade is opening up well. There has been much funeral work in the last two weeks. Cheesecloth has been spread under part of the glass in their greenhouse to protect the big palms from burning.

Joseph F. McDonough, 376 Belleville avenue, says he has had much funeral work lately and also many weddings for this time of year.

Jacob H. Harvey, 406 Broad street, has just done the decorations for a big wedding. He reports that counter trade is increasing and that the outlook for the fall is good. In Mr. Harvey's window is a card on which is the following: "Most florists keep flowers. We don't; we sell them. Everything's fresh but the clerk."

Charles Luthy, 363 Springfield avenue, reports business quiet. There is some funeral and wedding work, but the counter trade is still small and there is not the life in business that there ought to be.

The twelfth annual autumn show of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, held last week in the O. U. A. M. hall, Main and Park streets, Orange, was a great success. There were thousands of dahlias and a great variety of fruits and vegetables. William A. Manda, of South Orange, had a fine display of dahlias. He won six firsts and a sec-

The Market.

It is many months since flower stands in the various wholesale stores and markets have been as well cleaned up as has been the case the last few days. A real, old-time activity has prevailed and growers have been greatly encouraged by the advance in prices. The turn in the tide was bound to come sooner or later and it is hoped now that the season's business will go well ahead of that of a year ago.

Chrysanthemums are arriving in greater abundance, but not in sufficient volume to cause any slump in the value of other flowers. Golden Glow and Advance are most in evidence, with Unaka and October Frost arriving in smaller lots. Some pompons are also seen. Good prices are being realized. A few fancies have made $3 to $4 per dozen, but the general average has been $8 to $16 per hundred.

Roses continue to do well and everything cleans up at slightly higher prices than a week ago. A week of cloudy, cool and damp weather materially reduced supplies. Carnations have advanced still further. A few fancies have reached $5, but the general run of stock has commanded $2 to $4 per hundred. Single violets arrive in small quantities. Lilies are scarce and dearer.

HOTEL ANSLEY
Twenty-five years catering to the retail trade.

Valley is of better quality with cooler weather, and has sold well. Gladioli and asters are small and poor. Other outdoor flowers still appear, but they now cut little figure. Cattleyas are abundant and there is a moderate supply of gardenias.

In flowering plants, nice yellow pompon chrysanthemums are available, in addition to ericas, cyclamens and begonias. Pot plant trade is much improved.

Various Notes.

The first get-together of the eight bowling teams in the new Boston Florists' League brought out a good attendance at the Arch street alleys October 7. The winning teams were Carbone's, the Pansies, Galvin's and the Flower Market, the losers being Zinn's, H. M. Robinson's, Flower Exchange and Wax Bros. Carbone's team made the highest score, 1,259, the highest individual score being 337, by Bresnahan, of the Boston Cut Flower Co.

William R. Nicholson, of Framingham, is cutting some splendid Unaka and October Frost mums. His carnations never looked better. Specially fine now are Alice, Matchless, Pink Delight and Benora. For yellow marguerite cuttings there has been an almost insatiable demand.

John Barr, of South Natick, has completed installing a new water supply from the river near his establishment, using a pressure tank electric pump, self-started. It works splendidly. Carnations with him are in good condition and are flowering freely. The demand for field plants was good except for scarlets, which no one seemed to want.

At the big Brockton fair, October 5 to 9, H. M. Robinson & Co. took first premium for best vase of roses, with fine American Beauties. Dahlias were largely shown by J. K. Alexander, W. D. Hathaway, F. L. Tinkham and others. Messrs. French and Hathaway judged the flowers, Duncan Finlayson

A. G. Pembroke, salesman for A. A. Pembroke and F. J. Dolansky, is enjoying a vacation in New York and vicinity. George Gordon acts as salesman in his absence.

J. A. Nelson, of Framingham, is cutting some excellent Nelrose and Phelp's White snapdragons. In carnations, which are his specialty, he is sending in extra fine Alice, Pink Delight, Beacon, Matchless, White Enchantress and Benora.

Frank Edgar, of Waverley, is cutting a fine crop of Golden Glow chrysanthemums. He has a large and well grown lot of cyclamens coming along for the holiday trade.

Inquiries at the seed stores show that bulbs are selling remarkably well, although we have had only light frosts to cut down bedding plants. Roman hyacinths are all sold. There is a strong call for Darwin and other late tulips.

N. F. Comley, of Burlington, is sending in quantities of single violets and a large variety of carnations, including Matchless, Pink Delight, Benora, White Wonder, White Enchantress and Beacon.

A special section for plants and cut flowers is being reserved at Mechanics building, where a county fair, embracing all products of the soil, will be opened October 23, closing October 30. The Boston Coöperative Flower Market will take charge of the flower end of the exhibition, with N. F. Comley as manager. Schedules are ready.

A. H. Hews & Co. report an almost unprecedentedly heavy call for flower pots. Of some sizes they are practically cleaned out and overtime work is necessary to keep abreast of orders.

at East Milton, are already making shipments of pansies and pompon chrysanthemums to W. A. Hastings.

Do not forget the Gardeners' and Florists' Club's meeting October 19. There will be an attractive lecture, good exhibits and much business of importance to transact. Those planning to take the landscape classes should send in their names at once to the secretary.

A. A. Pembroke, of North Beverly, finds Alice to be a remarkably free-flowering carnation. Champion, Beacon, Matchless, Benora and Gorgeous all are in fine shape. No crimson is being grown this season. Sweet peas are coming along well and will soon be in flower.

Chandler Bros., of Tewksbury, know how to grow Golden Glow mums. Their flowers realize $2.50 per dozen, where many go at $1. They grow Bonnaffon in large numbers.

The annual autumn exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, formerly known as the chrysanthemum show, will be held November 4 to 7.

The following list of names, to be voted on November 13 at the annual election of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, has been posted: President, R. M. Saltonstall; vice-president, Walter Hunnewell; trustees for three years, Geo. E. Barnard, William C. Endicott, A. F. Estabrook, J. K. M. L. Farquhar; nominating committee, A. F. Estabrook, Richard Hittinger, J. G. Jack, Thomas Roland, J. L. Smith.

J. Leach & Son and John McFarland, of North Easton, are each sending in superior shipments of lily of the valley.

The Market.

During festival week, which was held here last week, there was great activity among the retailers. There was a big demand for stock and the supply equaled the demand. The heavy frosts the latter part of the week, however, cut off outdoor stock and wholesalers found it difficult to fill all orders. Prices stiffened. The shortage was too sudden, as not only was the outdoor stock cut off, but the greenhouse stock also suffered by the sudden change. The small quantity of stock that arrived October 11 was placed on advance orders, so that the wholesale market is practically cleared. Chrysanthemums are coming in freely. Some splendid October Frost, Smith's Advance and Golden Glow sold well. Roses are of better quality. The cold weather seemed a good stimulant for both the color and stem. Ophelia, Ward, Russell and Beauty are true to form. Carnations, too, have greatly improved. The Enchantress varieties, Beacon and Ward are among the best. A few violets are coming in. From now on, these should prosper. Orchids had a good call last week. Longiflorum and rubrum lilies, valley and snapdragons sell well. Smilax, asparagus and adiantum had a big call last week.

ber 4. A great deal of important business was transacted. According to Secretary Joseph Deutschmann, all officers were present and the attendance was large. At the next meeting of the association a committee will be appointed to represent the association at the meeting of the American Carnation Society, and to help the committee of the St. Louis Florists' Club in entertaining the attending delegates.

The Retail Florists' Association will hold a meeting October 18 at the Mission Inn Garden. This is to be the most important meeting of the year. Secretary Fred C. Weber, Jr., is enthusiastic about the interest displayed by the members.

Charles Beyer says street fairs have their charms. As his firm's store was right in the midst of the South Grand avenue business men's street fair, considerable business in decorating and transient trade was done.

Alexander Johnson, of Wellston, was the only florist who exhibited at the big fair held in Maxwelton park and he carried off all the prizes. A number of florists visited the fair October 7. Mr. Johnson says that fair week brought him considerable business.

The decorations furnished by the C. Young & Sons Co. for the big ball of the Veiled Prophet at the Coliseum were more elaborate than for any previous occasion and elicited a great deal of favorable comment.

The flower department at the Grand Leader is making a big display of fall bulbs. Frank Sanders, formerly with the Sanders Nurseries, is now connected with this department.

It is reported that a large delegation from here will go to the Cleveland flower show next month. Perhaps a bowling team can be entered in the tournament. The Big Four route makes a rate of $13.25, as one-way fare to Cleveland. This matter will be brought up at the next meeting of the Florists' Club.

A. S. Cerny says he has cut back all his roses, with the exception of Russell and Ophelia. This will hold back his rose cut during the mum season. Mr. Cerny's place in Kirkwood is in the best of shape and he looks forward to a successful season in growing roses.

R. F. Windler, formerly a prominent retailer here, but now of Rogers Park, Chicago, is consigning to the Windler Wholesale Floral Co. a splendid lot of well-grown roses, which sell well.

Joseph Hauser cut as many as 5,000 of his new single red dahlia daily, last week. These were disposed of by the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., at good prices. It looks as if Mr. Hauser had struck a gold mine in this variety.

Grimm & Gorly furnished the decorations for the automobile show at Forest Park Highlands last week. It was a big order and was nicely executed. This firm reports a big improvement in business since the cold weather set in.

W. A. Rowe, of Kirkwood, is cutting some fine blooms of his yellow sport of Smith's Advance, and several thousands are ready for cutting. The Windler Wholesale Floral Co., which handles this stock, says it is a good seller.

The Strohmeyer Floral Co., in the south end, has discontinued business. Fred Strohmeyer, who was head of the concern, now is with the M. M. Ayres Floral Co., on Grand avenue.

Mullanphy, Florists, will move this month from the present location, at Seventh and Olive streets, to the southeast corner of Eighth and Locust streets, the former location of the Mercantile Trust Co.

The cold, bright days of last week greatly improved the quality of the violets. The growers of Kirkwood, where the bulk of the violets come from, promise an even greater crop this season than in any previous year.

Among the mum growers in the south end who have a fine stock of both cut flowers and pot plants, are the Bourdet Floral Co., George B. Windler, Charles Beyer, Wm. Schray & Sons, John Held and John M. Walther. All report a number of orders ahead for pot plants.

A number of growers from the suburbs and nearby towns visited the wholesale district last week. Among them were W. J. Pilcher, W. A. Rowe, Phil. Goebel, Gus. Vennemann, A. Jablonsky, William Edwards, A. H. Ahner, O. C. May, Hugo Werner, J. F. Ammann, A. S. Cerny, Aug. Hartmann, Hugo Gross and Joseph Hauser.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

W. ATLEE BURPEE, JR., and Howard M. Earl are on the Pacific coast.

HOLLAND bulb travelers already are canvassing the trade for orders for 1916 crops, almost coincident with delivery of the 1915 crop.

MRS. M. W. JOHANSEN, secretary of the Johansen Seed Co., Los Angeles, is recovering from a nervous breakdown resulting from overwork.

A DISPOSITION to advance the price of some of the standard varieties of tulips is reported, as the result of stock having cleaned up unexpectedly fast.

CABLES to Ollioules make it appear that no more Paper Whites can be obtained this year. So far as reported, no one is cabling for Romans.

E. DEAN HICKOX, treasurer of the Hickox-Rumsey Co., Batavia, N. Y., has submitted to an operation for a kidney disorder after being confined to his home for several weeks. He is reported as convalescing satisfactorily.

SECRETARY KENDEL this week has sent to members of the American Seed Trade Association the thirty-third annual volume, containing the stenographic report of the San Francisco convention and the usual other association matter.

W. E. HAILE, Monticello, Fla., recently completed a trip among the growers of velvet beans for seed in Florida, Alabama and Georgia. His observations lead him to believe no more than half a crop will be made, as the result of drought and the ravages of caterpillar.

F. W. BRUGGERHOF, president of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League and of J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York, celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday anniversary this week. He was born of Holland parentage, in Prussia, October 13, 1830. There probably is no older man actively engaged in the seed trade, and certainly none more revered.

JOSEPH SCHILDER, of Schilder Bros., Chillicothe, O., was in Chicago October 6 to 8, superintending the shipping of onion sets and contracting for the sale of onion seeds for 1916 delivery. Mr. Schilder, who has been traveling over the various growing districts of the central states, is of the opinion that seed for white onion sets will be remarkably scarce next year.

ONION SETS AND SEED.

White onion sets are so damaged by wet weather that the sample, according to A. H. Smith, treasurer of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, is quite unsatisfactory. Yellow sets are much better; red are between the two. Onion sets as a crop are decidedly short. There are few first-class whites at any price. Most of the whites will not keep, under present conditions, until they reach their destination. Prices, accordingly, will be unusually high next year, and the man who stores stock is facing a probable loss of from thirty to forty per cent shrinkage on both sets and large onions. Speaking of onion seeds, he said that flat varieties are practically out of the market, as are also White Portugal and White Globe. There is yet some stock of Yellow Globe and Red Globe to be had at good prices. Those who have not covered their onion requirements should locate their supply as soon as possible, as virtually all the stock in the country is now held by dealers who will keep it for their own trade.

All deliveries coming in from California are showing, in all varieties, a shrinkage of from ten to twenty per cent.

CORN IN NEBRASKA.

William Emerson, manager of the Western Seed & Irrigation Co., Fremont, Neb., went out October 9 to inspect some of the sweet and field corn crops at Columbus, Oconee and Monroe to see what effect the killing frosts of October 7 and 8 had upon the corn. "Every crop I looked at," says Mr. Emerson, "indicates a large yield, with large ears, but extremely late and backward, Early Red Cory, Early Minnesota and Stowell's Evergreen sweet corn all being soft and far from out of danger. Field corns largely are soft and many of them light and loose on the cob, indicating light weight corn.

"We do not consider any corn in Nebraska north of the Platte river safe from repeated heavy killing frosts or hard freezing weather, and it is a question if more than a small percentage of the corn in the section where the seed corn is usually obtained will be suitable for seed purposes. Many crops, if saved at all, will have to be handled and dried on the ear at a heavy expense, which the growers cannot afford at the low prices the trade is willing to pay."

A DICKINSON LEASE.

Record has just been made of a lease by the Albert Dickinson Co., seed merchants, from the Sanitary District of Chicago of a tract of about eleven and one-half acres of ground on the main channel, west of Western avenue and south of Thirty-first street, for a term of ninety-nine years from October 1, at an aggregate term rental of $309,925. The rental is provided for at the rate of $2,300 a year for the first five years, $2,875 per annum for the succeeding forty-five years and $3,450 annually for the remaining forty-nine years. On a five per cent basis of capitalization the property is given a ground leasing valuation of $62,600. The terms of the lease provide for the erection within seven years of buildings to cost at least $150,000, of which buildings costing not less than $50,000 must be erected within five years. The property involved comprises part of the leasing company's large new plant, which covers more than seventy acres.

IOWA SEEDSMEN MEET.

At the annual convention of the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association, which was held at the Iowa hotel, Keokuk, Ia., October 6, the following officers were elected:

President—George Kurtzweil, of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines.

Vice-president—C. G. Ouren, of the Ouren Seed Co., Council Bluffs.

Secretary—A. M. Eldridge, of the Henry Field Seed Co., Shenandoah.

Treasurer—John T. Hamilton, of Hamilton Bros. Seed Co., Cedar Rapids.

The seed houses of the state were well represented, some new members were added and general good fellowship prevailed. The members were the guests of and were royally entertained by Talbott Bros. Seed Co., of Keokuk.

The matter of a weekly letter to members of the association was presented by Henry Field, of Shenandoah, and the secretary was authorized to issue this letter, which will contain information of interest to the trade, the different members reporting to the secretary each week. The gist of the letters will be weather and crop reports, legislative news, long and short stocks, etc. The secretary is now ready to hear from the members.

UNCLE SAM'S SEEDS.

October 6, at Washington, the general supply committee opened bids on a number of lots of seeds for supplying the needs of various branches of the government service during the period from November 1, 1915, until June 30, 1916. The bids did not concern the supply of seeds for the congressional seed distribution, contracts for which will not be awarded until next January. The seeds wanted are for planting at the Arlington experimental farm, at the farm of the national asylum for the insane and at the zoölogical park in the suburbs of Washington. Following were the specifications:

Lbs.	Kind	Purity	Germ.
250	Alfalfa	98	90
500	Alsike	98	90
200	Red clover	98	90
330	White clover	98	90
1,185	Kentucky bluegrass	80	70
1,098	Redtop	85	85
.....	Creeping bent	85	85
6,562	Rye	99	95
45	Timothy	98	90
.....	Tall meadow oat	85	85

It is explained at the office of the general supply committee that bids were opened several months ago to supply the above seeds, etc., to the government for use during the first three months of this fiscal year, beginning July 1 last. The government contracts along this line are divided into periods of three months and nine months respectively, it is stated, because some of the crops are not harvested until after the early bids for contracts to be awarded for the period beginning July 1 have to be prepared. Under such circumstances the seedsmen and the government agreed that it would not be practicable to prepare satisfactory bids. Samples of seeds are submitted in connection with the bids.

SEED BEANS GET OFFICIAL RAP.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture is advising farmers to save their own seed beans and to avoid commercial seed beans so far as possible. In a circular just out the department says in part:

"Bean growers who would avoid a repetition next year of the heavy losses from disease suffered this season are advised to give their personal attention to the immediate selection of a stock of seed beans free from disease infection. They should select the seed beans in the pod and not after threshing. They should simply pick the pods that are free from all spots, save and thresh separately. The planting of infected seed is primarily responsible for the troubles experienced. Weather conditions greatly influence the subsequent development of disease, but clean seed on clean land will go far toward giving a clean crop, even in a season like the present, which has been exceptionally favorable to the development of disease and unfavorable to the growth of the bean crop.

"Two bean diseases are commonly prevalent, anthracnose and bacterial blight. Both attack and spot the pods, penetrate them and enter the beans, remaining dormant over winter under the seed coats, where they cannot be reached by disinfectants. When the beans are planted, these diseases attack the young seedlings, causing a root rot, and blighting of stem and leaves, and if the weather is cool and wet, they spread again to the pods.

"As far as possible each farmer should save his own seed. Beans have been so generally affected by disease that the farmer should not rely on ordinary so-called northern-grown seed or elevator stock for planting. If he has to buy seed he should make certain that it has been selected from disease-free pods. Examine all threshed seed carefully and if it shows suspicious spots or other evidence of disease it should not be used. Home selection also will tend to build up a strain adapted to the locality and better than seed brought from a distance."

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

The Mangelsdorf Bros. Co., of Atchison, Kan., has moved its offices to the new wholesale building, where there are better facilities for handling the rapidly increasing business. Frederick Mangelsdorf is in charge. Carl Mangelsdorf will manage the store, under the title of the Seed & Flower Store.

The item in The Review of September 30 concerning Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, should have read 900 carloads instead of 900 cartons. While this company handles large numbers of carton packages, the shipment of 900 carloads of seed was actually the record for the season.

F. W. Barteldes, of the Barteldes Seed Co., Lawrence, Kan., says that a good corn seed crop can be looked for.

The S. G. Trent Seed Store, of Hiawatha, Kan., was prize-winner at the Panama-Pacific Exposition for Boone County White corn, which harvested 117 bushels per acre.

The Ross Bros. Seed House, of Wichita, Kan., supplied many of the seeds that produced the splendid exhibits entered by Sedgwick county at the recent wheat exposition. The fruit section was exceptionally well filled. An apple called Wolf King measured fifteen inches in circumference. Reports from the Rocky Ford, Colo., district say that melons are not doing well. Vines are much spotted because of the excessive moisture. W. M.

DUTCH BULBS.

There were 831 cases of Dutch bulbs aboard the steamer Noordam, which arrived from Rotterdam October 7. This shipment was considerably smaller than any of the five previous arrivals and indicates that the importations for this year are coming to an end. The shipments usually slacken at this time and cease altogether by the middle of November. The following consignments were entered at the port of New York:

HOW TO MAKE MONEY.

Do you know that a case of Horseshoe Brand Giganteum, 7 to 9, costs only $15.00 and contains 300 bulbs—the best quality in the world? And do you know that a grower of ordinary ability should be able to get at least 1000 blooms from that case at Easter time—worth from $100.00 to $150.00 at retail? There are few businesses that yield such a percentage of profits. Real live, wide-awake fellows are going to make big money in the florist business in the next five years, and a lot of that money will be made in lilies. There is nothing better for general use, and now that retarded, or Cold Storage bulbs are a success, you can have them at any time in the year. If you have not ordered the bulbs yet, it is time you did, as they are now ready for delivery for Easter flowering. Grow as many as you possibly can, because they are money-makers. Be sure to get Horseshoe Brand Giganteum, because the brand makes all the difference in the world—not just because we say so, but because it is so. They are used by all the largest growers and most of the smaller ones, too. Order now.

Not how cheap but how good.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

BLIGHT ON TOMATOES.

I have mailed you a Ponderosa tomato and a piece of the vine and should like to have you give your opinion as to the disease it is affected with. I would call it either blight or rust, caused by the damp, inclement weather. All are affected alike. I have grown them on the same ground before, with no bad results. I had some this year on fresh soil, but they were affected the same way. Please let me hear from you as soon as possible.

C. M. K.—Wis.

This is evidently a bacterial blight, probably caused in the main by the inclement weather which we had during a large part of the summer. The trouble might be aggravated by growing the tomatoes in the same ground in successive seasons. It is always best to give this vegetable a fresh location each year. For bacterial affections of an acute nature, such as this, we are really without any remedy. It may never recur again with you, but, to guard against a possibility of its recurrence, I would carefully collect and burn all the plants and fruits, as various insects are known to disseminate the bacilli which cause the trouble. Therefore, clean the ground well, give it a dressing of lime, plow it and leave it rough over winter. Rotate your crops regularly and, given suitable soil and normal summers, you should not have this blight again. C. W.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.

The autumn show of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society was held at Fireman's hall, Oyster Bay, October 5 and 6, and was proclaimed a success in every way by the large number who attended. There were many beautiful displays of flowers and also some fine collections of vegetables and fruits. George Ashworth, James Bell and George Wilson acted as judges.

The principal exhibitors were: Joseph Robinson, superintendent for Mrs. W. R. Coe; Alfred Walker, superintendent and C. Erickson, gardener, for Howard C. Smith; Michael O'Neill, gardener for Albert Strauss; James Duckham, gardener for E. F. Whitney; Henry Gibson, gardener at Eastover Farm; Frank J. Kyle, gardener for Mrs. C. L. Tiffany; Arthur Yanuchi, gardener for W. A. Delano; John T. Ingram; James Duthie, gardener for E. M. Townsend; John Devine, gardener for J. A. Blair; John Sorosick, gardener for J. A. Garver; Frank Petroccia; Frank A. Gale; David Hothersall, gardener for George Bullock.

William Tricker, of Arlington, N. J., showed two new tender nymphæas, namely, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Panama Pacific, and secured a certificate of merit. They were much admired. Mr. Tricker says they are good for conservatories. A. R. K.

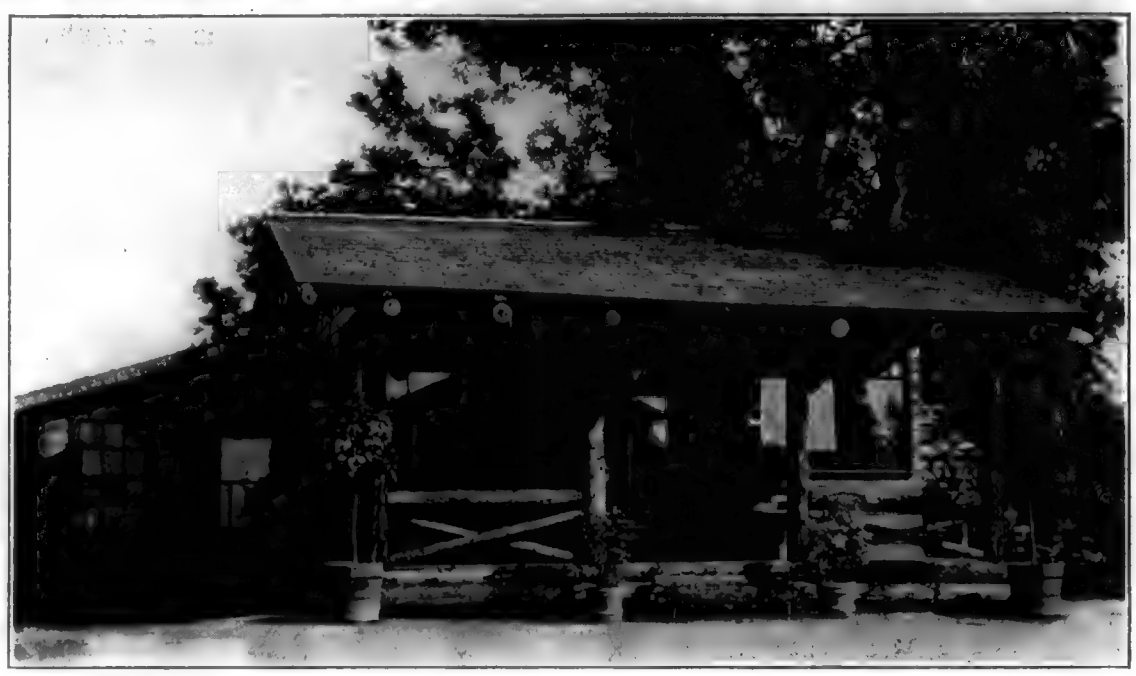
PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT



Lompoc, Cal.—Mrs. Edwin Lonsdale expects to remain here for some time, being a little fearful of eastern winters.

Fresno, Cal.—At the flower show held in connection with the Fresno district fair, September 28, the Fancher Creek Nurseries won nine first awards, five seconds and one third. Their exhibits included phloxes, dahlias, foliage plants, begonia plants, ferns, geraniums and fruit trees.

NEW STYLE OF STORE FRONT.

A store that is unusual in both design and material is that of H. A. Hyde, of Watsonville, Cal., shown in the illustration on this page. The front is of redwood logs and plate glass, presenting a most unusual appearance, yet one not inappropriate to his section.

Mr. Hyde completed his fifth large greenhouse last month, and now has ample facilities to handle the retail trade of his section. During the slack period in the flower business he has been keeping busy with the shipment of calla bulbs.

H. A. Hyde's Flower Store of Redwood Logs, at Watsonville, Cal.

GOMPHRENA GLOBOSA.

Enclosed find two blooms of an "everlasting" flower. They are grown by Japanese here in San Francisco, or at any rate are sold by them. Whether it is a variety of helichrysum or not, I do not know. I have no plant to send, only the two blooms. Please give me the name of them if possible, and tell me where to procure seeds. The colored bloom may be dyed. I want to procure some seed for one of the growers of cut flowers here in San Francisco. A. C.—Cal.

The flowers enclosed are those of Gomphrena globosa, and the seeds may be procured from any good seed house. The colored bloom is not dyed, and there are many other tints besides those of the two flowers sent. Gomphrena globosa should be sown in March or April thinly in flats or frames, and transplanted to the open ground when the seedlings are large enough to handle. H. R. Richards.

TO MAKE HYDRANGEAS BLUE.

We should like to grow blue hydrangeas, but know preciously little about their culture. We think the color is artificially produced by the application of iron in some form to the roots of the plants. In what form is the iron applied, and how often? T. L. C.—Cal.

It is believed by some growers that by the use of certain chemical constituents in the soil the color of hydrangeas can be changed. Some have tried the use of iron filings incorporated with the soil, and believe these have caused flowers to become blue which previously were pink, or have heightened the intensity of color in those already blue. It is certain that plants will frequently flower blue one year and pink the next, and vice versa. If you care to try the experiment, secure some iron filings, or other small iron particles, and mix them in your compost at the rate of one quart of filings to each bushel of soil. Personally, I cannot say definitely whether iron will really make your flowers blue, but it will no doubt help. Plants grown near the seashore are usually of a much more intense blue color than those grown inland. The influence of the salt air and the lower night temperature seems to be quite favorable to hydrangeas. Heavy feeding, if continued after the flower heads turn white, will have a tendency to bleach out the color of the flowers. C. W.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Business continues to show considerable improvement and the prospects are bright for a good season. The better class flowers clean up daily at the principal wholesalers' stores and only a small percentage goes to the waste barrel. Outdoor roses are improving and I noted some especially fine Cochets, both white and colored. Chrysanthemums are coming from local growers in excellent shape, Crocus being a great favorite in yellows. The centaurea is still being used as a cheap, showy flower, but cosmos is taking its place to some extent. A limited supply of valley and orchids finds a ready market and Cecile Brunner roses are again plentiful. The old Fair Maid carnation, as seen around town of late, is surely a winner and it is clear that, with good culture, this old favorite will hold its own with many of the novelties.

Nursery business in small plants is improving, but there is little encouragement in the larger orders. Ferns and palms are in good demand and also small, flowering vines. The greens business continues good, but the quality of the stock being sent in from the northern woods is not as good as formerly.

Various Notes.

At the Superior Nursery, Charles F. Gutting has a large stock of his new fern which was given an award at the San Francisco convention. This is a distinct and beautiful thing which is sure to become popular. His cyclamens, begonias and other stock are coming strongly and in fine shape for Christmas. Mr. Gutting has just returned from Murrietta Springs, where he took treatments for rheumatism.

Tony Tassano puts in a good deal of time at the Glendale place, where fern planting is now going on.

Walter Garbett, manager of Darling's Flower Shop, is back at his post after a severe illness. He reports business good.

C. A. Brazee is sending in fine centaureas from Wilmington.

At the Pasadena Horticultural Society's meeting, October 1, attempts were made to induce the society to postpone its show one week on purpose to please a Los Angeles newspaper that is backing a show in this city for advertising purposes on the same dates. President Shields had already been privately approached along the same line. The reception that the delegate received must at least have convinced him that the Pasadena brethren are not to be fooled "all the time," either by bluff or cajolery.

S. Murata & Co. report good business and are making a fine show of mums.

One of the most successful meetings the Los Angeles Horticultural Society has ever held took place October 5, at Kruckeberg's hall. Dr. Houghton was the speaker of the evening and his subject was "Begonias." He has collected a vast amount of data on the oldest species and varieties of begonia and he has a pleasing way of bringing his subject down to a level that makes it interesting to even the least scientific minded of his audience. A large assortment of specimens was used to illustrate the lecture, these being for the most part supplied by James McGilvray, superintendent of Eastlake park, and W. W. Felgate, of Sierra Madre. The park specimens were strongest in the species, but Mr. Felgate's varieties of the modern tuberous-rooted kinds were superb. The attendance was good and Dr. Houghton's remarks were listened to with the greatest attention. A hearty vote of thanks was given him at the close.

Howard M. Earl and W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., both of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., were in town last week, looking over some of the local seed ranches. They left October 6 for San Diego.

Friends of Mrs. M. W. Johansen, secretary of the Johansen Seed Co., will hear with regret that she has been seriously ill for about six weeks. Mrs. Johansen's illness is in the nature of a nervous breakdown from overwork, but she is improving in health now and all hope to see her around again shortly.

The new steam heating installation at H. W. Turner's place, at Montebello, is probably the best and most complete in this section and will take care of his heating troubles for a long time. Besides the two large boilers, a new pumping system has been put in to return condensation water, and another to supply pressure to the crude oil used for fuel. The whole has been covered in, and rests upon a foundation that looks solid enough to withstand German siege gun fire. The new roses in the trial house are extremely interesting, 300 different kinds being in flower. These represent the cream of all the domestic, French and Irish novelties. All are plainly labeled, so there is no secrecy about the matter and any grower who is interested can visit the place and form his own conclusions. The newer baby types are especially beautiful and well worth a visit. Mr. Turner says that every rose grown can be sold now. Of course the cut is not quite so large as it will be later, as the older plants are now being pruned and put in order for winter, but practically all the young stock is in full work.

The new seedling dahlias of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., at the trial nurseries, are showing up well, some promising novelties being included.

H. R. Richards.

Tassano Bros. have a big decoration for the automobile show, October 23. Bernard Tassano left last week for the north, to order the redwood to be used in the decoration. They have been getting some fine chrysanthemums and say they will have them till late in the fall.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business for the week was fully up to expectations. Counter trade is improving and the demand for house plants is good. The orders from outside points have taken all the surplus stock. Carnations are coming in a little faster and, with the exception of Victory and Beacon, they are of good quality. The first locally grown Chromatella and Unaka mums have been cut. Limited shipments of Crocus, Columbia, Queen and Chrysolora have been received from California. Roses show the effect of the recent favorable weather and excellent vases of them are on display. Gladioli, dahlias, gypsophilas and helianthus are the only varieties of outdoor flowers now shown. Light frosts are reported from near-by points, but in the city the lowest temperature has been about 40 degrees. Cattleya labiata is being cut, but the supply hardly equals the demand. Single violets and the small Czar are appearing, but the demand for them is light.

Various Notes.

The Portland Floral Society will hold its monthly meeting October 19, at its headquarters in the Masonic Temple.

John Nyberg has shipped five cars of onion bulbs to California seed growers.

H. J. Millatt has joined the store force of Clarke Bros.

J. Koida, the violet grower, has doubled his area of plants for this season's trade.

Niklas & Son are getting some good adiantum from Clackamas.

The city park bureau has accepted a gift deed from S. Benson to a tract of land which includes Multnomah falls, a famous scenic locality in the Columbia river canyon. This is in addition to a previous gift by Mr. Benson of a tract containing Gordon falls, in the same district. A strong effort is being made to have the United States government set off an area from the forest reserve which adjoins these tracts, which Mr. Benson says he will purchase and add to his gift to the public. These combined tracts would make a park of about 1,000 acres, containing some of the grandest scenery along the Columbia highway.

E. M. Koster, of Koster & Co., nurserymen of Boskoop, Holland, was a visitor last week.

Frances, the young daughter of J. J. Butzer, enjoys showing her schoolmates a book of scenic places about Philadelphia, sent to her by Howard M. Earl.

Martin & Forbes Co. is cutting some excellent Ophelia roses.

The commissioners of Multnomah county are contemplating planting shade trees along the county roads.

In designing churches and public buildings, the architects seldom consider the value of floral decorations in enhancing the attractiveness of the buildings and make no provision for boxes or beds of flowers. The designer of the church of the Latter Day Saints, recently finished at East Twenty-fifth and Madison streets, has taken a step forward in arranging permanent flower boxes along one side and about the buttressed entrances. All the boxes are of concrete, with drain tubes. They are filled with good bedding stock and the pleasing effect should be an object lesson to other architects. The street parkings and spaces about the front of the church are filled with rose bushes and hardy ornamentals.

Clarke Bros. are showing some good Mrs. C. W. Ward carnations from their own greenhouses.

The city park bureau has arranged to use a large quantity of bulbs for fall planting.

The Market.

In spite of the absence of rain last week, the cooler weather benefited all seasonable stock. It is remarkable how orders for decorations continue to be numerous. Several important banquets and weddings last week kept the downtown stores busy. Shipping is active and, with the improved express service, a big season is promised.

There still are plenty of flowers and it looks as though there will be much small summer stock until the first severe storm. Cosmos is plentiful. Florists can obtain all they want of statice, marigolds, gaillardias, Shasta daisies, amarantus, etc. Gladioli will soon disappear; dahlias still are fine, especially Burgle and Geisha. Asters are about gone and there is little increase in the supply of carnations.

Chrysanthemums are at their best and the supply is large and of wide variety. The Queens are unusually fine and the first of a large cut of William Turner are appearing. There are a good many Portolas, large red and yellow, which find a fair demand. Bonnaffons are just starting and some Clara Wells have come in. Others that are moving well are Chrysolora, Maud Jeffries, Mrs. O. H. Kahn, Chieftain and Helen Bloodgood. Pompons are more plentiful than ever and find a large demand. The Chinese mums are doing well.

Violets are in fair supply, but need a good rain to bring them out in quantity. Roses are moving well; a lot of short stock that is usually discarded finds a market, although good long-stemmed roses are coming in. Beauties show a marked improvement. Handsome baskets of cattleyas are arriving, mostly labiata, and an ample supply for local needs is expected this week. Gardenias still clean up readily. Cyclamen blooms are in good demand and the plants are doing well. The market for ferns, palms and greens of all kinds is strong.

Coast Society Meeting.

At the monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, the lecture on "Wood Decay," by Professor Horne, of the University of California, came early in the evening and was closely attended. A most interesting feature of the evening was the admission of a number of prominent members, whose names had been proposed at the previous meeting. They were Patrick Welch, of Boston; William F. Kasting, of Buffalo; Charles Willis Ward, of Eureka, Cal.; John Morley, superintendent of parks at San Diego, Cal.; Vincent Gorly, of St. Louis; C. B. Knickman, of New York; Frank Shearer, park superintendent of Los Angeles; A. C. Zvolanek, of Lompoc, Cal., and Walter Coles, of Kokomo, Ind. The only new local member was H. Bollenhagen.

The convention committee reported most of the bills for advertising in the official program paid. Hans Plath, of the flower show committee, urged that members intending to exhibit at the flower show October 21 to 26 should enter their exhibits at once and arrange for the admission of the necessary workmen to the exposition grounds. It was announced that on Gardeners' day at the fair one of the features of the program was the presentation of a silver cup by the exposition to John McLaren, in appreciation of his work in beautifying the grounds. October 25 was chosen as Florists' day at the fair.

Announcement was made of a special prize for the best collection of orchid plants in bloom at the flower show. The first prize will be a silver cup offered by the florists of San Francisco.

It was announced that the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society will hold a special meeting October 28, to which the members of the society were invited. Dancing will be a feature of the evening.

The evening's exhibits consisted of three varieties of ficus, in pots, by H. Plath, ninety-two points, and three vases of dahlias, Geisha, Minnie Burgle and Kalif, by Frank Pelicano, ninety-five points.

Various Notes.

E. James, of Oakland, is preparing for the Christmas trade. He has completed his potting of poinsettias and has a large lot of cyclamens, which will be ready for the market in a short time.

The Gill Nursery Co. soon will place on the market a new climbing rose, Souvenir de President Carnot, a sport from President Carnot.

The force of Podesta & Baldocchi worked late one night last week on a decoration for a dinner of 1,000 people at Old Faithful Inn.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is completing a cut of 10,000 gladioli, the blooms still being good. Many mums, violets and greens are being shipped to the east.

Burns & Co., of San Rafael, have finished remodeling their store. A hardwood floor and many interior decorations greatly enhance the appearance of the store. Mr. Burns is shipping first-class Geisha dahlias to some of the San Francisco stores. S. H. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 22 to 24, 1916.

THE S. A. Rogers Nursery Co., Newark, N. J., is a new concern with headquarters at 843 Broad street.

MCHUTCHISON & Co., New York, report the arrival of six shipments of raffia, totaling 659 bales, some of which were dispatched from Madagascar more than six months ago.

THE TOUGHEST JOB.

When the American Association of Nurserymen, at the Detroit convention last June, adopted a new constitution and by-laws involving a radical departure from the methods of association management in vogue for forty years, it laid out a lot of hard work for its officers, but on none of its committees did it impose a greater task than was created when, a little later in the session, a resolution offered by J. R. Mayhew and seconded by F. W. Kelsey was adopted, as follows:

That a committee of five representative members be appointed a committee on arbitration to whom can be referred matters of controversy between members of this association. The refusal of any member to arbitrate a difference between members shall be ground for dropping such members from the rolls of this association.

As such board of arbitration President E. S. Welch appointed W. C. Reed, Vincennes, Ind., chairman; G. A. Marshall, Arlington, Neb.; A. E. Robinson, Lexington, Mass.; J. M. Pitkin, Newark, N. Y., and L. A. Berkmans, Augusta, Ga.

Thoroughly realizing the courage of those who undertake to adjudicate disputes with regard to deals in perishable articles for which there are no recognized standards, The Review recently asked Chairman Reed how his board was getting on. This, in part, was his reply:

"The arbitration committee of the American Association of Nurserymen has not become well enough organized as yet to give you an idea, and so far we have not had any definite claims filed with us, although there are two or three that are contemplating filing same. It will take some time to work out our plans and see what the results may be."

TRANSPLANTING LARGE PECANS.

E. W. Kirkpatrick, of McKinney, Tex., speaking at the annual session of the Texas Nurserymen's Association, told how he transplants pecan trees successfully. Such trees may be transplanted safely, according to his experience, this only involving work and some expense. It is easier in sandy land than in black land. He usually digs a trench around the trees, sawing off the roots in taking them up, leaving all the small roots possible, also sawing off the tap root. In preparing the holes for the trees dynamite is sometimes used to get the ground loosened properly; good garden soil is used in the bottom of the hole. He has transplanted trees four to six inches in diameter many times and never lost any. Just a little extra expense in taking up a pecan tree, taking care to get the soil packed about the roots, would often insure a fine growing tree. He said he had seen pecan trees which had been shipped long distances come out and grow off nicely, although they looked as if they were dead. It is a mistake, he declared, to suppose that pecans can not be transplanted; it is just a question of care, patience and a little expense and trouble.

IMPROVING THE SYCAMORE.

I notice in The Review of September 30, page 70, in an excellent write-up of the sycamore, the author refers to its "dirty" habit of dropping its leaves before autumn, as its only failing. I agree with him that in the southwest, at least, this is its only objection. This objection, however, can be easily overcome. The sycamore, after it has attained a good size, has the habit of taking on in the spring more foliage than it can support, and naturally when hot, dry weather comes on, it begins to cast off such leaves as it does not need. The remedy is severe pruning.

Every five or six years, the entire top should be cut off, leaving only a bare trunk fifteen feet high. Such branches as remain below this should be cut back to within two feet of the trunk. This spoils the looks of the tree for a few months, but by midsummer the tree will have made a new head of the densest and richest foliage and not a leaf will fall before frost. The next succeeding four or five years the foliage will be rich and remain till frost and the tree will be infinitely more handsome than if it had never been topped. This process may be repeated every five or six years indefinitely.

The beautiful plane trees of Paris, which are famous the world over, are nothing but the sycamore. They are treated in this way. This simple process will obviate its only drawback and make it, without question, the best shade tree for city planting; this because of its ability to withstand the smoke, dust and gases of the city, and because it is practically immune to scale, borer and other enemies.

J. B. Baker.

BATAVIA, N. Y.

Heavy rain storms attended by high winds have been extremely disastrous to outdoor flowers, especially to asters.

At the Genesee county fair, L. C. Stroh & Sons had an unusual exhibit of palms and ferns. Two models representing a bride and her bridesmaid, splendidly gowned and carrying the appropriate bouquets, were the chief attraction of the show.

Harry A. Erckert has been shipping late asters to the Philadelphia and Buffalo markets.

Dutch and French bulbs are being featured in the local stores of Arthur A. Kirchhoff.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The weather was fair and pleasant until the end of last week, when it turned cool, with a little frost of mornings, but not enough to do any damage. It was necessary to fire two or three nights.

Business has been quiet for October. Wedding work is plentiful, but funeral work has been rather slack. Stock is plentiful and the quality is improving as the weather becomes cooler. Roses are much better than those of two or three weeks ago. Carnations are fair, though the stems still are short. Chrysanthemums are beginning to come in and, if nothing happens, the crop will be much larger and better than ever before.

Various Notes.

C. W. Crouch is cutting some extra fine Beauties for the season of the year, as well as a large crop of other roses. His chrysanthemums are good and the crop is heavy.

A. H. Dailey soon will occupy a new branch store on North Gay street, near the Southern depot. This has the promise of being a good location, as it is a busy center and is quite a distance from any other flower shop.

Mrs. W. R. Ryno is receiving a large number of wedding orders, which keep her busy. She recently installed a new boiler.

Addison J. McNutt is cutting about the best carnations in the city. His crop of snapdragons is good.

GREENWICH, CONN.

A well attended meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held in the society's rooms, October 8, President Sealey presiding. The fall show committee made a report of progress. An attractive premium list is being sent out. Valuable prizes of cash, silver cups, cut glass and articles of silverware are being offered. We anticipate a fine exhibition. The show will be held in the armory at Stamford, Conn., November 5 and 6.

Several new members were elected at this meeting and four new names were proposed for membership in the society.

A meritorious display was in evidence on the exhibition tables. The judges' awards are as follows: Thomas Ryan, Superb strawberries, honorable mention; Carl Hankenson, vase of Glory of Pacific, highly commended. Displays of cosmos; Rose September Morn, Carnation Pink Sensation and Begonia Golden Shower, from Robert Grunnert, formed a meritorious exhibit, which was highly commended. A certificate of merit was awarded to P. W. Popp for a display of dahlias shown on long stems.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The cold weather last week helped business to some extent. There was a material increase in sales as the demand for flowers became larger. Stock in general is scarce. There does not seem to be a sufficient supply to go around and it is difficult to take care of all orders satisfactorily.

Roses are fine, but they are scarce, with the possible exception of Ward and Killarney. Carnations are arriving in larger quantities, but the demand for them has increased faster than the supply. The quality of carnations is good and they would move easily even if the supply were twice as large. It is needless to say that roses and carnations are cleaning up each day at an early hour. The only stock that is plentiful is the shorter grade of rubrum lilies. There still are a few asters and dahlias on the market, but their quality is not good and it is impossible to use them for shipping. Local buyers are picking them up only after all other stock is exhausted. Valley remains scarce and is easily cleaned up each morning.

The early chrysanthemums are about gone and the late varieties have not as yet appeared. The supply is small and the quality is inferior. Violets are arriving in small quantities, but not enough to amount to anything. There are a few double violets, but they are not at all good. The single variety, however, is in fine shape and sells nicely.

Club Meeting.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club had an interesting meeting October 7. It was proposed to stage an exhibit at the Milwaukee Art Society, but this was decided against on account of the expense involved. The public does not patronize anything of this nature readily and the cash receipts are always problematical. A committee was appointed to revise the premium list of the annual state fair. The club is considering the possibility of entering a bowling team in the tournament to be held during the Cleveland show.

W. A. Kennedy, of the C. C. Pollworth Co., who recently returned from an extended trip to the coast, has consented to give a talk on his trip, illustrating his words with stereopticon views. C. B. Whitnall is scheduled for a talk at the next meeting. The attendance is always large when Mr. Whitnall consents to entertain.

The entertainment committee intends to give the club members and their friends an old-fashioned dance sometime in the near future.

Various Notes.

F. Boyd August, of The Rosery, Winnipeg, Can., was a visitor here October 6. Mr. August visited the Brown Deer plant of the Holton & Hunkel Co.

AVIATOR

$100.00 per 1000

There is at present no thoroughly satisfactory scarlet carnation. We believe we have such a variety in Aviator and we have decided to disseminate it, beginning delivery January 1, 1916.

THIS IS THE FIRST TIME A NEW CARNATION HAS BEEN SENT OUT BY US SINCE WE INTRODUCED ENCHANTRESS, AND YOU MAY BE SURE WE ARE CONFIDENT IT'S GOOD OR WE WOULD NOT PUT OUR NAME AND REPUTATION BACK OF IT.

DESCRIPTION—Parents, red sport of Maceo and red seedling. Color, intense scarlet, very bright. Stem, thin, wiry and stiff. Flowers, fine, full and nicely fringed. Habit, clean; upright growth; every break makes a rapid advance, producing a profusion of fine flowers in a very short time. The most prolific carnation ever offered to the trade, barring none. No disease, no grass, easy to propagate. There are larger reds offered, but Aviator will outbloom them 3 to 1. We have plants of Aviator on which we can count 24 buds for the first crop and the houses easily average 15 buds per plant.

WE HAVE PLANTED 40,000 AVIATOR

One house is to be devoted exclusively to the production of cuttings. The other houses are to produce blooms. INSPECTION INVITED.

At the Illinois State Fair, Springfield, September 21 to 23, on 11 entries we took 8 first prizes, 2 second prizes, 1 third prize. If you want first-class cut carnation blooms, order of us.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has had a killing frost; no more outside flowers from this section. The market shows a decided improvement, with everything cleaned up promptly and regularly for the first time in a long while. The cut of roses is gradually increasing. Carnations are more plentiful, but still are not nearly up to the demand. Lilies and valley are still scarce, but chrysanthemums, including Unaka, Polly Rose and Chrysolora, are getting more plentiful every day. Beauties have decreased in supply considerably, but the tone of the market is fine and there is just enough snap about the weather to keep everyone in a good humor.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, October 5. The subject was dahlias. R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., was the only outside exhibitor and had a fine collection. Several private gardeners showed splendid collections of flowers, many of them seedlings. We have heard much in past years about the little bugs which destroyed all the dahlias in this vicinity, but, after seeing the splendid display grown right at home, one member came to the conclusion that the little bugs must have been in the fellows' heads.

George Wessenauer, the spray man, of Sewickley, also brought in a lot of fruit, to show that we can grow perfect fruit right in the city if we will only spray our trees scientifically.

The meeting was most interesting and a good crowd was present.

Various Notes.

Harvey Sheaf returned October 11 from the Pacific coast. He looked fine and reported a splendid time.

John R. Bracken, landscape architect for the A. W. Smith Co., gave an illustrated lecture at the East Liberty Y. M. C. A. on "Landscape Architecture and the Ornamentation of Home Grounds." This was the first of a series of lectures aiming to create a greater interest in scientifically doing the work which, in the past, the average builder has hired a laborer to do.

GERANIUMS

It is the consensus of opinion that the supply of Geraniums is going to be somewhat short this coming season, on account of so many growers being short of stock plants. Our stock was never in better condition than it is now, so that we anticipate no difficulty whatever in filling orders; but at the same time we would suggest that the surest way is to let us book your order at an early date. New catalogue and price list for 1916 is ready for distribution; a request will bring it if accompanied by a business card.

We have a splendid lot of Geraniums in 3-inch pots, ready for shipment, just right for the southern trade or winter blooming, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

Coleus, Moonvines, Heliotropes, Lemon Verbenas, Parlor Ivy, Ageratum, Alyssum, Alternantheras, Salvias, from 2-inch pots, at $2.00 per 100; 3-inch pots, $3.00 per 100.

VINCENNES, IND.

Paul C. Schultz was born to be a florist. He did not exactly grow up in a greenhouse, although his boyhood playground was under the glass of two small houses his mother had erected for her own pleasure. Before he learned his A, B, Cs, he was familiar with flowers and well on the way to become a florist.

Mr. Schultz was as much at home in the greenhouses as the flowers. And none of the defects of hothouse culture developed in him as a result of the artificial atmosphere, as his business success will prove. It was an easy step into the business. The recreation spot of twenty-five years ago is still the site of a greenhouse and he is the owner. But where his mother had only two diminutive greenhouses he has six houses with 20,000 square feet of glass.

It was at the age of 15 years that he resolved to become a commercial grower. His mother started a florists' business at that time, purchasing property for the purpose in the same block as their home. Shortly afterward Mr. Schultz, then 16 years old, left for Chicago to work as an apprentice in a large greenhouse, so that he might learn more about the business. Later he returned home and the firm of Mrs. C. W. Schultz & Son was established. In 1906, when he was 21 years of age, the business was transferred to him and has since been conducted under his name.

One at a time Mr. Schultz has added new greenhouses until now he has six. He still uses the office which he himself bought for the sum of $20 when his mother made the first investment. The money was the savings which had accumulated in a dime savings bank. When he bought the office building, he says, it marked the beginning of an excessive desire to erect more houses.

All of this was what Mr. Schultz told the members of the Rotary Club in his city in an address recently. As a Rotarian he gained the opportunity to tell his business associates about his business career in the fashion of Rotarians in the mutual exchange of experiences and opinions. At the conclusion of his speech he extended an invitation to the members and their friends to visit his plant and see the scientific way of growing flowers, which is an indication that Mr. Schultz is alive to the advantages of the Rotarian policy of business-social intercourse carried on as one.

The Market.

The fall weather has improved business. Outdoor flowers are nearly gone, though there has been no heavy frost. Roses and carnations are scarce and not equal to the demand. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are about gone. Advance and Unaka are the main varieties on the market now.

Various Notes.

At Gus Bartholme's greenhouses everything looks fine. His carnations never looked better. He is growing Enchantress Supreme, Matchless and Philadelphia. His show rooms are filled with palms, ferns and begonias.

Peter Kay, of the Woodlawn cemetery greenhouses, has everything in fine shape. He grows thousands of bedding plants, carnations and chrysanthemums.

The Syracuse Florists' Association will hold a chrysanthemum show, November 4 to 6.

The W. E. Day Co. has an attractive window of dahlias. A large wedding October 18 will call for 500 white mums.

Warner Bultmann has been busy with funeral work. He says it has been hard to get enough roses and carnations.

Henry Morris is having a good sale of ferns this fall and says business with him was never better at this time of year.

The Baker Floral Co. is busy planting bulbs. The Baker growers will force 80,000 this year. They are just cutting Chrysolora mums. These are excellent flowers and are quickly disposed of. They have found the demand for early mums this year better than ever before. They have been cutting mums since September 1. H. F. B.

Raleigh, N. C.—E. M. Hall, formerly in the florists' business at Fairmont, W. Va., has purchased the Raleigh Floral Co., at Jones and Seawell avenues. The range will be enlarged and improvements made.

New Nephrolepis Fern

JOHN WANAMAKER

In presenting this fern to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself.

A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzeli, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzeli, and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis.

Strong plants from 2¼-inch pots, $3.00 per doz., $20.00 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

PIPING AN 11-FOOT HOUSE.

Will you please give me some information about the piping of a greenhouse 11x21 and four feet four inches high to the eaves? The side walls consist of three feet of double sheathing and sixteen inches of glass. The rafters are six and one-half feet long. I shall use a hot water system and I want a temperature of 55 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero. Kindly tell me how much pipe will be needed in the coils, stating the size of the flow and returns. I intend to place a flow at the top of the house, with branches leading to coils on the side walls.

G. S. B.—Ohio.

To heat the house described to 55 degrees, I would start from the boiler with a 2½-inch flow pipe and carry it under the ridge to the farther end of the house, where I would drop it below the bottom of the glass in the end wall and, dividing it into two 2-inch pipes, connect with two coils, each containing three 2-inch returns. These should run to the respective corners of the house and then along the side walls to the boiler end, where they should be connected with the main 2½-inch return leading to the boiler.

ENLARGING AND REPIPING.

Enclosed you will find a sketch of two houses. The one at present in use is 16x25. The other will be an extension of the present house and will be 16x42. Please tell me the best method of piping them both for hot water heat, and state the amount of radiation that will be required in this climate, where the lowest outside temperature is about 6 degrees below zero. I am burning hard coal. At present the smaller house has a 2½-inch flow under each side bench. These are connected to six 2-inch pipes twenty-four feet long, and also to six 2-inch pipes six feet long, under a bench at the end

WHEN YOU BUY—GET A KROESCHELL—THE BOILER OF GENUINE EFFICIENCY

Do you want true heating values for your money? Many florists, to their sorrow, have made the mistake of buying cast iron boilers, which, because of their ratings, appeared to be cheaper than the Kroeschell boiler.

The extravagant ratings of cast iron boilers are misleading, and have been the cause of much disappointment and serious trouble to many growers. The fuel waste is enormous when cast iron boilers are used for commercial purposes, such as greenhouse heating.

Do not make a mistake when selecting your new boiler; get a Kroeschell and you will never be disappointed.

Expressions From Men Who Know Boilers

Range of Alexander A. Laub, New Hamburg, N. Y., heated by No. 6 Kroeschell Boiler.

We do not have to fire our boiler as often as our brother florists who are using different makes. The Kroeschell has replaced three cast iron sectional boilers, and it certainly has given entire satisfaction.

It only takes a few words to express the good quality of your boilers and they are as follows: "Of all firms handling boilers and advertising them truthfully, the party buying a boiler would have to get the Kroeschell, as you are certainly advertising nothing but facts."

(Signed) ALEXANDER A. LAUB.

July 18, 1913, New Hamburg, N. Y.

Range of A. B. Knowlton, No. Grafton, Mass.—devoted to the growing of high grade carnations. No. 13 Kroeschell heats entire plant.

Enclosed find photo showing partial view of my range which you are at liberty to use in connection with any advertisement you see fit. In regard to the No. 13 Kroeschell Boiler, we are now using it for the fifth season. The longer we use it the better we like it. It has taken the place of four cast iron boilers at a big saving of coal and labor. No matter what the weather is outside we have no trouble whatever in keeping the temperature just where we want it.

(Signed) A. B. KNOWLTON.

January 10, 1912, North Grafton, Mass.

Range of H. M. Totman, Randolph, Vt.—the largest cut flower establishment in Vermont. No. 7 Kroeschell heats the entire plant.

Your No. 7 Kroeschell Boiler rated at 15,000 sq. ft. of glass is carrying my entire range of 17,000 sq. ft. of glass—it might heat more. We maintain a temperature of 50° and have no trouble to keep the proper temperatures in the coldest weather. During the cold snap of 1912 we fired every three hours during the night; I find it a saving in fuel to fire often. I have the Kroeschell Boiler six years and the only expense is one set of grates. No other but a plate boiler for me.

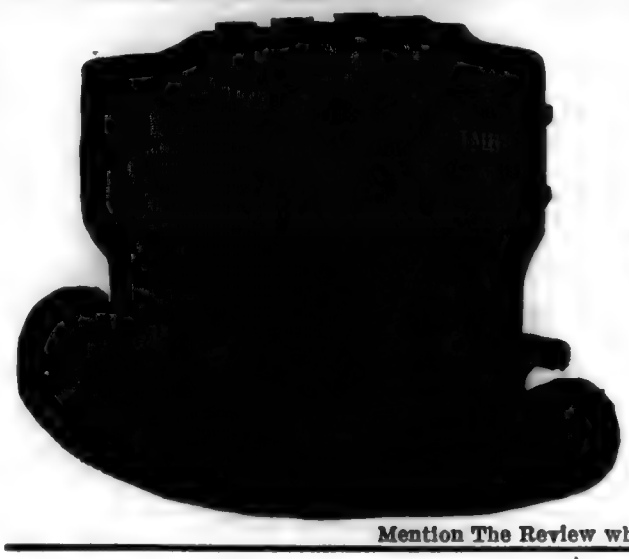
THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED
Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.



Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

Put Your Heating Problems Up to Us.
We've Been at it for 44 Years.

next to the boiler. I expect to grow carnations and geraniums in the larger house and I wish to run the smaller house at a higher temperature. Can I obtain the desired temperatures by extending the present piping into the new house? I intend to run the flow pipes under the benches.

A. F. C.—Pa.

The sketch shows that the present house has 9-foot rafters and has sixteen inches of glass in each side wall. The new house will be built at the east end of the old house, will run in the same direction and will have 10-foot sashbars. It will have twenty-eight inches of glass in the side walls, except near the east end, where the last ten feet of wall will contain fifty-four inches of glass. The boiler is at the west end of the present house.

The inquiry does not state what temperature is desired in the old house, but if 60 degrees will suffice, with 50 to 55 degrees in the new house, I would suggest the use of two 2½-inch flow pipes the entire length of the building, with eight 2-inch returns, placing one flow and four returns on each side.

The circulation would be improved by placing the flow pipes on the wall plates, or, better yet, about two feet below the ridge, as it would then be possible to start with the coils at the middle of the east end of the house, and this might be necessary in order to keep out the frost on cold nights when there is a high wind from the east.

BOILER WILL BE TOO SMALL.

I have just added a house alongside the one I already had, as shown in the enclosed sketch, and I wish to know how much pipe will be needed to heat the new house to a temperature of 55 degrees in zero weather. The piping in the old house consists of one 3-inch flow and four returns in the center, and one 2½-inch flow under the purlin on each side, to feed the side coils, each of which is composed of five 1½-inch returns.

I have extended the boiler room across the end of the new house. Can I continue the main from the boiler to the center of the new house, to be connected with the new piping? Would you pipe the new house according to the same plan as is used in the old one, and how much new piping will be needed? Will the five returns under the gutter be enough to keep the snow melted? Can I heat the two houses with my present boiler, which is rated for 750 square feet? It is a round, upright boiler, with a 17-inch grate. How much glass surface have I and how much radiation will be needed? State the size of mains and returns. If the boiler is not large enough, can I successfully couple it with another boiler? Can I use a mercury system with an open hot water system?

J. O. S.—N. Y.

The sketch shows the old house to be 20x30, with one exposed wall, boarded to the eaves. The new house adjoins the old one on the east and has double sashes on the east side. This house is 27x30. As nearly as can be estimated from the data furnished, the old house has 860 square feet of glass, besides 240 square feet of wooden wall, equivalent to about fifty square feet of glass. The new house has 1,270 square feet of glass and eighty-one square feet of wooden wall. The piping in the old house is not far from 275 square feet, which should furnish a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees in zero weather.

In the other house I would suggest the use of three 2½-inch flow pipes and thirteen 2-inch returns. One of the flows should be placed under each purlin and the other four feet below the ridge. Five of the returns should be on the outer wall, and four in coils on the inner wall and under the middle bench. With five 1½-inch pipes in one house and four 2-inch pipes in the other, on the center wall, there should be no trouble from ice. If preferred, seven 1½-inch pipes may be used on the outer wall and six in each of the other coils, in place of the thirteen 2-inch pipes already specified. The 3-inch main from the boiler may be continued across the end of the new house, to supply the three 2½-inch flow pipes.

While the actual radiation only figures about 750 square feet, it would be preferable to use a boiler rated at 900 to 1,000 square feet. The performance of different boilers with 17-inch grates varies considerably, but I do not know of any that I would care to risk with 750 square feet of radiation. I would prefer one with a 24-inch grate, although it is probable that a second boiler with a 17-inch grate, coupled to the one now in use, would make it possible to heat the two houses. The use of a mercury system practically closes the tank by placing the water under pressure.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been rather brisk for the last week or so. There has been quite a demand for funeral work and it has created a shortage, especially on mums and carnations; there have not been enough of either and there was a scramble October 10 for stock of any kind. We have had a couple of frosts, which no doubt are responsible for part of the increasing demand for indoor stock, as about all of the outdoor stock is badly damaged.

Roses are fine and nearly plentiful enough to meet the demand, outside of Ophelia and Sunburst. Beauties are rather scarce, with the demand not heavy. Carnations are improving daily, but the stems are still a little short. They have cleaned up daily. Mums are coming in more plentifully and find a good demand. They are still a little green, but do nicely in a pinch. The leading varieties are Pacific, Estelle, Chrysolora, Halliday and quite a few Early Snow. Valley has been scarce of late, with demand rather heavy at times. Lilies are a little more plentiful, with demand about equal to the supply.

There have been few potted mums as yet, with a great many calls for them. Bulbs are moving nicely and it looks as though the demand will be about as usual.

Various Notes.

Sherman Stephens is getting along nicely and puts in some of his time again at the old stand, where he receives the congratulations of a host of friends. He has had a long, hard illness.

Mr. Clark, in charge of the flower department of the Green-Joyce Co., reports trade as good. J. M.

READING, PA.

The Market.

Business continues to improve, largely because of weddings and parties requiring the better grade of stock. Funeral work is lively. Cut flowers are in good supply, with the exception of carnations, which are scarce as a result of clouded weather conditions. Dahlias are plentiful, but move slowly. Mums find a ready sale and good prices are being realized. Easter lilies are short in supply. Plenty of outdoor flowers are available and prices on good stock rule low. No frosts have occurred as yet.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the local retail florists' organization was held in its rooms in the Moore building, October 7, and was addressed by William Girvin, of Leola, Pa., on "Carnations from Wholesalers."

J. C. Bauder reports a heavy booking of October weddings and parties. Funeral work at this store requires the full force of help to fill orders.

William Kern, of Hyde Park, has completed the planting of several large orders of hardy stock, of which he makes a specialty.

Lee P. Arnold, Heck Bros., and Layton Butts, all of Wyomissing, Pa., report that business in September was better than in the same month last year. H. C. H.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

We experienced a heavy frost October 9, which did considerable damage to all outdoor stock, particularly in the suburban districts. The florists had been expecting a killing frost for several weeks. Market conditions have changed greatly and are assuming the aspect of winter. Chrysanthemums and other greenhouse stock are rapidly taking the place of the numerous dahlias, asters, etc., that have carried the market during the last month. Pink October Frost and Chrysolora are the best varieties. Early Snow has made its appearance. Gladioli have seen their finish. American Beauties are not in oversupply at present. Shawyer, Sunburst and Richmond roses are in big demand. Valley has a good call for wedding decorations. Carnations are improving, but they are not any too plentiful. Prices are good. Easter lilies are not so plentiful as a few weeks ago and consequently sell quickly. Southern smilax has been used in quantities for decorations.

Various Notes.

The fine pink October Frosts seen on the market last week were from the W. J. & M. S. Vesey greenhouses.

The Flick Floral Co. had the decorations and bouquets for a large wedding last week. The decorations were carried out in autumnal colors, with French baskets of roses and single chrysanthemums. The bride's bouquet consisted of white orchids and lilies of the valley. A large number of corsages were shipped by this firm for an out-of-town dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Blossom returned from a motor trip to Rockford, O., October 3.

G. W. Doswell & Son are cutting early chrysanthemums, chiefly Golden Glow, October Frost and Smith's Advance. R. F.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business was fairly good last week. The demand was steady and active, and easily took up all good stock. The shipping business, too, was good. Roses are in good supply and are meeting with a ready sale. Carnations are being moved without much trouble. The cut of chrysanthemums is much heavier than it was and in another week they should be quite plentiful. Easter lilies have been meeting with an active demand. A killing frost last week took most of the dahlias and cosmos out of the market. Other offerings include rubrum lilies, orchids, valley and a few snapdragons.

Various Notes.

L. H. Kyrk was the first wholesaler to offer single violets this fall. They were from George Klotter's place.

C. E. Critchell is not waiting until the last minute to put boxwood in storage. He has been at it almost every day since the cooler weather came.

A. Sunderbruch's Sons had an exceedingly busy time with decorative work last week.

Among recent visitors was C. P. Brunner, of Springfield, O. C. H. H.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

Now that real fall weather has made its appearance, the wholesalers are having considerable trouble in pleasing the buyers. Stock of every description has become extremely scarce. Good-sized shipments of roses arrive each morning, but they are sold before they are unpacked. American Beauties sell at a moderate price and are not by any means too plentiful. The supply of carnations increases as their quality improves. Gladioli and asters are less prominent than a week ago. Dahlias are few. Easter lilies experience a brisk demand. The heavy rains have put an end to most outdoor stock, causing a sharp advance in prices. Greens of all kinds sell easily.

Various Notes.

The Buffalo Florists' Club held a farewell smoker October 5 in honor of Joseph Streit, who leaves shortly for Detroit to start a partnership with Michael Bloy, of that city. Mr. Streit has been associated with S. A. Anderson for the last thirteen years. He was an indefatigable club worker. Whether the function was social or just plain business, Mr. Streit could always be found boosting the affair along. The bowling club will miss the lucky strikes that usually happened on Mr. Streit's alley. By way of showing their appreciation, the team mates joined the order of the "Yellow Dogs," of which Mr. Streit is the most active member. The smoker was a great success and the means by which the trade extended its wishes of good luck and big business to the departing friend.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

SCRANTON, PA.

The Market.

Business shows a big improvement over last week. There have been several weddings, with other social functions, which have kept us busy. There also has been a good demand for funeral work. There seems to be a shortage of carnations in this locality. Chrysanthemums also are scarce, due to the early varieties being about done for. Roses are plentiful and are bringing good prices. Dahlias also are much in demand. Other stocks are up to the standard.

Various Notes.

A. L. Besancon & Co. report a busy week in funeral and wedding work. A pretty compliment has been paid to Miss Besancon, who was selected by Miss Helen Johnson, of New Brunswick, N. J., to take charge of the elaborate church and home decorations for her wedding. Miss Johnson was so much impressed with the artistic work of Miss Besancon at the time of the marriage of Miss Marion Jones that she decided to engage her for her own wedding.

Baldwin had the decoration and bouquets for the Hirchfield-Cohen wedding at the Hotel Casey.

Schultheis has a pretty window display, with autumn leaves and mums.

G. R. Clark is cutting fine dahlias at his gardens, for which he finds a ready call. F. J. M.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The last week saw three killing frosts and the trade rejoices, for there will be no more outdoor flowers to speak of. Dahlias are not entirely destroyed in some places, but they will not cut any figure in the market. Even cosmos has suffered. It is too soon for the picking up in business that the change in weather is sure to bring, but already things are strengthening. Last week business was good all over town and there were more wholesale orders than for some time.

The bulb business is expected to pick up now that the bedding plants are frosted. Business has been pretty good already, and here we can note that the Holland travelers already are in our midst, one or two every day, trying to get orders for next season.

Some of the trade here have received notice that their azaleas have left Europe and may be expected at any time. This is a distinct disappointment to many who felt there would be no azaleas and so have made provision for other things to take their place.

There has been little change in the supply of cut flowers during the week, except that there are many more chrysanthemums. These are selling well. There have been no pot mums on the market thus far. F. B.

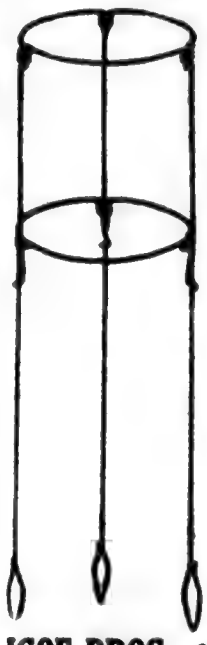
CUTTINGS DAMPING OFF.

I have trouble in rooting geraniums and carnations, and almost everything else that I try. I use bar sand in raised benches, with heat under them; the pipes are about two and one-half feet below the benches. I have tried almost every place in the house, but without success. They appear to rot off at the surface of the sand. Do you think the sand is not good? It may have too much loam in it.

M. P. F. C.—Pa.

Your sand is probably too fine and too dirty. You cannot afford to have any loam mixed with it if you want cuttings to root in it. If you cannot secure better sand and it does not pass water freely enough through it, you can improve it by adding some fine charcoal or even coal ashes, which will help to provide porosity. A sharp sand is the best for propagating purposes and it should not be taken from a wood or near trees. It must also be removed each season. To help kill any fungoid germs in your sand, soak it with water as near the boiling point as possible when it is clear of cuttings. The majority of cuttings like some bottom heat, and if your sand is sharp and well drained, quite frequent waterings should not cause damping off. C. W.

MAKING LEAF-MOLD.



We are beginners, and should like to know just how to make leaf-mold. We can get sugar maple, elm, sycamore, catalpa, black locust and Carolina poplar leaves, but do not know which of these would be most suitable for our work, or how they should be handled in order to get them in shape in the shortest time possible. C. F. B.

Of the leaves mentioned, for the making of leaf-mold I should prefer sycamore, sugar maple, elm, catalpa, black locust and Carolina poplar in the order named. Just what will be the best method of composting them will depend to some extent upon the plants for which the leaf-mold is to be used, since the addition of at least fifty per cent of fresh or slightly decomposed horse manure, containing a little wet straw, would give quick results, but might be more manure than would be needed for the plants.

I should compost the leaves by placing them in a bed, with alternate layers of manure, adding a small amount of water if the leaves are dry. When the pile is three or four feet high, cover it with either manure or sod, to weigh it down and make it compact. In a week, or before if rapid fermentation has set in, fork over the mass, placing the outer portions in the center of the pile, and add more water unless the leaves have a moist appearance. One or two additional workings will be necessary for quick results. T.

St. Joseph, Mo.—The Stuppy Floral Co. is one of the oldest concerns in the trade in the southwest. The business was started in 1870, by Lawrence J. Stuppy, now deceased. In the beginning the glass was all in hotbed sashes, the first greenhouse not being built until 1873. The corporation was formed in 1904, the present officers being: President, Frank X. Stuppy; vice-president and secretary, John J. Stuppy; treasurer, Mrs. Anne E. Stuppy.

State Camp, Fla.—Harold J. Patten, of Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass., and Donald R. Chase, of Medford, Ore, an orchardist, are here shooting in the national rifle matches.

Houston, Tex.—John J. Boyle has severed his connection with the Forestdale Flower Shop, of which he has been manager for the last five years, and is considering the possibility of entering business for himself. Mr. Boyle only recently returned from Guatemala, where he had gone to gather rare orchids.

Johnstown, Pa.—In this year's trade exposition, Smidt the Florist was well represented by a large float featuring the name in smilax and decorated with red and white cosmos, palms and ferns. P. E. Bower, manager, says the crowd was well pleased with his entry, because it was a solace to the eyes after a long line of eyesores.

New Orleans, La.—H. C. Doescher was one of the heaviest losers in the recent severe storm, seven houses being badly damaged and much of the stock destroyed. Mr. Doescher states that at his place the wind traveled 120 miles an hour. A few florists escaped loss, but nearly all suffered more or less damage, but have been busy repairing and have things pretty well cleaned up.

Hutchinson, Kan.—John Stamm, oldest and best known florist in Hutchinson, has retired from the business. Mr. Stamm closed a deal September 30 for the sale of the stock and fixtures of his greenhouse range and store and the leasing of his property. After twenty-five busy years, Mr. Stamm says he feels entitled to a long rest. His successors are Leonard Marston, a landscape gardener, and Fay Smith, real estate dealer.

WHY BUCK AGAINST THE INEVITABLE?

What's the good in trying to get a half-nelson on the inevitable? What's the use in trying to row against a swift current, when you may as well easily and profitably float with the tide?

When you build a Greenhouse of other wood than Cypress, you are simply bucking the inevitable. As Greenhouse material Cypress is inevitably the one article that you must use to "save your bacon." Its character is so thoroughly established that there is nothing else to the proposition.

When you use a "substitute" wood—a substitute for Cypress—in any of the parts of the Greenhouse, or in any of the wooden tools and appliances about the place, you are simply rowing against the current. Cypress is so thoroughly established, so universally recognized as the one perfect material, that to use it in Greenhouse construction or appliances is like floating down stream.

So quit "kicking against the pricks"—get into line and use the one certified material, which is nothing less than "Tank Grade" Cypress.

Of course you want PECKY CYPRESS, however, for your benches. And that is cheap enough to suit anybody—and for such homely uses lasts longer than grades costing more.

Those Cypress booklets are like gravy at a dinner—one can't do without them. Vol. 3 is the Greenhouse Book; Vol. 4 is the Barn Book, and Vol. 28 is the Trellis and Arbor Book—all free. Then there are Vol. 20, the Farm Needs Book; Vol. 36 is the Carpentry Book, and 37 is the Big Silo Book. Ask us to pass you one, or a dozen—there are 41 free books in the library. If you ask for VOL. THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

DEBUTANTE DOINGS DEVELOP DOLLARS

Since time immemorial the social butterfly, emerging from the cocoon of adolescence, has occupied a conspicuous place in the cosmos, until today the debutante brings large sums of her admirers' money to the coffers of florists. It is a business where quality and novelty count.

ACCORDING to Webster a dā-bü-tont' is "a woman appearing for the first time before the public or in society; specifically, an actress or singer making her first appearance in public, or a young woman during her first season in society," but according to a florist a debutante is a spring, the source of a rill of pure gold, which, fed by other streams drawn to it, becomes, in late autumn, a river, sometimes a broad, deep river, enriching as it flows, as well as the retailer, the growers far and near.

For the debutante receives many flowers—fine flowers.

It may be argued that the doings of the debutantes affect only the retailers who cater to those who hold positions in society, that they do not interest the store men who derive their patronage from those outside the social pale. But is that true? What of the effect on the markets? The early-bird debutante and the first frost ordinarily make their appearance together and one has almost as much effect as the other in putting life into the daisical demand for greenhouse flowers.

For one can't send a debutante garden flowers.

Gift flowers never can be cheap flowers—they must be the best. And the demand for quality always advances prices—advances even the prices of the stock not good enough for the quality buyer, because, as one wholesaler used to argue, when the best is gone the best of what is left becomes the best and is worth the best prices—if one can get them! At any rate, when buyers are bidding for the privilege of selection it means that everyone becomes filled with renewed enthusiasm and takes hold with new zest.

For there's nothing like a crowd to loosen purse-strings.

The more flowers the first debutante has, the more the next one will get. People send flowers because it is de rigueur, the right thing to do, and the social elect are au fait, so to speak, well instructed. In any first-class American city a group of twenty or thirty girls of debutante age means a big season's business for the half dozen or so florists who make pretense of catering to that class of trade. It's a difficult business to break into, but, once established, it's like Tennyson's celebrated brook—it goes on forever.

For there is a new crop of debutantes each year.

When Alice Roosevelt had her coming-out party at the White House the debutante bouquets came in showers. There were hundreds of them; so many that it was necessary to provide a means of displaying them, and a rack was built to hold them.

For everyone who sends flowers must see them, be it funeral or reception.

One of the features of the debutante flowers that people do not like, and yet are responsible for, is their sameness. They always have been, and always are, alike, according to their period, as everyone sends the same thing, the arrangement that has the approval of custom. The old-fashioned bouquet was what grandmother had for her debut. Mother had a looser bunch, but the next generation was back to grandmother's style, elaborated, embellished, beautified and much more costly, but still the old-fashioned formal bouquet. Today there's need for a change and the stores that supply the bulk of these flowers are trying out various novelties, as well as sending many fine boxes and baskets of loose cut flowers.

For baskets of flowers are appropriate for every occasion.

"The debutante season has become a great factor in the florists' business, especially so in the large cities," says Albert Pochelon, of Detroit, who has his finger on the pulse of this phase of trade activities because of the considerable number of telegraph orders for debutante flowers and his position as secretary of the F. T. D. "We have in Detroit this autumn from thirty-five to forty prominent families with daughters to be formally introduced to society and each of the leading retail stores is sure of a number of good orders for each of these parties. Also, quite a few of the orders will come from out-of-town by mail and telegraph."

For debutantes have distant friends who don't forget.

"But it is time we retailers put some originality into debutante flowers," continued Mr. Pochelon. "Bouquets are called for more than ever before, but it is only because people don't know what else to send, unless it is a basket. And after the affair is over we hear the flowers were fine, but too much alike. We retailers will be starting something of advantage to ourselves and to the whole trade when a lot of us get to working up good novelties to send to the debutantes. Stir up the thinkers and get them to show their ideas in The Review," and Mr. Pochelon accordingly sends along a couple of photographs of his own debutante novelties.

For the live florist practices what he preaches.

One of Mr. Pochelon's debutante arrangements is a leghorn hat trimmed with cypripediums, phalænopsis and ribbon, making a pleasing although not altogether novel departure from the conventional style. The difficulty with the creation of novelties in the retail flower business lies in the fact that the new idea, worked out, is more likely than not to be a freak arrangement—interesting, from the point of view of the customers, but not salable in any quantity.

For wealth is conservative, and the best flower buyers are wealthy.

Mr. Pochelon's "Little Debutante of 1812" is a more original conception and one that, displayed in his show window, is doing more than a little to increase the sale of debutante flowers, even though a good many of the customers drawn by the suggestion into purchasing prefer the established type of bouquet. In making the debutante of 1812 a doll head is used, fastened on the wire frame of a wedding bell, which is filled with moss, with one of the Kift vases embedded in it for the stem of the bouquet. The flowers are added after the fluffy-ruffle skirt. The colors ordinarily are white, pink, deep pink, soft blue and nile. By placing the arrangement in a choice fern dish its safety is assured.

For the man who neglects to provide against moisture and rough handling loses out.

No doubt there are a large number of retailers in The Review family who have devised original arrangements of debutante flowers and the publication of the pictures will serve to still further stimulate the creative faculties of those who are in position to try out their ideas. The Review will be pleased to receive photographs for reproduction and discussion.

For The Review is the forum in which the trade debates its problems.

FIVE MILLION VISITORS.

If Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., were to remark that by Christmas time more than 5,000,000 people will have seen his gladiolus fields of last summer, his audience would be sorely tempted to disbelieve him. But Mr. Cowee would be absolutely correct in his statement. How he will attain so vast a publicity will become apparent at once.

A troupe of motion picture actors descended on Mr. Cowee's farm last summer and spent ten days there filming a 4-reel photoplay, entitled "Gladiola." In due course of time the films have been developed and are now being shown throughout this country and in Europe. According to statistics, every motion picture is witnessed by more than 5,000,000 movie fans. Consequently, Mr. Cowee's gladioli will be displayed before as many people as there are in the city of New York.

As the plot of the play is unfolded upon the screen, the spectator sees Mr. Cowee's acres of gladioli, nestling among the green hills of northeastern New York. The splendid photography also pictures Mr. Cowee's spick-and-span home, his playful kittens and even his cows. At the beginning of the pictures these words are flashed upon the screen: "These pictures were photographed on the farm of Arthur Cowee, gladiolus specialist, near Berlin, N. Y." Some publicity!

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

New York, N. Y.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Julius O. and J. Frederick Hanft, composing the firm of Hanft Bros., at 684 Madison avenue, by these creditors: New York Cut Flower Co., $2,009, and Joseph J. Levy, $447. The business is one of the oldest of its kind in the city, having been established in 1850, and the present partners succeeded to it in 1893. They catered to a society trade. Assets are estimated at $3,000. Judge Hand has appointed Frederick C. Leubuscher receiver under a bond of $500. It is stated that for some months Julius O. Hanft, one of the partners, has been in California.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society held a meeting in New York October 11, President Pennock presiding. The matter of the annual bulletin with the proceedings for 1915 was gone over, with the idea of making improvements in this publication, and the J. H. McFarland Co., of Harrisburg, Pa., made a proposition to issue it in a much better form than heretofore. This proposition was accepted and the next issue will come out after January 1, embodying the transactions of the year and containing colored illustrations.

The matter of cost of affiliated membership was taken up in detail. At present the affiliated membership is 10 cents per member. After careful consideration it was moved that the associate membership be changed from 10 cents to 25 cents per member, this change to be put into effect January 1, 1916.

The premium list for the exhibition of 1916, to be held at the National Flower Show in Philadelphia, from March 25 to April 2, was submitted and gone over carefully, covering roses in pots and tubs, table decorations, blooms by commercial growers and blooms by private growers. The total amount of premiums to be awarded is $2,500. A special prize of $10 is offered for the prettiest exhibition of roses, the winner to be decided by a vote of the lady visitors. The final adjustment of the schedule of prizes was referred to a committee composed of Messrs. Pennock and Reuter.

C. T. Tansill, of the Washington Test Garden Committee, tendered his resignation and it was moved that William F. Gude, of Washington, D. C., be appointed to fill the vacancy. Mr. Gude has accepted the position. A new rose was reported for registration and was referred for proper consideration.

The Cleveland flower show, to be held November 10 to 14, was discussed and arrangements made to call a regular meeting of the society at that time for the consideration of any matters pertaining to the best interests of the society.

The Cleveland flower show has placed at the disposal of the American Rose Society the sum of $700 in prizes. There has been added to that a special prize of $25 by Robert Scott & Son, of Sharon Hill, Pa., for fifty blooms of Killarney Brilliant rose. A. N. Pierson, Inc., offers $25 for the best fifty blooms of Rose Hadley, and Benjamin Hammond offers a cash prize of $10 for the prettiest exhibition of roses, the winner to be decided by vote of the lady visitors. A silver cup is offered by the Lamborn Floral Co., of Alliance, O.; a silver medal by Vaughan's Seed Store, of New York and Chicago, and $10 in cash by W. Atlee Burpee & Co.

The judges for the American Rose Society at the Cleveland show will be Emil Buettner, of Park Ridge, Ill., and John H. Dunlop, of Richmond Hill, Toronto, Ont.

GLADIOLUS SOCIETY OF OHIO.

An adjourned meeting of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio will be held in connection with the flower show at Cleveland, November 12, at the call of the president. Azalea Imports Unrestricted.

The Belgian minister at Washington advises as follows under date of October 14:

"The regulations (by the British government, concerning shipment of goods of Belgian origin via Rotterdam) have been relaxed in the case of Belgian nursery stock, which is now being exported freely to the United States, under an arrangement with the Belgian Horticultural Syndicate, that all consignees are instructed to pay the purchase money in due course to the Banque Belge pour l'Etranger, 2 Bishopsgate, London."

What Will the Effect Be?

After all, the fall imports of azaleas and other Belgian nursery stock are being permitted to proceed almost without restriction. Just what effect it will have on the normal volume of imports it is difficult to say, as the uncertainty has been great, no one knowing from day to day what the regulations and conditions would be tomorrow. Orders no doubt were cut by some, while they were increased and scattered by others. Every boat from Rotterdam now brings large shipments of Belgian plants, but it will remain for the end of the season to show whether or not the total is above or below that of normal years.

Many Cases Already Here.

As reported in The Review for October 14, shipments of Belgian plants, principally azaleas, began leaving Rotterdam as early as September 4, 945 cases of plants reaching New York on the Noordam October 4. The Ryndam and Oosterdyk, which arrived October 18, brought still larger quantities and the Westerdyk, due in a few days, has many consignments of both Belgian and Holland plants. McHutchison & Co., New York, state they alone have a total of 796 packages on these three boats.

DEATH OF CLEMATIS.

The sudden dying of clematis plants, especially wherever the large-flowered kinds are grown extensively in America and Europe, has been noted for many years, and the cause and methods for prevention of this disease have recently been reported in the Journal of Agricultural Research of the United States Department of Agriculture, by W. O. Gloyer of the New York Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva, N. Y. This investigator found that the primary cause of the dying of these plants is a fungus known as Ascochyta clematidina. The disease shows itself differently on various species. On hybrids grown in the field it is a stem-rot, while at the greenhouse where cuttings are propagated it is a leaf-spot as well as a stem-rot. On Clematis paniculata the disease takes both forms.

There is less disease when the hybrids are supported while growing than when they are permitted to trail on the ground. In the case of Clematis paniculata, however, the selling price of this variety does not warrant incurring the expense of supports. The author in this case advises transplanting the plants from the beds to the open field after the first year and placing them far enough apart to prevent matting, which is always a condition favorable to the disease. The following spray, applied lightly, controls the disease on Clematis paniculata growing in the beds and on cuttings in the greenhouse: One pound of laundry soap and six pounds of sulphur to fifteen gallons of water. The disease can be controlled on the hybrids in frames or in the greenhouse by the use of sprays. In all cases it is best to remove the diseased leaves and dead vines before spraying. It is particularly important to clear out such leaves and vines, especially if the plant is wintering outdoors, as the fungus is able to survive cold weather. This indicates also that the same beds should not be used for clematis during successive years.

PROPAGATING SNAPDRAGONS.

Will you kindly state the best method of propagating snapdragons in summer, as we have had poor success? Can they be well rooted in July, August and September? What is the best way to secure seeds from indoor plants? Is there danger of the seed mixing when the plants are side by side?

J. W. W.—Pa.

In order to secure true seed, only grow one variety in a house. If more are grown, it will be necessary to use fine-mesh mosquito netting or gauze over the plants to exclude insects while the plants are flowering. I have found indoor seed superior to that saved from outdoor plants, for forcing purposes.

Snapdragons are hard to root in July, August and September, but seedlings can be secured without any trouble. These possess greater vigor than plants propagated from cuttings, and are more disease-proof. If you buy reliable seed, a small proportion only will fail to come true to color. Cuttings from plants grown indoors root much more satisfactorily than those from outside plants.

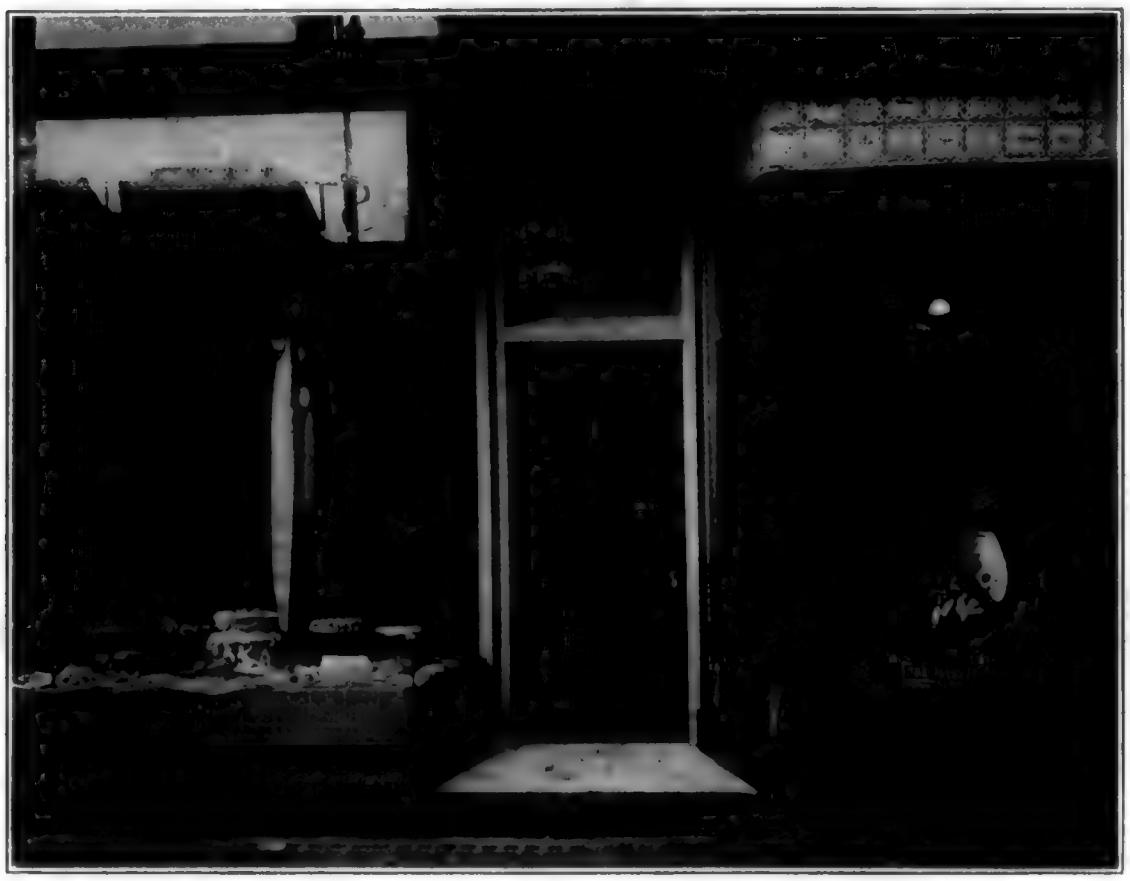
WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

DO AUTOS HURT OR HELP?

A correspondent writes: "Notwithstanding the financial depression through which the country has been passing, the automobile business seems to be going ahead by leaps and bounds. Many automobile agents this year have far exceeded their best previous records. Many persons have purchased automobiles who, judging by appearances, are not able to maintain them. A considerable number, it is known, have mortgaged homes for which they have been saving through a long period of years, in order to buy a machine. An incident came to the notice of the writer, where a widow received a legacy of about $3,000 in cash, besides the home she lived in. She put a substantial portion of her cash legacy into an automobile, which, after she had used it a few days, had lost probably half its value, as far as her ability to realize any money on it was concerned.



"Many who own machines are finding that it is costing them far more than they had planned for the upkeep. Yet such is the almost universal desire to own an automobile that hundreds of others, who really cannot afford to buy machines, are planning to get them as soon as they can scrape a little more money together.

"Has this automobile craze injured the florists' business? Many have been asking the question. Business generally has been so upset during the last year that it is harder to get at the true answer to this question than it would be when general business conditions are more stable. But there are a growing number of florists who are coming to feel that the rapid increase in the growth of the automobile business is hurting them. In one sense flowers are a luxury, and if a family's surplus money goes for an automobile and its upkeep, it cannot go for flowers, jewelry, etc.

"It is undoubtedly true that there is no one who will entirely cut out the purchase of flowers because he has purchased an automobile, but there are many who doubtless will buy flowers and plants in smaller quantities than if they had no machine. If a funeral piece is desired, it will be a cheaper one than they would otherwise purchase. If flowers are to be purchased for a wedding, the quantity will be less if there is an unpaid garage bill to be met also. House bouquets, purchased by those who have to economize on other things because of the expense of the upkeep of their autos, will be smaller than before the machines were purchased. There will be a tendency on the part of some to 'shop' in order to get flowers where they can be purchased the cheapest. Florists whose flowers, while not strictly fresh, still look good, may benefit by such trade, but the house whose aim is to always furnish the finest quality of goods will suffer to some extent.

"There is a large class of people who can afford to keep automobiles without curtailing their expenditures for flowers and other things which might be classed as semi-luxuries. But there is the other class of those in moderately comfortable circumstances, who have but a limited amount of money that can be used on extras. If they spend an unusually large proportion of their incomes on automobiles, they must economize correspondingly in other lines. The question is whether the aggregate of the economies of such people is sufficiently large to make a perceptible difference in the business of individual florists. There are many who think it is, though few, if any, will state that the amount is sufficiently large to cripple them."

There are all sorts of ways of looking at things. Of course if Smith spends all or most of his money with Jones for an automobile, Smith cannot spend it with Green, the florist, but what will Jones do with it? If he made money on the deal, quite likely he will send his wife a corsage bouquet and phone her to come down to dinner and the theater. And perhaps, business being good, the restaurant man and the theater manager may each buy rather more and better flowers than they would if Jones stayed home.

WINDOW SIMPLICITY.

A little thinking will save a lot of unproductive effort and experiment in dressing up a window. The distinctive feature of the window illustrated on this page is the simplicity of arrangement, which is the more striking because there was no attempt to cram the window with something of everything in the store. Here is where the window artist, in this instance, did his thinking before trimming the window—not afterward, as happens not uncommonly. Especially beautiful is the center decoration of a corsage bouquet upon velvet, draped over an artist's easel and palette, which at once has the suggestion of art and beauty, as if, perhaps, devised by an artist for a subject. Its effect is preserved because the window was not crowded full of other flowers, and in this lies the secret of its simplicity. To have filled the space in the window to any greater extent, simply because the space was there, would have destroyed the effect. The window is that of the Jones-Russell Co., of Cleveland, in its new branch store opened early in October, at Euclid avenue and the Taylor Arcade, where half the store is occupied by a confectioner.

A STUDY IN CONTRASTS.

The photograph reproduced on page 15 shows the decorations which Max Schling arranged for the wedding of a Los Angeles bride, at the Waldorf-Astoria, in New York. Although the color scheme is not apparent in the picture, a good idea of the care given to it can be had by noticing the excellent contrasts obtained. The pleasing effect of the bower at the left, under which the ceremony was performed, was a striking feature of the decoration. Flowering apples were used in the bower and also in other corners of the room, against the wall in the style of cordons, strands being carried across the ceiling and joined to cordons on the opposite sides.

MRS. SCHLING'S DECORATION.

That the Schling decorative genius is not entirely a masculine trait is amply testified by the illustration on this page, which shows a home table decoration by Mrs. Max Schling. In it the wife of the New York retailer used white lilac, azalea sprays, valley and Mr. Schling's new hybrid carnations, as yet unnamed. It may be mentioned in passing that Mr. Schling has eight varieties of these, including all colors. In size they are, when disbudded, as large as the best carnations, but when not disbudded, they are about as large as the old Scott variety. Their blooming period extends to the arrival of frost.

CROP TO FOLLOW NEPHROLEPIS.

At this time of year our houses are filled with different varieties of nephrolepis grown in benches, part of which are under contract for delivery in October. We usually have a house or two empty between the departure of the ferns and the time when Easter stock is to be potted. This year the period will be exceptionally long, as Easter comes late. We grow a considerable quantity of spiræas at Easter, which, this coming year, will not take up bench room until about the middle of March. What would you suggest as a crop between October and March, something that would be profitable to occupy the space mentioned above for that period? What depth, heat, etc., are required for tomatoes, lettuce, etc.? Delphinium Belladonna has been suggested. Will you advise us what depth of soil is required for forcing this, and when should it be put in?

T. N. Y. & C.—Pa.

Lettuce succeeds in a minimum winter temperature of 45 to 48 degrees. Good varieties are May King, Hittinger's Belmont and Boston Forcing Tennis Ball. By sowing now you can get two crops of lettuce before you will need the houses for spring crops. Lettuce needs a rich soil twelve inches deep, containing an abundance of stable manure. Tomatoes could be planted and grown with success if you can give them a night temperature of 60 degrees. They do best in winter with a somewhat restricted root run, and need a dry atmosphere. Good forcing sorts are Comet and Lister's Prolific.

Delphiniums, such as Belladonna, should not be lifted before November. They need several freezings before planting, require a temperature not over 50 degrees at night, and would, if planted late in November, flower from March 20 through April. You could plant Spanish iris, or gladioli, such as Peach Blossom or Blushing Bride, and clear the houses by the middle of April. These should have a temperature of 50 degrees at night. The large gladioli, if used, would not come in until April. Such bulbs as Paper White narcissi could be benched, and would do well in a similar temperature. Single violets, if planted after the middle of October, would be done flowering by the end of March. They need a low temperature, 40 to 42 degrees at night in winter. Double violets can be planted now. They do well at 45 degrees at night, and bloom until the middle of April in your latitude. There are a variety of other winter crops, but the foregoing may contain something to fill your particular need.

MOTHS IN GREENHOUSE.

Will you kindly advise me how to get rid of little moths in the greenhouse? I have been bothered with them this season and it seems that I cannot kill them off. I have chrysanthemums, ferns and cyclamens in the house.

M. J. P.—Ill.

Try fumigation with one of the nicotine extracts. These are evaporated over denatured alcohol lamps, and, if used fairly strong, should clean out the moths. This form of fumigation will not harm your plants. If nicotine does not clean out the pests, hydrocyanic acid gas will be the only alternative. This must be used with the greatest care, as it is deadly to insects and all other forms of animal life, human life included. The formula for this has often been given in The Review. If used with due care, it is the most reliable of all fumigants. It is least likely to harm foliage in a low temperature.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

DO AUTOS HURT OR HELP?

A correspondent writes: "Notwithstanding the financial depression through which the country has been passing, the automobile business seems to be going ahead by leaps and bounds. Many automobile agents this year have far exceeded their best previous records. Many persons have purchased automobiles who, judging by appearances, are not able to maintain them. A considerable number, it is known, have mortgaged homes for which they have been saving through a long period of years, in order to buy a machine. An incident came to the notice of the writer, where a widow received a legacy of about $3,000 in cash, besides the home she lived in. She put a substantial portion of her cash legacy into an automobile, which, after she had used it a few days, had lost probably half its value, as far as her ability to realize any money on it was concerned.

"Many who own machines are finding that it is costing them far more than they had planned for the upkeep. Yet such is the almost universal desire to own an automobile that hundreds of others, who really cannot afford to buy machines, are planning to get them as soon as they can scrape a little more money together.

"Has this automobile craze injured the florists' business? Many have been asking the question. Business generally has been so upset during the last year that it is harder to get at the true answer to this question than it would be when general business conditions are more stable. SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Early Azaleas.

There are always a fair number of azaleas offered for Thanksgiving, while Christmas sales are large. The probability of large Belgian importations this season is not bright and many growers will need to rely on carried over stock. If this was planted out and kept well watered and syringed, the plants should be bristling with buds. The foliage may be a trifle lighter in color than the freshly imported article, but this is far more than compensated for by the wealth of flower buds. Some people imagine that these carried over plants will not force so well or bloom so early as imported ones. This is pure nonsense; the fact is that the majority flower even earlier, as our hot summers permit the plants to complete their growth and set buds earlier than in Belgium.

Naturally early sorts, such as Hexe, Charles Encke, Mme. Petrick, Deutsche Perle, etc., should now be placed in a temperature of 60 degrees at night and kept freely syringed. Pick out such plants for forcing as have nice, plump buds. Plan to have them in bloom, if you can, a little earlier than they are to be sold, so that they can be kept gradually cooler, to give the flowers more substance.

Cannas.

Lift and store canna roots before they sustain a hard freeze. Cut them down to within a few inches of the ground and expose them to the sun a few hours before housing them. A shelf in a shed or cellar with a dry atmosphere, and without much fire heat, will keep these cannas. Lift a good ball of earth with them. If you have no suitable storehouse, pack them under the bench in a carnation or other house where they are not likely to be subjected to much drip. They want to be kept dormant for a few months and this is not possible where the soil gets at all moist.

Gladioli.

Gladioli should be lifted and stored away now. Cut the stems back to within three inches of the bulbs. Be sure they are quite dry when stored. A suitable storehouse for gladioli is one just clear of freezing in severe weather. Shelves in a dry cellar, such as is used for the storage of potatoes, will answer well for gladioli.

Early French Bulbs.

A batch of Paper White narcissi should now be placed in a temperature of 60 degrees. They will not take long to respond and come into flower. They are not needed in any great numbers while mums overwhelm the markets, but a great many country growers never need to sell a flower at wholesale and these are the people who can use some Paper Whites just as early as they can be had in bloom, for they are extremely useful in retail work. If they are coming along too fast, it is easy to retard them on the floor of a cool cellar.

Roman hyacinths should not be started until they have made a couple of inches of growth. They cannot be had in bloom as early as the Paper Whites. The probable scarcity of valley has caused a record demand for these hyacinth bulbs.

Peonies.

Remove the foliage from the peonies. They will be much benefited if a generous layer of manure, tolerably well decayed, is spread between the rows. A great many peonies are reported as flowering poorly each season. There are several probable causes for this, such as poor soil, cutting flower stems too near the ground each season, late frosts and a failure to transplant when required, but probably lack of plant food is the great cause of plants flowering unsatisfactorily.

Hardy Herbaceous Plants.

Some perennials, such as peonies and irises, do best if planted in September; others, including Japanese anemones, tritomas, incarvilleas, pompon chrysanthemums and anchusas, move better in the spring, but the overwhelming proportion of hardy perennials can be more successfully replanted now than in the spring. All like a deep, well enriched soil, and when the winter has set in they will be benefited by a mulch. Vastly better results are to be had from fall rather than spring planting of nine-tenths of the hardy perennials catalogued.

Nerines.

The spikes are now appearing on Nerine Sarniensis and N. Fothergilli major, the two earliest scarlet varieties. They are also appearing on some of the pink varieties. As the spikes show, move the plants into a cool, airy house. They need little water until the flowering season has passed, but they require a good supply after that time, while making their growth. Any badly matted plants should be repotted after flowering, but give small shifts, as nerines only flower satisfactorily when well potbound and thoroughly baked through the summer. The Guernsey lilies come at a season when indoor flowers are scarce and are, therefore, specially welcome.

Freesias.

The earliest batch of freesias should now be about a foot high, stocky and of a rich, dark green color. These should flower for Christmas, but to insure their coming in at that season, when prices are high, give them a sunny bench or shelf in a minimum temperature of 52 to 55 degrees. Avoid high feeding, or the ends of the leaves will turn brown. Soot water makes an ideal stimulant.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

ON FUNERAL FLOWERS AGAIN.

In response to Charles A. Dards in The Review of October 7, page 18, regarding the abuse of funeral flowers, we might suggest the following plan of coöperation between ourselves and undertakers, which has proven satisfactory here for a number of years.

In the first place, we have it understood with the undertakers that we are ready at all times to give our assistance in the arrangement of funeral tributes, and to have our wagon at hand to take care of them after the services.

If the services are at a church, the flowers are taken from the residence to the church in our wagon and, with the assistance of a florist, the undertaker is enabled to make a much better arrangement; or vice versa. After church or residence services, our wagon carries the flowers to the place of burial, and we arrange them at the grave, so that when the funeral party arrives, the unsightly mound of sand has been transformed into a mound of flowers.

What do we do with flowers furnished by our competitors? Treat them as our own.

What do we do when the family purchase their flowers from the other fellow, but desire our services? We make a charge for whatever service we perform.

How does it pay us? In many ways; principally in advertising, satisfied customers and, best of all, our flowers are not abused. Here is hoping someone else will give his experience and opinion. This comes from a country town of 3,000, having four undertakers and three florists. W. E. Hall.

TO MAKE HYDRANGEAS BLUE.

I noted the inquiry on page 68 of The Review of October 14, as to how to make hydrangea flowers blue "by the application of iron in some form to the roots of the plants." Last summer I was walking through the residential section of a southern cotton mill town, when I came across a fine hydrangea plant, growing in a tub. The plant was four or five feet wide and was literally smothered with flowers of the most intense blue. It was the most beautiful plant of its kind I have ever seen. Noticing a woman sitting on the porch, I asked her where she obtained it. She replied, "Oh, it's just the same as the others," referring to a number of plants with the ordinary pink flowers, "but if you want to get them blue you must grow them in muck land." She told me that one year the family did not go to the country and therefore had no muck land for the plants. The consequence was that the flowers had their normal color, rose or pink.

These mill people migrate back and forth, going to the country in the summer and returning to the cotton mills in the winter. Their plants are all grown in lard tubs or tin cans, on which the names of Armour and Swift are everywhere conspicuous. The plants are taken with them whenever they move, though many of them do so every few weeks. Their plants seem to be as inseparable from them as if they formed a part of the family, and some of them have plants that would put the professional florist to shame. I am thinking of obtaining some of the soil in which the blue-flowered hydrangea was grown, and getting it analyzed. Judging from the general surroundings, I should think there was but little, if any, iron in the soil, but the color of the flowers was certainly the most beautiful blue I have ever seen in hydrangeas and I have seen a good many.

Work of the Committees.

The examining committees have submitted reports on new varieties as follows:

At New York, October 16, Alice Day, white, Japanese incurved, submitted by Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., scored as follows on the commercial scale: Color, 18; form, 14; fullness, 10; stem, 12; foliage, 10; substance, 14; size, 9; total, 87.

At Philadelphia, October 16, No. 1-1913, yellow (Halliday x Appleton), Japanese incurved, submitted by G. A. Lotze, Glen Burnie, Ind., scored as follows on the commercial scale: Color, 18; form, 12; fullness, 9; stem, 14; foliage, 14; substance, 14; size, 9; total, 90. Exhibition scale: Color, 14; stem and foliage, 9; fullness, 14; form, 18; depth, 12; size, 27; total, 89.

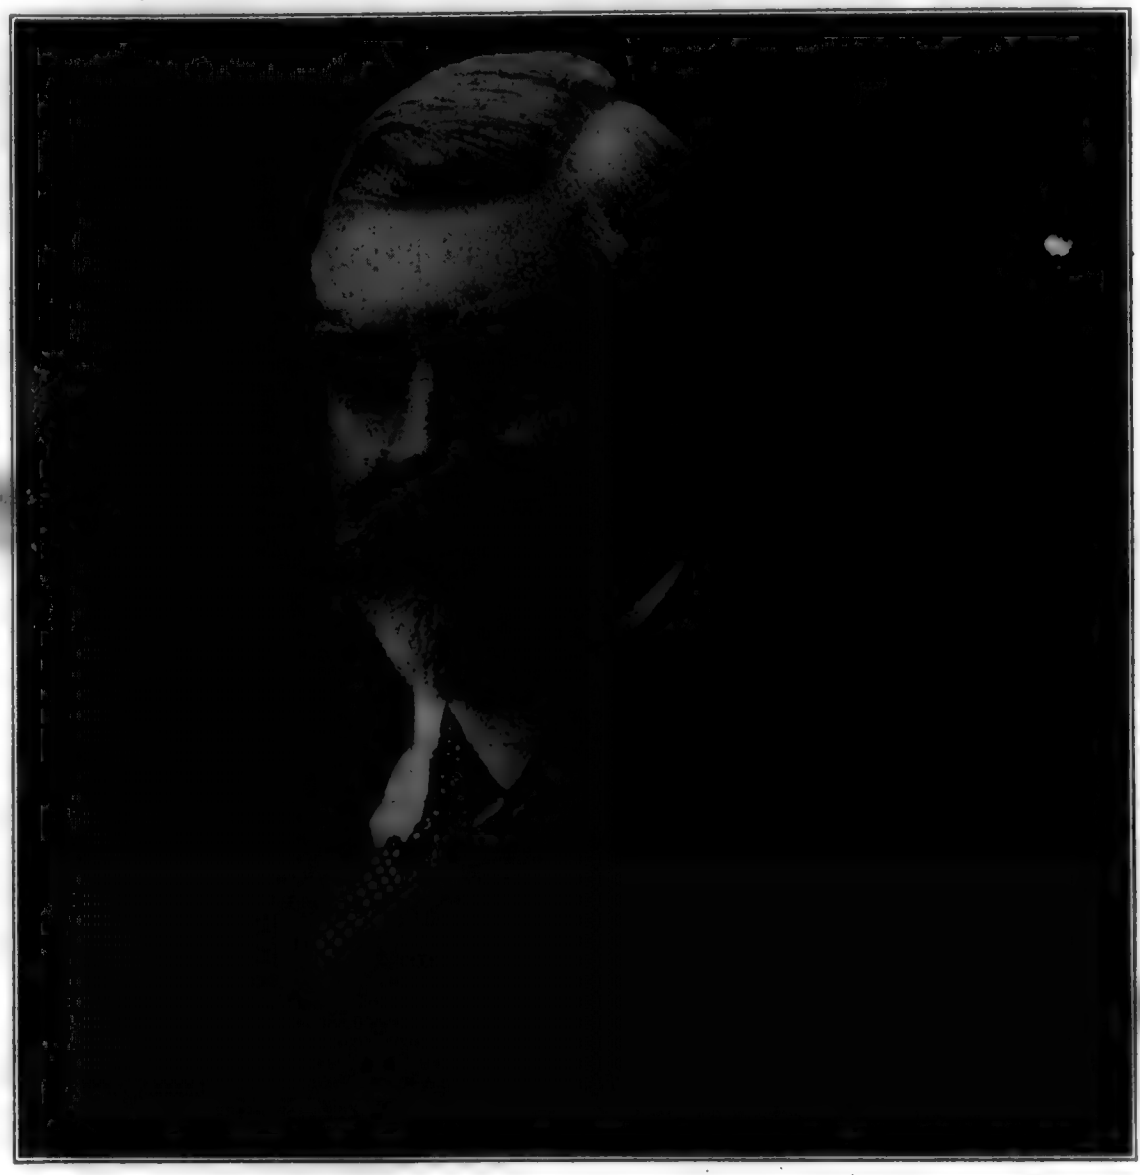
The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted on each Saturday during October and November, the dates of which will be October 23, 30 and November 6, 13, 20, 27.

POTTED FORGET-ME-NOTS.



How many seedling forget-me-nots should be planted in a pot to sell? Should they be pinched back or will they naturally branch sufficiently?

P. G.—Ia.

You need not pinch back the myosotis plants at all; they naturally branch well. In a 6-inch pot three plants will suffice. For pot culture it is essential that the plants be well potbound; then feed occasionally with liquid manure. Be careful not to grow them too warm; a temperature of 50 to 52 degrees at night is all right; higher temperatures are injurious.

C. W.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

ARTHUR HERRINGTON.

IT may be possible, some day, to put on a flower show in New York, or at Madison, N. J., without the active assistance of Arthur Herrington—may be, we say, but it hasn't yet been done; not in a good many years. While following the profession of landscape architect, with offices in the metropolis, Mr. Herrington still makes his home at Madison, where for many years he was superintendent of one of the largest estates in the district. There are few men in this country who have so broad a knowledge of needs and uses of plants or the production and arrangement of flowers. Mr. Herrington is known personally to large numbers of florists, but his writings are known to thousands more. The book in which he records his experience as a grower of the chrysanthemum has run through several editions.

WINTER-FLOWERING BEGONIAS.

All the varieties of winter-flowering begonias should now have a sunny house. No further shading should be necessary, unless we chance to get a belated heat wave. If the drainage provided has been ample and the soil fairly porous, the plants will need considerable water and some weak liquid manure should be added at least once a week. Where the pots are matted with roots, give it twice a week.

The plants should have had necessary staking done before now, but, if not yet done, lose no time in giving some supports. These should be light, preferably painted green, and as inconspicuous as possible. Staking, if left until the plants are blooming, means that they will be badly mauled over during the process.

The Lorraines are already flowering freely and many can be sold between now and Thanksgiving. In the case of Cincinnati, Florence Davenport and Melior, where the foliage is heavier and the natural blooming time a little later, all efforts should be made to have them in as good a condition as possible before the Christmas holidays, which is the season when the bulk of these plants will be sold. The scarcity of azaleas should create a greater demand for begonias, poinsettias and cyclamens, and growers well stocked with these are to be congratulated. Give the begonias 60 degrees at night and run them a little cooler nearer Christmas.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

CARNATIONS IN THE SOUTH.

As far as I can learn, the loss from stem-rot in the south this year is not above the normal. The danger is past, now that cool weather is here, and we expect only an occasional loss of a plant for a week or two more. It seems to me that this disease, in the majority of cases, has its inception on the field and is not contracted after the plants are brought inside. The largest loss is always during the first month after housing, which clearly shows that the plants were more or less affected in the field. Here, in the south, we try to give all the ventilation possible after housing, having the sides and doors open both day and night. It is noticeable that the plants on the beds or benches near the open sides take hold in their new quarters more quickly than those in any other part of the house. With such an amount of ventilation, it is hardly fair to blame the inside conditions for the stem-rot, although the additional moisture may hasten the end of any affected plants. Were we to direct more attention to conditions in the field, we might be able to better check the ravages of the disease. Perhaps one of the experiment stations could give some advice on this phase of it.

Leaf-spot has caused quite a lot of damage in different places, but in all the cases that I have heard of, leaf-spot has appeared only on plants that were housed in September. The last days of August and the first few days of September were rainy and unseasonably cool, and these conditions, more than anything else, were the causes of leaf-spot. Fungous diseases like leaf-spot are easily checked if, at the first appearance, the affected leaves are picked off and the plants thoroughly sprayed with Bordeaux mixture. Allow the mixture to stay on the plants a couple of days before spraying off and renew it again if necessary. Encourage the plants to grow by frequent stirrings of the surface soil, and keep the house clean and fully ventilated.

The plants by this time should all have had the first support and be ready for the next one. This is a job that should always be done on time, or rather a little ahead of time, to keep the plants straight. Watering is not now an arduous job, but do not neglect the syringing by any means. This should be done thoroughly at least twice each week during the entire winter season. The cool nights are causing the thrips to migrate inside; it is none too soon to go after them. To exterminate thrips I have found nothing so effective as Hammond's Thrips Juice No. 2, diluted forty to one, according to directions. Try to select a cloudy day for the spraying and leave the mixture on the plants for forty-eight hours before washing off with the hose. Repeat at intervals of one week three or four times and you will have no more trouble with thrips, at least not until spring is well advanced. It is advisable during the winter to paint one of the steam pipes in each house with a nicotine extract, as a precaution, once every week or ten days.

In many sections of the south we have had some cool nights. It is well to be prepared to fire the boilers on such nights. If the plants receive a check at this time they are liable to stand still for quite a while and also throw a lot of split calyxes. This splitting of the calyx is one of the vexatious things of carnation culture. An even night temperature during the whole firing season, more than anything else, will keep the loss from this cause down to the minimum. A night temperature of 50 to 52 degrees in the northern sections of the south will be correct, but in the southern sections a rise of 2 to 4 degrees, according to latitude, is better. With these higher temperatures a little air should be allowed all night, except on the coldest nights. If the houses are piped to maintain these temperatures during the occasional cold snaps and the plants receive no check from any other cause, there will be small trouble from the bursting of calyxes.

Sometimes during wet spells a quick-spreading fungus will attack the buds and cause a heavy loss unless checked at once. This is all the more likely to appear in houses where the roofs or gutters are leaky or where the water will work in from the outside and lie under the benches or in the walks. To get rid of fungus you can spray with potassium sulphide, one-half ounce or even one ounce to a gallon of water, or paint one pipe in a narrow house or two pipes in a wide house with a sulphur paint. Of the two remedies I prefer the sulphur, it being more quickly applied. You may have to renew the paint once or twice to get rid of the fungus entirely. In leaky houses, it is always safe to use the sulphur occasionally as a preventive.

Plants that were housed early will need at this time a little additional fertilizer. Most growers use sheep manure as a top-dressing between the rows. A mixture of two parts sheep manure to one part commercial guano will be an improvement over the sheep manure alone. The small amount of potash in the guano is of the greatest benefit. One application at this time will probably be enough until after the short days. Avoid using liquid manure at this time. If you use this form of nourishment leave it until late spring.

CATTLEYA MOSSIÆ.

I am sending herewith a piece of a Cattleya Mossiæ of this year's growth. It is a specimen plant and has from fifteen to twenty growths, the majority of which are assuming this appearance. I would like to know what is the trouble. The plants are in a greenhouse and have been in the shade all summer, with plenty of light and air. They were all right last year. J. H. C.—Ark.

Judging from the discoloration of the small bulb forwarded and the black condition of the sheath, you have been overwatering or oversyringing, perhaps both. Probably, also, the shade has been too heavy. While cattleyas need some shade, it is easily overdone and, while plants under such conditions usually keep a nice, green color and make good bulbs, they invariably flower disappointingly. Cattleyas should be allowed to dry out well between waterings, should be placed as near the glass as possible, should never be heavily shaded, and this shading must be gradually removed so that by November the plants can have full sunlight, or nearly so, until March. Your bulbs are small, if the one sent is a fair sample. I would suggest moderate feeding with sheep manure for your cattleyas, a little the whole year around, but the strength can be increased somewhat while the bulbs are being developed. C. W.

ORCHIDS FROM RANGOON.

Consul M. K. Moorhead, at Rangoon, reports to the Department of Commerce that "the Agri-Horticultural Society of Burma, Kandawglay, Rangoon, is now in a position to collect and ship orchids to the United States. Owing to the alternating dry and wet and cool and hot seasons, the orchids should be collected during December and January and packed and dispatched from Rangoon during February. Orders should be received in Rangoon not later than November 15. The following orchids can be collected to order, the prices given being for 100 orchids: Cypripedium bellatulum, $16.22; Cypripedium Parishii, $11.35; Cypripedium Spicerianum, $24.33; Dendrobium crassinode, $16.22; Dendrobium formosum giganteum, $12.97; Dendrobium chrysotoxum, $12.97; Dendrobium fimbriatum, $9.73; Dendrobium nobile, $16.22 to $32.44; Dendrobium thyrsiflorum, same; Dendrobium Dalhousieanum, same; Dendrobium Wardianum, same; Vanda cærulea, same; Vanda Kimballiana, $9.73; Vanda terres, $9.73; Saccolabium Blumei, $9.73. These prices are for good plants. Extra selected specimens of some kinds will be more in proportion to size."

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

["Sander's List of Orchid Hybrids," new edition. Compiled and published by Sander & Sons, St. Albans, England. Size, about 6x9½ inches; 158 printed pages, besides an equal number of interleaved blank pages, for the convenience of the user of the book in keeping his own hybridization records. Price, bound in half leather, 1 guinea.]

This, of course, is not meant to be a book for everybody, in all branches of horticulture. It is not expected that every florist will clamor for a copy. Many members of all departments of the trade might indeed find such a work of reference highly serviceable to them, but it is intended primarily and principally for specialists, for those most special of specialists, the orchid hybridizers. These devoted orchidists will undoubtedly be eager to own it, since the lack of it would be a serious handicap to them. A book that is designed for a distinct class of business men, if designed with adequate skill, is likely to be almost indispensable to that class.

Typographically the book presents a good appearance. It is a creditable sample of the printers' art and bears every evidence of accuracy. It also seems to be sufficiently comprehensive and up-to-date to confirm the truth of the publishers' statement that, in procuring the matter for the new edition, "all records were searched up to July 18, 1915." For many years Sander & Sons have collected and arranged such data, at first for their own use, and the successive issues of this book have embodied the results of these labors.

The book is divided into two distinct sections. The first section contains an alphabetical list of the hybrids, with the two parents and the names of the raisers, when procurable. In the second section the parents are listed alphabetically. Thus the hybridizer, or would-be hybridizer, has in this book the means of ascertaining exactly what has already been done in the line of experimentation in which he is interested. By consulting this book he can know his materials and conduct the work intelligently, not entirely at random.

NEW GIANT MALLOW.

To create a flowering plant the blossoms of which measure one foot across —more than three times as large as the original common wild flower from which it has been developed—is an achievement of Bobbink & Atkins, the result of over seven years of experiment.

"We began," said F. L. Atkins, "with the wild marsh mallow, which covers the New Jersey marshes in profusion in the late summer. We selected the best specimens that could be found, and crossed them with the best examples we had of Hibiscus coccineus. The next year we took the healthiest specimens of this hybrid and fertilized them from each other. Each year this process has been continued, until about two years ago, when we began to see the remarkable results."

Hybrid Marsh Mallow Raised by Bobbink & Atkins, of Rutherford.

At the nursery of this firm, at Rutherford, N. J., there are whole fields of this giant marsh mallow, the height ranging from six to nine feet, each stem bearing a multitude of huge blossoms and each section of the fields a different tone of color. The colors range from pure white, through the delicate varieties of pink to the deepest crimson. There are flowers of solid color, others which are white or pink, with a red center, and some in which the variations of shade resemble the iris. The leaves are of large size, are of a rich, glossy green, and in themselves form a unique decorative feature.

The New Hybrid Giant-flowering Marsh Mallow is the name by which it will be known. The intention of its growers was to produce a hardy perennial of such size as to form a background for other plantings. With the coming of frost the stem dies down, and, if cut off close to the ground, the plant, being absolutely hardy, needs no protection, shooting up with vigor the following year.

CARNATIONS

STEM-ROT OF CARNATIONS.

How to Prevent It.

Having read many articles concerning the cause of stem-rot of carnations, and having been successful in preventing the disease myself, I venture to offer my opinion on the subject, in the hope of giving some slight assistance to my fellow growers. I have been growing carnations for over ten years, in various climates and under many conditions, and yet I am not aware that I have ever lost a plant on account of this disease.

To be successful in resisting the disease, you must begin at the time the plants leave the cutting bed. When potting the young plants, never bury the roots deeply; about one inch below the surface is enough. After being potted, the plants should be lightly shaded for a few days and then allowed to have full sunlight. When they attain a height of six or seven inches, break them off at a joint, leaving about four inches. This is important, as if long stems are allowed to grow, the wood gets hard and will not make the desired bushy plants.

Danger in Deep Planting.

Now the plants should either be repotted into 4-inch pots, to be transferred to benches later, or planted out in the field. In either case be particular to keep the ball of the plant just level with the surface of the soil, for in deep planting lies danger. Keep the soil well stirred through the summer, to let the air circulate.

When ready to plant in the houses, have the benches whitewashed with hot lime and filled with good soil. Slightly shade the glass with a mud mixture, and proceed to plant. If any soil has worked up around the stems through cultivation, remove it, and plant with the top of the ball on a level with the surface of the soil. It is better to see a few roots above the soil than to have the stems buried, for deep planting, according to my observation, is the chief cause of stem-rot.

A Frequent Mistake.

The fungus cannot attack the stem unless the stem is in actual contact with the soil. Many growers make the mistake of allowing the plants to grow leggy, and then planting deeply to make them look bushy or to prevent their falling over. If the plants are weak and inclined to fall over, it is far better to support them than to resort to deep planting.

I will mention one instance that proved my method to be good. Once, when working under a foreman, I had charge of a section of carnations and the foreman had charge of another. He planted his section first, using the best plants and planting deeply, according to his own theory. I used the left-over plants in my section and planted according to my theory. The foreman lost thirty per cent of his plants from stem-rot and I lost none.

T. Stentiford.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Seth Miller has acquired the business of the Green Floral Co., of Dallas, Tex. Alex. Millar has charge of the houses. The stock looks promising. Asparagus plumosus, Adiantum hybridum, chrysanthemums, roses and carnations are grown for the wholesale trade. Mrs. Russell heads the list of roses. Its popularity will call for larger plantings. The benches in the houses are tile-drained. Oil is used as fuel. This establishment will be one of the attractions for the S. A. F. visitors in 1916.

Harry Papworth, of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., New Orleans, La., was in the thick of cleaning up at the time of my visit. One could get some idea of the enormous damage done to buildings and stock by the recent storm. All hands are busy getting the houses into shape before frost, but a fine lot of specimen palms and many chrysanthemums grown outdoors were a total loss. Mr. Papworth remarked that the terrific force of the storm was shown by the fact that bricks were carried from a building four blocks away and dropped on his greenhouses in such numbers that the men could not remain indoors any longer. The men were bracing up houses wherever the pressure seemed greatest. Mr. Papworth's chief anxiety during the storm was for the safety of his family at home, only a block away, but unapproachable because of the storm, which also had carried down all wires. He was glad to find they had not been harmed in the least, only badly scared. A curious freak of the storm was a plantation of fine young orange trees close by, which was untouched in the midst of ruin.

A. H. Ahten, a market gardener, located at Shrewsbury, La., lost sixteen houses, each 23x200. They were completely flattened out.

James Newsham, of New Orleans, who has one of the best commercial collections of orchids in the south, was also a severe sufferer. The wind flattened several houses, which damaged the stock underneath. These good folks were located on the edge of the city and in the direct path of the hurricane.

Hugh Seales, of Birmingham, Ala., says he is feeling the beneficial effects of better times. His stock is in excellent condition.

Meridian, Miss., boasts of three florists, all women. They are Mesdames Henrietta McKinney, Florence Marshall and Mary Watts. All are doing good business. W. M.

MOLINE, ILL.

John Staack, of Moline, Ill., has been named chairman of the entertainment committee which will have charge of the convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association, to be held in Moline, March 7 and 8, 1916. Other members of the committee, who were appointed last week at a meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Association, are the following: Recording secretary, William Knees, Jr.; corresponding secretary, W. C. Wilson; financial secretary, A. Anderson; treasurer, Ludwig Stapp, of Rock Island.

Many applications for space at the convention have already been received. The exhibition will be held in the Moline Turner hall. Invitations will be extended to Dr. W. E. Taylor, Mayor M. R. Carlson, of Moline, and Wesley Greene, of Des Moines, to address the convention. The next meeting of the Tri-City Association will be held in Davenport. No date has been announced.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Not in years has this market experienced such a shortage as prevailed all of last week. There was not one flower that was on the long side, stock being so short that the wholesaler could have auctioned off the boxes without opening them. A heavy frost last week killed practically everything outdoors and the only hope was in the mums, galax and magnolia leaves. Some of the stores used artificial flowers to help fill orders. The only outdoor flowers obtainable were some dahlias which the frost did not so much affect.

The supply of roses and carnations was short and consequently prices were higher than they were last Christmas. The midseason varieties are in bloom, but most of them seem to be slow about opening into flower. Chrysolora and Robinson are the two chief mums at present. The few Easter lilies to be had sold as high as 20 cents, October 15. Across the state line the stock on hand was hardly enough to fill all orders.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray has some begonias which are equal to any ever seen in this city. His lot of 10-inch Cincinnati begonias is exceptional. He has also 100 plants of the new begonia, Mrs. J. A. Peterson, in 6-inch pans, which should be popular on account of its dark, bronze foliage and red flowers. One bench contains a fine lot of Melior begonias, which will, no doubt, make the Cincinnati push to hold its own. He has a house of poinsettias that are in good shape and of a nice height. Another house is devoted to orchids, which he has commenced to cut. He will have a large assortment of Christmas basket plants, such as dracænas, etc. His place is well worth a visit.

E. D. Ellsworth says business so far this year is better than ever before. He sold out clean on all his small poinsettia plants, of which he grows about 30,000 every summer. Mr. Ellsworth had a reunion of brothers last week, five in all, one from Boston, one from St. Louis and three from this vicinity.

Miss Edith Roberts has opened a store at 11 East Eleventh street. She was formerly with the Costello-Moore Floral Co.

Arthur Newell went to Columbia, Mo., to see a football game in which his son, Walter, was a player. Young Mr. Newell is a student at the state university.

The Chandlier Nursery cut over 8,000 dahlias last week.

Allen Sexton, manager of St. Mary's Greenhouse, has the stock in good growing condition and declares that business has been good.

Mr. Parker has a fish story to tell. He caught thirty-one pounds of catfish one day last week at the lake by their greenhouses. He reports that stock is scarce at present, but he expects relief soon, as there is promise of a heavy crop.

Joseph Austin will return to the city next week much improved in health.

A. F. Barbe is cutting a great many mums, roses and carnations, but not enough to fill all orders.

T. J. Noll & Co. report stock of all kinds scarce. They are using mums to advantage as a substitute for the less plentiful flowers.

Biedermann & Son have several decorations for the coming week.

The Alpha Floral Co. experienced a large shipping business last week, especially in funeral work. Their catalogue is the means of obtaining much trade.

W. J. Barnes has purchased a touring car, which will be used for quick deliveries when his truck is on the street or in need of repair. Funeral work is keeping him busy. W. J. B.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.

The Market.

Business was much better last week. A heavy frost helped trade wonderfully. Funeral work for the last few days has been extra heavy and all have had their share. Some fine white mums are coming in from the Kansas City market.

Various Notes.

Rauch Bros. have moved from their old location in the Colonial hotel to South street. They have a splendid window. Their stock is obtained from their greenhouses in Monett, Mo.

The J. W. Stokes Floral Co. has the cut flower department in Herr's new department store and reports business good. This company had the decorations for the Mann-McGregor wedding last week. The church and home were decorated with palms, ferns and white mums. The bridesmaids carried hats made up of Killarney roses; the bride's bouquet was a shower of lily of the valley.

The greenhouses of the Summerfield Floral Co. are in first-class condition. Their mums are excellent and will be ready soon for cutting. This store had a large decoration last week at the Colonial hotel. There were included thirty-six corsage bouquets, as well as the table decorations.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Business was excellent all of last week, until October 15, when the higher temperature and the arrival of larger shipments of mums and roses combined to weaken the market. But if shipments and attending conditions will hold values where they are until Thanksgiving, there will be no cause for complaint. The "street" was sold clean several days. There seems to be a wider area than ever to cover this fall and a larger number of florists in the retail field. Already there have been some notable banquets and weddings, and many retailers report a busy half month in October. Besides, football demands will materialize soon and Thanksgiving is near.

The buyers last week wore long faces and have complained because of the departure of bargain days. But they are likely to have another opportunity before the present week is over, if the mum arrivals come anywhere near the estimates. In fact, the chrysanthemum already dominates the market and the flood has only just begun. Monrovia, Unaka, Polly Rose, Chrysolora, Yellow Frost and Golden Queen are numerous. Before another week passes there will be as many varieties of mums as of roses.

The prices of roses of all kinds are weakening, including even the novelties and Beauties. Short-stemmed roses, in quantity, sell at from $1 to $2 per hundred, but growers certainly have no cause for complaint.

By the end of this week there should be no left-overs of yellow mums, roses or daisies, as the yellows, including yellow dahlias, also, if frost does not prevent, will be honored by the suffragettes, in their grand march up Fifth avenue, October 23.

Beauties were down to 25 cents October 16. There was a break of about twenty per cent in almost everything, as compared with the week previous. Orchids are down again, bringing only 25 cents for selected sorts. Gigas and Dowiana in limited quantities are in the market and these command higher quotations. Oncidiums, however, are selling at better prices than a week ago.

Dahlias are still a market feature. The show and cactus kinds sell readily at good prices, some as high as 50 cents to $1 per dozen. Pansies, daisies, stevias and calendulas are more abundant, and violets have begun their six months' visitation.

Good carnations are not yet plentiful and the best of them sold at $4 per hundred toward the close of last week. There are plenty of arrivals not worth half that price.

Tritomas, hydrangeas and calla lilies are abundant. Gardenias improve daily. Valley is not so scarce this week and the best goes at $4 per hundred. Longiflorum lilies hold well at the average level of the month, the top price being $8 per hundred.

Various Notes.

The Growers' Cut Flower Co. held its annual meeting last week and elected the following officers: President, Anton Schultheis; vice-president, J. Hauck; secretary, P. Beuerlein; treasurer, R. J. Rogers; directors, Harry Weston, J. J. Brozart, G. Bain and J. Bracker. J. J. Coan will continue as manager. The company has had a thoroughly successful year under the managment of Mr. Coan.

Komitsch & Junge, of Secaucus, are sending Traendly & Schenck some splendid Chrysolora, white and yellow Frost, Rosiere and Monrovia.

The Walter R. Siebrecht Co. states that its new auto delivery is proving a great convenience as well as a handsome vehicle.

The future meetings of the flower show committee, it is said, will be held at the Breslin hotel, at Twenty-ninth street and Broadway. The Breslin is one of the popular stopping places of visiting florists.

A sign reading, "Time to Plant Bulbs," partially covers the display window of the Harry A. Bunyard Co. Vice-president Frank Duggan has made an effective arrangement of seasonable bulbs.

October 15 the stork paid its third visit to the home of Peter F. McKenney and left another boy.

New York had another dahlia show last week, at Galvin's, where Frank L. Deery, of Boston, is manager. The big show windows were a perfect riot of color, over 200 varieties of Geo. L. Stillman's prize-winning dahlias being used. Mr. Stillman was present. Mr. Deery has located with his family at Murray Hill, L. I. He was at Boston October 16, superintending a large wedding job.

Siebrecht Bros., Inc., is the title of the successor of Siebrecht & Son, at 619 Fifth avenue. Mr. Siebrecht, Sr., has been active in the retail business of New York since 1867. He will now give his undivided attention to his nursery and landscape work and to the growing of orchids, roses, etc., for the wholesale market. Wm. R. Siebrecht has had the management of the retail store since 1900 and is president and manager of the new corporation.

George Stumpp, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., has returned from a pleasant and profitable western trip, which included a visit to Chicago.

R. W. Jackson is one of the selling force of Riedel & Meyer, Inc.

President Patrick Welch, of the S. A. F., was a recent visitor.

Woodrow & Marketos had a "full house" last week. They packed and shipped $20,000 worth of palms, evergreens and plant novelties to fill an order for the Berkshires. The firm also has an order for a large herbaceous garden at Ridgefield, Conn., and another for the planting of evergreens in Straus park, at One Hundred Seventh street and Broadway.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co., in locating its new retail store at 182 Fulton street, obtained a site that is close to the Hudson terminal. The auction sales at Vesey street are well attended.

The fall exhibitions of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, at Madison, N. J.; the Dutchess County Horticultural Society, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and the Monmouth County Horticultural Society, at Red Bank, N. J., will be held on the same dates, October 27 to 29. The Glen Cove show will close October 29. Oyster Bay will have its exhibition November 2.

Charles F. Kessler, salesman for his brother, William Kessler, will be married October 23 to Miss M. Bente, at her home, 327 West Twenty-eighth street. It is needless to say that the floral decorations will be elaborate.

The South Park Floral Co., Newcastle, Ind., is sending George Elger roses to the John Young Co. The variety, a companion to Cecile Brunner, is known to many as Baby Doll.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The market was brisk last week and the fall season seems to have opened better this year than last. In the first part of the week stock was extremely scarce, but more was forthcoming during the latter half. Outdoor stock is about over, and carnations, which at this time are almost entirely relied upon, have been scarce and poor. They are improving, however, and are more plentiful, but are still insufficient for the demand. Chrysanthemums are coming to the market in good shape, in yellow, white and lavender. The yellows, chiefly Chrysolora, are especially fine and have sold fast. Roses are in good condition, but in some varieties a scarcity is noticed. The Francis Scott Key rose is well liked here and it keeps well. Ophelia, Sunburst and Ward are good sellers. Double White Killarney is in good shape. Sweetheart roses with bachelor's buttons make up attractively in corsages. Bouvardia is in the pink of condition and is moving well. Pansies are plentiful. Lilies are scarce. Valley is good, but moves slowly. Orchids and gardenias are good and sell well. Tuberoses continue to arrive and are much used in funeral work. Daisies, larkspurs, gaillardias, cosmos and ornamental grasses are used a great deal for basket work, for which there is a growing demand.

Various Notes.

Several members of the Rochester Florists' Association met at the Central Park hotel and enjoyed a game of bowling. It is understood that the Rochester bowlers are planning a trip to Cleveland in the near future.

The first meeting of the Florists' Association for the winter season was held at the Musicians' Headquarters on Monday evening, October 11. About thirty were present. After the transaction of the regular business, John Dunbar, assistant superintendent of parks, spoke on his recent trip to Boston and outlined the workings of the Arnold Arboretum. It proved to be a highly interesting talk. The chairman, Chas. H. Vick, announced some good speakers for the coming meetings, which will be held monthly.

Julius Berg, of Lion & Co., New York, called on the trade last week. He is booking some good Christmas orders.

George Cramer recently purchased about five tons of decorative rock for window boxes and artificial ponds.

J. B. Keller Sons have had a large and elaborate wedding decoration at Hazleton, Pa., and four of their chief help have been there for a week, with F. J. Keller in charge. Wilfred Keller expects to visit Philadelphia, Boston and New York after this job is over.

The Lady Florists' Association held the first monthly meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. W. Dumond, at Brighton, N. Y., October 12. The usual business was transacted and refreshments were served.

Charles W. Curtis is meeting with splendid success in his first attempt at chrysanthemum growing. His greenhouse, which is 200 feet long, is full of Chrysoloras and Bonnaffons, all coming along in fine shape. He has commenced cutting Chrysoloras, which have fine blooms, with stems over five feet long.

Arthur Zirkman, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, had a fine layout at the Seneca hotel last week. He reports excellent business in this city.

George T. Boucher, in his East avenue window, has a fine display of well colored crotons in various sizes. He reports business exceptionally good.

H. E. Wilson has received a large shipment of fancy baskets and basket vases. His new window continues to attract large crowds.

H. P. Neun has returned from his business trip to New York and Boston.

The Maurer-Haap Co. has a splendid showing of Dutch bulbs in the window. Most of the 10-cent stores also are handling them. H. J. H.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Last week the weather was delightful. It almost seemed a shame that the frost should have put an end to all outdoor flowers, especially when people still are outdoors a great deal. Stock of all kinds is scarce. The growers did not have the usual number of early chrysanthemums, which are now almost over, and the later sorts are slow in arriving. Carnations continue much short of the demand; the same is true of roses, especially in the shorter grades. The only flowers plentiful are Beauties and orchids.

The wholesale houses clean up early each day and the men have plenty of time to devote to the supplies, which are beginning to move better as the season advances. The retailers all seemed to be busy last week, a number of large funerals being responsible for most of the activity.

Various Notes.

W. C. Beckert has been busy with bulb orders. His display windows are attractively dressed with all kinds of bulbs and no doubt they are responsible for the rush in that department.

Among the visitors last week were Mrs. Mary A. Miller and son, of Moundsville, W. Va., who were purchasing supplies for the fall and holiday season; Miss Weber, of Fairmont, W. Va., and B. H. Walker, of Johnstown, Pa. Clarke.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business was good last week. Stock has remained extremely scarce and orders have so far exceeded the supply that it has been a serious problem to try to give everybody something. Despite the cuts on orders, there was not nearly enough stock to go around and many orders had to be turned down entirely.

The supply of roses has increased to some extent, but the demand has increased much faster. They are in fine shape and, even though prices have advanced, everyone got his money's worth. Carnations are slowly increasing in supply and the cut will be much larger within a week or so. The quality is fine and no complaints are heard, although the prices run from $3 to $4 per hundred. The late chrysanthemums are coming in more heavily and are of excellent quality. Pompons also are making their appearance. It is expected that this stock will be sufficiently plentiful in a few days to ease market conditions. In violets the single stock is much better than the double, but neither variety is in sufficient supply to cut much figure in the market.

Frosts have killed the outdoor stock, and the loss of asters and dahlias has helped, of course, to increase the demand for roses and carnations. Stock in general has been so high-priced that some dry goods stores that have heretofore disposed of lots of cheap flowers have been obliged to go without much stock lately, as it is impossible for them to offer bargains at present.

Various Notes.

William Lubliner, at 123 Grand avenue, will be obliged to vacate his store shortly, with all the other tenants of the block, as work will shortly be started there on a large modern building. He has secured a store at 225 Grand avenue, which is one of the busiest spots in the city. There should be no question of his success at the new stand, as it has every advantage of the old one and some added attractions.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. is just completing two new houses at the Brown Deer range. This addition will be used for plants and will enable the firm to increase its output materially. The entire range at Brown Deer and the one at Humboldt avenue have undergone a thorough overhauling and are in exceptionally fine shape. Some Chrysolora chrysanthemums that were cut at Brown Deer last week were unusually fine and brought fancy prices.

J. M. Fox & Son had a large wedding decoration last week. This, coupled with the steady sales, kept the firm exceptionally busy. They report that they have some large orders for future delivery.

A. McDonald, manager of Gimbel's flower department, says that the business has surpassed all expectations, though he anticipated an exceptionally good year.

M. A. McKenney & Co. were going from morning till night last week and they report that fall business has commenced with a rush, though somewhat late in arriving. H. J. S.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are coming in heavily and the demand for them still is strong. The opening of a large department store October 18, with ceremonies continuing throughout the week, brought calls for a large quantity of mums, Beauties, fancy roses, etc. Lilies and valley are scarce.

Various Notes.

The committee in charge of the bowling tournament is working hard to arrange a suitable list of prizes. H. P. Knoble, general chairman of the flower show committee, has offered a life membership in the S. A. F. as the grand prize, to be rolled for by the high average man in each team and the five high average men in the singles. Herbert Bate, president of the Cleveland Florists' Club, offers $10 in gold, to be placed by the committee. It now looks as though ten or twelve teams will compete.

Visitors last week were Frank Farney and George Hampton, of Philadelphia.

At the annual meeting of the J. M. Gasser Co., held October 14, F. C. W. Brown was appointed a director and made general manager and treasurer of the company. F. A. F.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—An 8-page trade list of sweet peas. The first half of the space is occupied by pictures and descriptions of half a dozen novelties; then follows an advance offer of standard varieties for 1916. The booklet states that in spite of insect pests and excessive rains, the company is "in a position to supply in quantity any of the varieties offered."

Fraser Nursery Co., Huntsville, Ala.—Wholesale catalogue of fruit trees, small fruits, nut trees, ornamental trees and shrubs, roses, garden roots, nursery tools and supplies; twenty-eight pages, bound in a neat green and gold cover. Included in the lists are seedlings and other young stock for transplanting.

Arthur T. Boddington Co., Inc., New York, N. Y.—Wholesale list of bulbs and flower seeds for florists; twenty pages, illustrated. Grass seeds, mushroom spawn, fertilizers, insecticides, tools, plant tubs and other greenhouse requisites also are included.

Perry's Hardy Plant Farm, Enfield, England.—"Catalogue of Bulbs, Alpines and Perennials for Autumn Planting," a 90-page book of the typical Perry style, compactly and accurately printed and containing comparatively few illustrations. The stock in the first ten pages is listed under the head of "New and Rare Border and Rock Plants"; then follow twenty-seven pages of bulbs; next are general collections of asters, delphiniums, papavers, phloxes, gaillardias, irises, climbing plants, wall shrubs, uncommon flowering shrubs, etc. The book ends with a 24-page miscellaneous list of perennials.

United States Nursery Co., Roseacres, Miss.—A 26-page, illustrated wholesale list, "for nurserymen, florists and dealers." Field-grown roses, being a specialty, are listed most conspicuously, but shrubs, vines, peonies, phloxes, irises, cannas and miscellaneous perennials also are offered. In the shrubbery is included young stock for transplanting.

Anderson Floral Co., Anderson, S. C.—"Bulbs for Fall Planting," an illustrated catalogue of hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, narcissi, irises, crocuses, freesias and lilies; eight pages and cover. Enclosed, also, is a separate list of sweet pea seeds.

Ithaca, N. Y.—The Floricultural Club of Cornell University, known as the Lazy Club, was addressed by Professors White and Lumsden, on the subject of "Mums," at its semimonthly meeting October 18.

OBITUARY

John White.

John White, one of the oldest horticulturists in the country, died at his home, 1263 Waverly place, Elizabeth, N. J., October 15, after a brief illness. Mr. White was 90 years old. Death was due to a general breakdown due to old age.

Mr. White was born in Bedford, England. When a young man he came to this country and became a resident of Jersey City. He had studied horticulture in England. When he settled in Jersey City he entered the florists' business, establishing greenhouses there, and also his store at 97 Nassau street, New York city. A little over thirty years ago he gave up his store in New York and removed from Jersey City to Elizabeth, where he erected greenhouses at Waverly place. He retired from business three years ago.

Mr. White's flowers were frequently seen at horticultural exhibits, and he often carried off prizes. He was the originator of American Pride and Show pansies. At one time he was a member of several New York trade societies. He was the oldest member of Washington lodge, No. 33, F. and A. M.

He is survived by one son, John White, Jr., a florist; his daughter, Mrs. D. A. Daland; a grandson, James White, also a florist, and a second grandchild. R. B. M.

William A. Ireland.

William A. Ireland, of Salem, Mass., died October 9 from injuries sustained in a fall in the street a few days previously. The deceased was born at Salem in the early days of 1833 and was educated in the public schools, being a member of the twenty-first class to enter the famous Salem English high school. In 1877 Mr. Ireland started a florists' business and conducted greenhouses at his home at Cabot and Cypress streets, until ten years ago, when he retired. He is survived by a son, William, and two daughters, Mrs. S. Blaney and Mary Ireland.

William H. Maher.

William H. Maher, for several years one of the best known private gardeners and florists of Newport, R. I., died Columbus day, October 12, at his home on Coggeshall avenue, Newport, after a lingering illness. He was a son of the late William H. and Margaret Maher, and was in his thirty-ninth year. He was unmarried. Two sisters made their home with him. He was for several years foreman of Hose Company No. 3, of the volunteer fire department of Newport. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus and was affiliated with the Newport Horticultural Society. W. H. M.

Charles B. Chase.

Charles B. Chase, who, although only 46 years of age, deserves to be classed as one of the veterans among Chicago retail florists, died October 13, after an illness of several months with heart and kidney disorders. Mr. Chase had conducted his store at 2205 South Michigan avenue for many years, with the assistance of Mrs. Chase, who survives him. Until his last illness he was constantly present in the store, although the loss of his sight, which was added to his other physical disabilities, unfitted him for the tasks that he loved. Mrs. Chase will continue the business.

David Tisch.

The trade in the San Francisco section was grieved to learn of the death last week of David Tisch, for years manager of the nursery department of the Henry M. Sanborn Co., of Oakland, Cal., who passed away after a long illness at the age of 67. He was a native of Germany, but spent most of his life in this country, moving to the Pacific coast many years ago from St. Louis. Mr. Tisch was well known all over the coast. He was a prominent member of the I. O. O. F. and other organizations. S. H. G.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

Charles A. Duerr, of Newark, O., has been unusually busy with funeral work for the last few weeks.

The Kent Bros. Flower Shop, Newark, is showing Dutch bulbs, for which there is an exceptionally good demand.

George B. Watkins, of Zanesville, O., is repairing and renovating his houses.

The florists of Coshocton, O., were busy last week at the Coshocton fair. Exhibits were made by S. M. Hamilton, Edward Nash and Mrs. Emma J. Clary.

I. A. Oldham, of Cambridge, O., who recently took up the florists' business again, has his houses in first-class condition.

Frederick W. Arnold, of Cambridge, is visiting the florists throughout the southern and eastern parts of Ohio.

George Stanley Wehrley has bought the store of the Misses Forbes and Donahey, at Wheeling, W. Va. Mr. Wehrley will use some novel decorations in refurnishing the store.

John Hellstern, of Wheeling, is in the midst of the fall rush, when hedges, lawns and outdoor perennials have to be looked after.

Arthur Langhans, of Wheeling, has a large display of bulbs. With the help of attractive and unique signs in his windows, he finds a ready sale for them.

Frank C. Seibert, of Wheeling, who spent six weeks in the west with his wife, visiting the two expositions, says that the west, to him, is greatly overdrawn, both as to its climate and scenery. "The West Virginia hills are still the beauty spots in America to me," he said.

Charles H. Miller, of Moundsville, W. Va., has taken over the business of his mother, Mrs. Mary Miller. After making some improvements, he will have a store that will rank well with other flower stores in West Virginia for beauty. W. T. U.

Ashtabula, O.—E. W. Stearns, lately with A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., is now associated with Faust & Lockwood, growers of roses and carnations.

Newport, R. I.—The proposal to merge the Newport Horticultural Society, the Newport Garden Association and the Newport Garden Club into one organization has been abandoned. The yearly shows will continue to be held under the joint auspices of the three organizations, however.

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

BUSINESS is decidedly better than it was a year ago, but collections are not noticeably easier.

THE unusual height attained this season by most of the chrysanthemums is attributed to the cool, damp summer.

A NOTEWORTHY factor in the business is the large number of weddings now taking place on Saturdays, otherwise quite generally the florists' busy day.

IF your store is to be considered at all up-to-date you must have several cages of canaries in it, and perhaps a number of the little songsters loose in the show house.

THE early chrysanthemums have returned the growers decidedly better money than was obtained last season. If the mid-season and later sorts pay as well everyone will be happy.

WHEN first frosts crowd greenhouse space there always are large stocks of ferns, worked up in summer, that are pressing for a market. Next spring there will be a different story, for then the buyers will be hunting Bostons.

IMMORTELLES.

The steamer from Marseilles that arrived at New York October 15 brought 126 cases of immortelles, 34 cases for A. Herrmann, 63 cases for H. Bayersdorfer & Co., and 29 cases consigned to a forwarder.

The supply, while thought to be equal to the needs of all the markets that are open this year, is slow in coming forward.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

TWO YEARS.

Lee, W. S., New York, N. Y.
Tulis, James, South Sudbury, Mass.
Saling, J. W., Rahway, N. J.
Zetlitz, R., Lima, O.
Tansey, Thomas, Philadelphia, Pa.
Rohrer, H. D., Lancaster, Pa.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

OCTOBER IS GOOD.

Business has been unusually good for October and there are quite a few growers who will find the month the best they have had in more than a year, better even than the months that have special flower days. While not all can say October is better than last December, compared to last year's October business, the increase is most encouraging; the season promises unusually well.

The most satisfactory feature of the month's business is that practically everyone seems to be sharing in it. Reports from all the principal cities tell much the same story—demand is so brisk that prices are not only much better than at this time last year, but they are even better than at this season in normal years and the growers who are cutting anything like their usual crops are recouping some of the losses of the preceding months.

HELP FOR FATHER SCHOENER.

The Portland news-letter this week reports the destruction by fire October 9 of the church, residence and garden of Father Schoener, of Brooks, Ore. Rose growers know Father Schoener as an indefatigable hybridizer, whose collection numbered varieties from every continent, and who has produced as high as 120,000 hybridized rose seeds in one season.

Robert Pyle, of Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., asks The Review to open its columns for the appeal in his behalf. "If you find it possible to make editorial mention regarding this I shall certainly appreciate it, as will also Father Schoener, for whom I am sure that every good-hearted florist will be glad to do what he can," writes Mr. Pyle, who says:

"Send your contributions to S. S. Pennock, president of the American Rose Society, 1618 Ludlow street, Philadelphia, Pa., who will acknowledge and forward same. May your response be prompt. Thank you."

CROP CONDITIONS.

With good grain crops florists in general are assured a prosperous season, so it is a satisfaction to note the estimates of the Department of Agriculture for October 1, which show record crops of wheat, oats, barley and hay, and a corn crop closely approaching the record. The returns to the department indicate a production of approximately three billion bushels of corn, one and a half billion bushels of oats, one billion bushels of wheat, almost a quarter billion bushels of barley, and a hundred million tons of hay, if the twenty million estimated tons of wild hay, a crop not heretofore reported upon, be included.

According to the reports received by the department, prospects improved during September for all of these crops. The conditions during the month were generally favorable to the maturity of growing crops, to harvesting and to fall plowing. The proportion of warm and sunny days was higher than in prior months, though there were rather general storms toward its close. The moisture for the month was normal or below, except in portions of the north central states, particularly the northern tier. The droughty conditions in some gulf and western states were relieved by late rains in most states affected. Frost did little damage, except in portions of the extreme northern states.

NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER.

Weekly weather forecast, issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., for the week beginning Wednesday, October 20, 1915:

For the Region of the Great Lakes—There will be rain October 20 over the northern portion of the upper Lake district, extending that night and October 21 throughout the Lake region generally. After October 21 the weather will be generally fair, with somewhat lower temperatures for a day or two.

For the Upper Mississippi Valley and Plains States—With the exception of local rains October 20 in the upper Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys, the weather will be generally fair during the week, although unsettled weather is again probable over the extreme northwest toward the end of the week. It will be somewhat cooler October 20 in the northwest, and on October 21 in the upper Mississippi valley.

For the Ohio Valley and Tennessee—Fair weather October 20 and 21 will be followed by rain about October 22, and by generally fair weather during the remainder of the week. Temperatures will be somewhat above the seasonal average during the greater part of the week.

For South Atlantic and East Gulf States—Rain October 20, probably continuing October 21 along the South Atlantic coast. Otherwise generally fair weather will prevail during the week. Temperatures will be moderate.

For the West Gulf States—Generally fair weather is indicated for the week, with moderate temperatures.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The Chicago market, though still anomalously short for this time of the year, is appreciably easier than it was last week, and a few more days of warm weather would quite probably result in a plethora, of chrysanthemums at least. Demand was far in excess of supply the latter part of last week, but the bad weather October 17 caused a noticeable cessation in the call, though not enough to interfere with the market's clearing. The present week opened with a short, firm market and a quiet demand that proved sufficient to take care of all receipts.

Some of the Beauties coming into the market are of excellent quality, and though more plentiful in supply than other roses are yet short enough to clear each day. All other varieties of roses continue scarce, and prices accordingly show no tendency to weaken. Quality, on the whole, is unusually good. Demand, though by no means discriminating, favors the red varieties. But under conditions like those now prevailing in the Chicago market, this becomes a negligible factor, for all alike move. Mrs. Russell is in special request.

Chrysanthemums are much more plentiful than anything else in the market. And while there is some excellent stock available, there is a noticeable quantity that falls somewhat below the usual standard of quality. Smith's Advance and Golden Glow have gone. October Frost is singing its swan song. Touset has arrived on the scene, and Unaka and Pacific Supreme can be supplied in almost any quantity. Pompons now are available in considerable quantity and are selling well.

Carnations are improving in quality every day. Stems are longer, flowers are larger and color is materially truer. Carnations, always popular even when plentiful and of indifferent quality, do not require the services of a salesman to move them now. The difficult thing in this market is to fill orders.

Single violets are becoming more plentiful, but the supply is remarkably short for this time of the year. It is needless to say those received are picked up at once. The first doubles from the Hudson river district arrived this week. Easter lilies and rubrums still find a ready sale, although the former are much more plentiful than in the last few weeks. Valley growers contrive to keep the supply just short of the demand. There are a few asters and some short snapdragons to be seen, but not in sufficient quantities to cut any figure.

Greens are enjoying a continuance of last week's demand.

It isn't the Ruscus that's scarce this season, though there's none too much of that—it's the DYE. Nearly all coal tar dyes, which come from Germany, are worth today many times the normal price—some colors are so scarce they are not to be had at any price. Red—the real Christmas red—is one of these. Those who own it can't be tempted to sell; those who have none will have to ask their customers to accept an off-color red this Christmas.

Months ago we realized that the dye would be the important thing and we hunted up, bought and stored enough dye to color our usual quantity. You can get the real Christmas Red Ruscus of us as usual.

We hope our regular customers will order at once, as we expect a big rush for Ruscus as soon as the trade finds out how scarce the right color is.

Various Notes.

A corporation has been formed to conduct the Warrington Flower Shop, in the Warrington Theater building at Oak Park. The opening will take place October 27. The manager will be F. Wolfram, formerly with A. Lange.

The condition of John Poehlmann, who for the last week has been a patient in the German hospital, is much improved. Mr. Poehlmann is suffering from an inflammation of the peritoneum, and it was thought for a while that an operation would be advisable, but an X-ray examination revealed that this would not be necessary. He was taken to his home October 20, where he will be under the close observation of the attending physicians.

Negotiations looking to another addition to the colony of wholesale florists in the new Le Moyne building are still hanging fire, but probably will be closed within a few days.

The death of C. B. Chase is reported in this week's obituary column.

nold, of Des Plaines, and bookkeeper in Raske's Flower Shop, 170 West Jackson boulevard, to Robert Renth, has been announced.

Those whose business depends on dyes are having many troubles this year, but the man who looked ahead stands in a position to make money. It is said that the A. L. Randall Co. has been offered a price for its stock of dye, laid in some months ago for ruscus, which represents a better profit than an ordinary season's profit on ruscus. But, of course, the offer was refused, for anyone who owns dye these days is holding it to protect his regular trade.

The demand for flowers shows a regular daily increase, according to C. W. McKellar.

The first Rhinebeck violets of the season arrived October 18, reports John Michelsen, of the E .C. Amling Co. It is a month later than usual.

Starting an extensive two months' advertising campaign, John Mangel invested $350 in the Tribune October 18, to announce the opening of the conservatory back of his store in the Palmer House block. He will carry a considerable stock of plants. One of the season's additions is a large display case for ribbons, art pottery and other accessories. Negotiations are under way for the widening of the store by taking a part of the space now occupied by the Palmer House barber shop.

Two carloads of Chinese lily bulbs reached Chicago last week, consigned to the Central Warehouse Co., which distributed the shipment among houses in the trade.

This is the day to wish August F. Poehlmann many happy returns. He was born October 21, 1869, so he is 46 today.

The illness of Mrs. J. F. Kidwell keeps Mr. Kidwell close at home at Downers Grove.

Did you ever hear of a rose grower whose October sales exceeded those of the previous December? Well, that is the record Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, expects to make this month.

The chrysanthemum show at San Francisco opens this week and C. W. Johnson, secretary of the C. S. A., is in attendance as juror, expenses paid by the exposition. He started October 16.

The only thing to do when you are not busy or when business is not all you could ask is to boost, says Joseph Foerster, of Kyle & Foerster. What the Chicago market needs more than anything else, he thinks, is boosters and not growlers.

A new traveling representative in the south has been added to the force of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., in the person of A. M. Sanders. Mr. Sanders was formerly with S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

"You must keep pace with the neighborhood," says Emil Reichling, superintendent of the Peter Reinberg greenhouses. And as he generally squares his actions with his words, painters are busy making the houses fresh and white.

The shortage of stock that has prevailed for the last two weeks has created in Fred Hoerber, of Hoerber Bros., a desire for more space in which to grow fancy roses.

A carload of Japanese bulbs was received last week by A. Henderson & Co. This, however, is only part of the shipment.

Taking advantage of the excellent condition of the roads and the bright, fall weather October 14, A. L. Vaughan and his daughter, Thelma, motored to Batavia and Aurora, incidentally visiting a number of growers and florists.

The most recent addition to the staff of the A. L. Randall Co. is G. R. Shearer, formerly with the Jones-Russell Co., Cleveland, where he attracted much attention by the taste and origimotored out Milwaukee avenue October 16 to witness the dedication of a 2-mile stretch of newly completed concrete highway, which is to run through Niles Center to the limits of the county. Miss Louise Redfield, cousin of H. B. Kennicott and R. R. Brenton, of Kennicott Bros. Co., served as "Miss Niles" and christened the new road with a bottle of champagne. Standing nearby and lending her moral support was Miss Virginia Poehlmann, daughter of August Poehlmann, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., who recently played the stellar role in a similar performance at the opening of Milwaukee avenue.

A. T. Eichel, who trades as the Irving Park Florist, 4226 North Crawford avenue, received azaleas from Belgium last week. They were in excellent condition.

Mt. Greenwood cemetery never looked better than it does this autumn. The oaks have colored gorgeously and the Japanese barberries are aflame. It is no wonder Mr. Rudd welcomes visitors, for they spread the fame of his gardening. The greenhouses are spick-and-span, as usual. Most of the carnations on the benches, and many of the mums, are C. W. Johnson's seedlings.

The United States Moving Pictures Co., of which Peter Reinberg is a director, has secured a half interest in a 99-year lease on 100 feet of State street frontage, between Jackson boulevard and Van Buren street, on which it will build "the finest moving picture theater in the United States," to quote the advertisements. Mr. Reinberg's company already operates several theaters and is negotiating for others.

A new White truck, carrying the name of the Lawndale Floral Co., is attracting a great deal of attention in the West Twenty-second street district. V. A. Kahout believes it will prove a fine addition to his equipment.

Plans and preparations for the removal of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association into its new quarters in the Le Moyne building, at the end of the month, are occupying most of the time of Manager Paul Klingsporn.

A house 22x100 is being added to the range of John Vachout, 4518 North Crawford avenue.

A quite unique window display attracts the attention of those passing the store of the W. W. Barnard Co. Against a background of autumn leaves is staged a bit of a garden—blooming hyacinths in formal rows, a circle filled with flowering tulips and a profusion of conservatory and garden novelties. Of course the flowers are artificial, but the effect is the same, and that is what counts. A carload of Japanese bulbs was received last week.

C. A. Samuelson's presence on the market October 18 is worth recording, it is so seldom he visits the wholesalers in person.

The distinction of being the only florist to have an exhibit at Chicago's Second Annual Home Exposition, being held in the Coliseum, belongs to Schiller the Florist.

After being confined to his home by a case of blood poisoning resulting from an infected tooth, David D. P. Roy is again at the office. Mr. Roy has filed suit against the dentist for malpractice in treating the wrong tooth, thus causing the infection.

There is nothing like a change of scene, air and companions for a few weeks each year to give one a more cheery outlook on life and a firmer grasp of business, thinks M. C. Gunterberg, who has just tried it.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

An active market continued October 14, 15 and 16, but fell away October 18, 19 and 20 under the influence of warm weather with increased receipts. The dahlias revived from Jack Frost's slap October 10; it took several days for them to get fairly started again and their ranks were thinned, but they got started with a rush, making October 16 the greatest dahlia day of the season. One wholesale house disposed of 50,000 dahlias on that day alone and others marketed large numbers. The demand for dahlias shows signs of falling off now, because of the increased receipts of chrysanthemums. The early varieties of chrysanthemums have been replaced by others of better quality; in yellow, Chrysolora is noticeably an improvement over its predecessors. This applies to white chrysanthemums, where Early Snow is foremost, and to pink, although Pacific Supreme, while a finer flower, is hardly so pronounced in color as Unaka. The high prices recorded on carnations last week have dropped, because of the larger supply and the more numerous chrysanthemums. It could not be expected that the Thanksgiving prices of last year on carnations could be maintained so early this season before killing frost. Roses are more plentiful, but they continue to sell well, particularly good stock. Orchids have advanced from the low level of two weeks ago, although there is no strength in the demand. Gardenias are scarce and high. Valley is in active request and likely to continue so. Easter lilies have been bringing good prices; they have receded slightly. Cosmos has been in request.

National Committee Doings.

The members of the National Flower Show committee were busy during the two days' session. A visit was made to Convention hall, where the flower show will be held, and a trip to the P. A. B. Widener place, at Ogontz, proved interesting to the visitors. The meetings of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club were attended and proved most enthusiastic. Every speaker was heartily applauded. The net result of the meetings was an increase in the show advertising appropriation to $5,000, to cover the cost of posters, poster stamps, window cards and newspaper notices. About 50,000 show programs will be judiciously distributed by the committee. During the show next spring, Convention hall will be heated by a vacuum expert. The cost of renting, heating and removing the chairs from Convention hall will not exceed $1,000. A permanent show office will be opened at the Widener arcade building next week.

Current Events.

Our president suggests the idea here elaborated for a meeting of the Florists' Club. He does not wish, quite properly, to make even a semblance of a plan that might tend to embarrass his able essay committee. But having no such scruples and, in fact, looking forward with keen delight to a bout with the gingery chairman of the committee, I submit the following:

That a debate be arranged for Tuesday, December 7, between two of the club's silver-tongued orators. Subject: "Buying Cut Flowers Below Cost of Production." "How to Achieve It," by Charles H. Grakelow; "How to Prevent It," by Alfred M. Campbell. Ten minutes to be allowed on each side; five minutes for rebuttal, five minutes for surrebuttal.

The clubroom committee would have to provide extra chairs that night.

Past and Present.

There are a good many florists all over the country, in cities, towns, hamlets and villages, reached by the orange-covered Review, who would like to know just what effect the absence of the master hand has had on the greenhouses of Godfrey Aschmann. For nearly a year the hand and brain that for so long guided the place have been absent. What difference has it made? To the visitor walking through the houses today the answer is clear. The mantle of the father has descended on the son, who is worthily carrying on the work. The greenhouses are full of well grown plants that are in excellent condition, ready to meet the requirements of the market in their season. John Godfrey Aschmann was out when I called, so his lieutenant, George H. Holpp, courteously acted as guide. The ferns filled several houses. They comprise the old Boston, Scottii, Whitmani Improved, a pleasing variety; Teddy, Jr., the best of all, which everyone will want when they know it, and a good assortment for ferneries. Araucaria excelsa and A. glauca are perfect "little Christmas trees," good enough to please anyone. There are a number of houses of flowering plants, including Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Gloire de Chatelaine, magnifica and luminosa, Primula obconica (there were no whites) and P. Chinensis. The flowering plant that interested me most was the azalea, a whole house of home-grown plants in three fine varieties that looked most promising. The kentias, cocos and dracænas were all good, accentuating the favorable impression made by the ferns and araucarias.

Various Notes.

The National Flower Show committee of the Society of American Florists met in the Bellevue-Stratford October 19. The chiefs of the local committees gathered the day before to perfect their plans before submitting them to the whole committee. A special meeting of the Florists' Club was held in Horticultural hall October 19, to meet the National Flower Show committee and go over with it the plans for the forthcoming show, to be held in Convention hall, March 25 to April 2, 1916. The outlook is encouraging.

The October meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural hall October 19.

The Collingdale Greenhouses have achieved a good reputation for Asparagus plumosus. The business in seedlings is nation-wide.

Arthur Lush will open a flower store at 5231 Ridge avenue, Wissahickon, October 30.

The M. Rice Co. has been working overtime on the made-in-America stock, which is in heavy demand.

William Graham, star decorator for J. J. Habermehl's Sons, arranged the bouquets for his daughter's wedding October 14, using the new polyantha roses, Cameo, white, and a pink that is called Sweet Marie.

George S. Faulkner has accepted a position with the Century Flower Shop.

The London Flower Shop will have a chauffeuress, so to speak. Mrs. Drew Baer is an ardent suffragist, with the courage of her convictions.

Repeat orders for the new John Wanamaker fern are coming in to the Robert Craig Co.

Frederick Cowperthwaite will speak on bulbs, for the house and garden, before the Merion Civic Association, at the home of Mrs. Edward A. Bok, October 21.

The Chalfont Cut Flower Co., of Chalfont, Pa., has over half of its 21,000 carnations in white, White Enchantress being the only white variety. The other varieties are C. W. Ward, Enchantress and Beacon. Nebraska is being given a trial; it looks remarkably well.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., had a fine exhibit of dahlias and foliage plants in the annex windows last week. The whole annex is devoted to bulbs of high grade. The receipts from the dahlia sales for the Martha Washington Memorial at Valley Forge were gratifying.

The Joseph G. Neidinger Co. is filling a popular want with home-made baskets, apparently more in request than were the imported baskets.

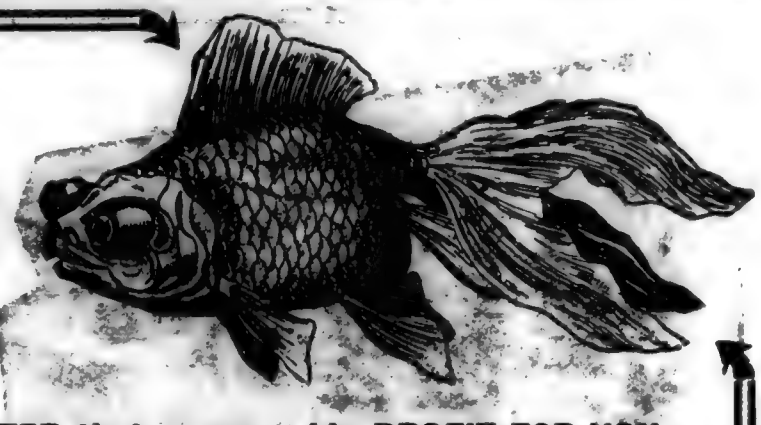
The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange is an active place. Mr. Duetscher says that they have done much better than he expected, so far. Thanks to the fine flowers received.

George Aeugle is receiving fine valley at the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. store. Phil.

The North American for October 18 contained an excellent write-up of Antoine Wintzer, of West Grove, with cuts over five columns, descriptive of his work in hybridizing the canna, with special reference to the new white variety, Venus.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.



The rising temperature last week increased the production of flowers of all kinds. Quality in many lines, however, is not all that could be expected. Practically every day during the week the wholesale and commission houses were compelled to refuse orders for valley. Growers in this section are apparently continuing to conserve their supplies of pips, realizing that the shipments from abroad are difficult, if not impossible, to obtain. They are dividing their stocks so as to have sufficient to carry them through the winter. As a result of this shortage the price of valley has again risen to $5 per hundred.

Changes in the weather have had the effect of lessening the supply of Easter lilies so that there is a shortage. The growers usually curtail their production during the chrysanthemum season, while some do not bring in any at all during that period. This year chrysanthemums were abnormally late, causing a heavy demand for Easter lilies earlier in the season. The market was caught short and it is now impossible to fill all orders.

White roses are more plentiful and are meeting with a good demand. All varieties are improving. Carnations are being received in better shape and the quantity of the consignments is increasing. At present these flowers clean up well daily, buyers being glad to secure even the lower grades.

The dahlia situation this year has been a matter of great surprise to both growers and retailers. Not only have they sold better than ever before, but up to this time there has been no glut. In previous years dahlias have been thrown away by the thousands, while the salable stock brought hardly enough to make their production a paying proposition. Chrysanthemums have also sold better and brought more money than ever before at this time of the year.

city and in Baltimore is being extended to J. J. Perry, manager of the branch store of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. in the latter city, who last week met with the sad loss of his mother, Mrs. Martha Ann Perry, of Washington. Mrs. Perry was 82 years of age and had been ill for some time. The funeral took place from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. M. P. Gregory, at 3637 Warder street, northwest. Interment was in Frederick, Md.

Sympathy is also being extended to Archie Roberts, formerly with George C. Shaffer, who recently suffered the loss of his wife. Mrs. Roberts was stricken with her fatal illness just one hour before her death.

Among the visitors of the week were T. A. Bell, of Hamrick & Co., Staunton, Va.; C. W. Ward, of Eureka, Cal.; William P. Craig, of Philadelphia; Joseph I. Adler, representing the Botanical Decorating Co., of Chicago; Charles E. Meehan, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, and Sidney H. Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Wholesale prices were high again last week, so high that florists who have a medium-class trade bought only sparingly. With carnations costing 4 and 5 cents each wholesale, and chrysanthemums running from $3 to $5 a dozen, florists who have but little trade in wealthy circles find it difficult to charge a price that will allow a fair profit. While carnations and chrysanthemums are improving in quality, they are not yet up to the best standard. The chrysanthemums are good, but are the smaller varieties. The growers are much pleased with the condition of their plants, and it will be only a couple of weeks or so before there will be an abundance of the finest of blooms. Recent frosts have injured the asters. Considerable numbers are still coming to the market, but they are far less abundant than they were and the quality is poor. They help in the making of funeral pieces until better flowers can be secured at reasonable prices. Roses are fairly abundant and of good quality. Orchids are fine and quite plentiful; they bring a good price. There are some fine dahlias in the market, but the frosts have begun to hit this crop.

General business conditions continue to improve and the florists' business reflects the condition of other lines. Most of the florists, even those who report things still a little quiet, look for good business during the coming fall and winter.

Various Notes.

Charles Trauth states that fall business is opening fairly well and that the outlook for the future is good. He is having a great deal of funeral work. The high price of flowers, however, tends to prevent good profits.

Charles E. Maillard says counter trade has not improved much this fall, but he has a fair amount of funeral work.

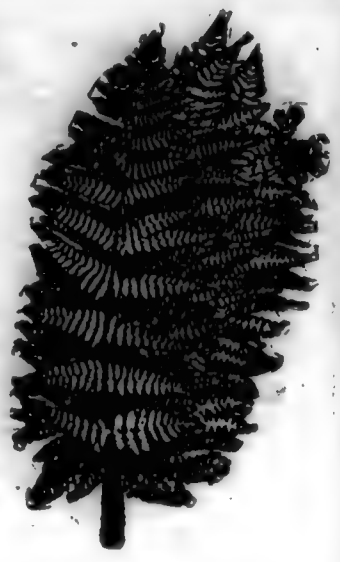
Ralph Plebany is now planting large numbers of bulbs. He has just put in 25,000 single Golden Spurs. His Paper Whites, planted some time ago, are now coming up. He has 40,000 geranium cuttings in, besides having several thousand stock plants. A large new smoke-stack has been erected at his greenhouses.

H. Hornecker, in East Orange, erected several reinforced cement benches in his greenhouses during the summer. As his old benches wear out he will replace them with cement ones, until all are of that material. He reports that fall business is starting well.



Business is improving at Penek's Cut Flower Market, on Academy street. From the way in which people buy, it would appear that more of them are at work than in the earlier months of the year.

Large crowds visited the store and greenhouses of the Manda Floral Co., in West Orange, during the orchid show, which came to a close last week. There were hundreds of orchids in blossom, including some rare varieties. Hundreds of kentias, ferns and odd plants were used as a background for the orchids. The store and windows were prettily decorated.

McLaughlin & Murphy have painted and otherwise renovated their store, preparatory to the opening of the new season. They report business somewhat improved and money coming in more easily.

Charles Momm & Sons, the nurserymen at Irvington, report that the fall business is opening well.

Ludolff & Kautzman, at 109 Springfield avenue, say that funerals and weddings are bringing considerable business, but counter trade is slow. The fact that building and loan association receipts in this vicinity are heavier than ever before would indicate that many people think it wise to invest their surplus money where it will be safe until business uncertainties are past.

Henry Breninger, at Springfield avenue and Eighteenth street, is making alterations in his store. He has had a good deal of funeral work and some wedding decorations of late, but reports business generally a little slow.

At Jahn's, 453 Springfield avenue, business is said to be spotty. For a week or so trade may be brisk, and then for a like period it is quiet. The outlook, however, is fair. R. B. M.

SCRANTON, PA.

The Market.

Business last week was good. Stock of all kinds cleaned up at excellent prices. A killing frost has ended all outdoor flowers. Carnations are scarce on account of the dark weather. Chrysanthemums are plentiful and of good quality. They bring good prices. Roses are plentiful, with Russell in the lead as the best seller.

Various Notes.

October 16 witnessed the opening of the New York Floral Co. branch store, at 401 Spruce street. This is one of the best locations in Scranton and on opening day the store did a flourishing business. Gustave Bernstein, formerly with Alex. Warendorff, of New York, is in charge of the store. Among the many artistic baskets in the window, I make special mention of a large basket of gorgeous exhibition mums. A large number of floral gifts were received from out-of-town florists.

Morel Bros. had the decorations at the church and home for the Henderson-Reed wedding.

Make Your Tires Last For 10,000 Miles

The heaviest item in your up-keep is for tires—both casings and tubes. About the only complaint you have to make is the constant expense for tires. Why? Because the pneumatic tire is the only thing that has not been improved about the automobile.

Throw away your tire pump and save that unnecessary expense by equipping your car with Peerless Tire Cushions.

The only perfect substitute for air. Can be taken out and placed in new casing when old is worn out.

Guaranteed to be as resilient as air. To be 25 per cent lighter than any other. TO END ALL punctures, blow-outs and other tire annoyances. To eliminate the expensive, troublesome inner tube and to preserve the casings. To satisfy every user. Not to change under heat, cold or water. Not to crumble, oxidize or rot. Not to flatten.

Guaranteed to be a mint for live, energetic agents

Splendid territory open for the right men.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received----------	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders--------	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florists's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

Cut flowers have been exceedingly scarce. This was due to the fact that last week there was little sunshine. Florists were handicapped to a great extent as a result, especially as a large amount of funeral work created demands which could not be filled. Carnations were few, and, with practically no roses on the market, florists found themselves battling with the greatest cut flower scarcity that has prevailed in this city in years.

A fine cut of chrysanthemums is obtainable now. Due to the fact that all outdoor flowers are gone, a great demand exists for mums.

Some fine specimens of Hoosier Beauty and Killarney are on the market, but there are not enough blooms to supply the wants of the trade.

Week of Conclave.

The first half of last week was a busy period for the florists, when the Knights Templar of the state of Ohio assembled for their annual conclave. Extra help was required by many stores to handle the large amount of work during the three days of the conclave. Never before in Toledo were so many flowers used at one time for decorations and corsage bouquets.

The largest order received by a Toledo florist was that given to Metz & Bateman for the decorations used in the Masonic Temple. Earl Metz, member of the firm, belongs to the order. The walls and ceilings of the four floors of the Temple were covered with wild smilax, which was varied by large clusters of Hoosier Beauty roses. The assembly room, the main lobby and the rails of the marble staircases were decorated with clusters of American Beauties. Besides the decoration at the Temple, Metz & Bateman also decorated for a banquet given at the Toledo Club by the local Masonic body. These decorations were of Killarney roses and adiantum.

The Boody House and Hotel Secor, where various commanderies had their headquarters, were handsomely decorated also. The florists who had charge of these decorations were Mrs. J. B. Freeman, Schramm Bros., and Miss Helen Patten.

Metz & Bateman, Schramm Bros., and Mrs. J. B. Freeman, together with Max Spanner and Miss Patten, had orders for about 4,000 corsage bouquets for the grand ball.

The florists' windows were trimmed most lavishly and received many compliments. Mrs. J. B. Freeman dressed her window in bright oak leaves, with a large emblem of the Knights Templar in the center of the window. Along the front of the window she displayed some choice orchids.

Miss Patten had her large show window handsomely arranged with ferns and palms, surrounding a large cross and crown which stood about eight feet high.

Schramm Bros. produced a pleasing effect by a unique color system of electric lighting, which threw bright rays on a huge cross of red carnations and a crown of Aaron Ward roses. Fine orchids added to the beauty of the window.

Memorial hall was handsomely decorated with yellow chrysanthemums and red roses, the official colors of the Masonic order. Large groups of these with banks of palms added to the splendor of the assembly room, where the officials of the order held their farewell meeting.

Club Meeting.

At a meeting of the Toledo Florists' Club, held October 12, at the store of Max Spanner, much business was transacted in regard to the flower show which will be staged at the Museum of Art, November 8 to 10. Arthur Kneisle was appointed to visit all local florists and learn the details as to the exhibits to be made. He will report to the board of directors at the next meeting. Everyone is working with might and soul to make the show a success. Meetings of the club will be held every Tuesday night until the week of the show.

William Krueger and J. L. Schiller have been appointed as the show committee. William Phillips will take care of securing the necessary equipment for the table decorations. The florists feel that the show will place Toledo in line with other cities of its size when it comes to putting on a real event of this kind.

The Market.

The arrival of increasing numbers of chrysanthemums, hurried along by the mild October weather, is causing an all-around recession in prices. This has been anticipated and growers are glad to have had at least a fortnight of really good business. The leading chrysanthemums coming in are Unaka, Chrysolora, Halliday, October Frost, Pacific and Polly Rose. Golden Glow and Advance are over. Prices so far have held up well, but are now showing a steady decline. Roses have been selling remarkably well at good prices, but are now cheaper. Beauties have sold well; so have Hadley, Russell, Ophelia, Miller and Sunburst. In fact, there has been little left-over stock of any kind.

Carnations are not selling so well and have dropped much more in price than roses. The quality steadily improves. Violets are as yet small, but all are easily sold. Lily of the valley is of good quality and has been in good demand. Lilium longiflorum is in a little better supply. Some asters and gladioli still arrive, but these are now small. Dahlias are seen in small lots, but these never cut any figure in the markets here. Cattleya labiata and Oncidium Rogersii are abundant. Some Cypripedium insigne is also coming in. Gardenias are scarce. Sweet peas come

Club Meeting.

There was a large and enthusiastic attendance at the club meeting October 19, when the attraction was a stereopticon lecture on the flora and gardens of Japan, by E. H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum. Mr. Wilson returned a few months ago from a year's collecting trip in Japan in the interests of the arboretum, and his descriptions of the trees, flowers, gardens and people of Japan were deeply interesting and instructive.

It was voted to offer a $50 silver cup at one of the exhibitions of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in 1916. The landscape classes, it was announced, would resume just as soon as the necessary number of students had enrolled.

Max Schling, of New York, who should have been the lecturer of the evening on "Floral Art," telegraphed his inability to attend, as he had five wedding orders for October 19. He promised to come at a later date, however. Several communications were read relative to the Cleveland flower show, which several members hope to attend.

It was reported to the meeting that William Downs was quite sick and a letter of good cheer was forwarded to him. Three applications for membership were favorably acted upon.

Some noteworthy exhibits were shown, including a collection of dahlias from W. A. Manda and Carnation Miss Theo by Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, Mass. The Wm. W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, Mass., exhibited a collection of plants. William Craig showed Buddleia magnifica.

Cyclamen growers will be interested to learn that the club has offered a silver cup valued at $50 for the best exhibit of twelve cyclamens at the Boston spring show. Another matter taken care of at this meeting was the appointment of a committee on landscape classes. Its members are F. E. Palmer, Florists' Bowling League.

Considerable interest continues to be shown in the new bowling league and, as a result of it, Boston may be able eventually to make up a team equal to those from other leading cities. The results of games played October 14 were:

Coöperative Mkt...	1237	Carbone's	1217
Flower Exchange..	1282	Robinson's	1213
Zinn's	1235	McAlpine's	1106
Pansies	1218	Galvin's	1109

The league standing now is:

	W.	L.		W.	L.
Coöperative Mkt...	6	2	Flower Exchange..	4	4
Galvin's	6	2	Zinn's	4	4
Carbone's	5	3	Robinson's	1	7
Pansies	5	3	McAlpine's and McDonald's	1	7

Various Notes.

Schedules have been issued for the flower show to be held in connection with the New England county fair, at Mechanics building, October 23 to 30. Good prizes are offered for roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, violets and other flowers; also for groups and table decorations. The Coöperative Flower Market has charge of the floral section, the committee being W. H. Elliott, president; John McFarland, Donald Carmichael, J. W. Simpson, Thomas Capers, Charles Leach, Robert Montgomery, L. E. Small, John Barr and Norris F. Comley.

A. G. Pembroke, one of the most popular salesmen at the Flower Exchange, is back from his pleasure and business trip to New York. He rather fooled his market associates by getting married while away. The young lady was Miss Lena Bunce, of Berkshire, England, who arrived in New York October 7, after a stormy voyage on the S. S. New York. The wedding took place the following day at the Little Church

Round the Corner, New York, after which the young couple spent their honeymoon in seeing some of the sights of Gotham and later the Berkshire hills. The young couple have the sincere good wishes of a host of friends.

The W. W. Edgar Co. is cutting some fine Halliday, Pacific and Polly Rose mums. The firm's cyclamens are better than ever and are selling fast. Begonias, poinsettias and other winter stock are all looking remarkably well.

Good sweet peas are coming in from A. A. Pembroke, North Beverly, and Fred J. Bell, Stoughton. All are at present of the grandiflora type.

Wax Bros. had orders for 167 corsage bouquets from Wellesley College October 16. They were certainly a beautiful lot, the choicest flowers being used. Both funeral and wedding orders have been numerous and the staff has never been busier. They had an attractive window of yellow mums for the great equal suffrage parade, October 16. Everyone entering the store of Wax Bros. receives a cordial welcome from a big, dark and handsome Maltese cat, which makes an excellent mascot.

William A. Riggs, of Auburndale, has a fine stock of begonias, cyclamens, poinsettias and primulas for the winter trade. He has finished cutting his early mums.

Thomas Cox, of Dorchester, has good October Frost mums and Cypripedium insigne. He will commence cutting Bonnaffon mums this week.

William H. Elliott is at present strong on Ophelia, Sunburst, Ward, Killarney Queen and Mignon roses. Asparagus is in much better demand. He is a large grower of both plumosus and Sprengeri.

At Carbone's, trade has been remarkably good of late. They have received large importations from Europe, in spite of the great decrease in the number of ocean carriers. Mr. Carbone is not expected back from his European trip until early in November.

N. E. Boyle, of Malden, is sending in a fine lot of Ophelia, Sunburst, Killarney and Richmond roses. He does not find Hadley nearly so satisfactory as Richmond.

Penn had a beautiful yellow window for the great equal suffrage parade, October 16. The same day he had great numbers of set pieces for the opening of Posner's and Chamberlain's stores. He also had the Bowles-Lowell wedding, at Arlington church. Miss Bowles, a daughter of Admiral Bowles, carried a shower bouquet of Ward roses and valley. The bridesmaids carried bouquets of Christie-Miller roses, and gardenias were used for boutonnieres.

William Hannan & Son, of Dorchester, are cutting an excellent lot of Chrysolora, October Frost and Unaka chrysanthemums.

Edward Bingham, of Dedham, has a splendid lot of October Frost mums. His single violets are also coming along well.

Richard D. Kimball, of Waban, is in the market with a superior lot of pink snapdragons. His carnations are all doing well.

The great equal suffrage parade of 15,000 women, October 16, created a lively demand for yellow mums. The antis used red flowers in profusion, but these were mainly artificial. The suffrage question is the leading one in Massachusetts this year and it has certainly benefited the florists' business.

The Hanover Greenhouses are cutting a nice crop of Chrysolora mums. This is a remarkably good seller here.

A. N. Eaton, of South Sudbury, is sending in good Alice, Pink Delight, White Enchantress, Fenn and Gloriosa carnations. W. N. C.

The Market.

The local market was excellent last week. Stock moved well. Good prices were paid for mums, which are beginning to arrive in large numbers. The yellow and white varieties are readily obtainable, but only a few pink are offered. Roses are showing improvement in stem and color. The demand for these, however, is slow, mums having first call. Carnations are not moving so well as expected. The supply was generous last week and the blooms of extra good quality. Prices averaged $2 per hundred. Violets are dragging; the supply greatly exceeds the demand. Other flowers to be had are valley, orchids, cosmos and snapdragons. Greens of all kinds are splendid. Several of the leading retailers report that trade is beginning to grow steady. A large volume of business was handled last week in all lines.

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its monthly meeting October 14, on the grounds of the Bourdet Floral Co. The invitation from the president to meet at his home seemed to have a good effect on the members and eighty responded. President Bourdet was presented with a neatly decorated gavel by the members of his family.

All committees made reports. It was decided to appoint the various committees for the convention of the American Carnation Society, at the December meeting.

A communication from the Cleveland Florists' Club, inviting the St. Louis Florists' Club to visit Cleveland during the flower show, was read. The members voted to accept the invitation and a transportation committee was appointed consisting of David Scott Geddis, chairman; H. G. Berning and W. J. Pilcher.

Fred Frow and Thomas C. Carr were elected to membership and applications were filed by Arthur Waldman, E. D. Emme and Alfred Werner.

W. S. Wells, vice-president-elect, and W. W. Ohlweiler, trustee-elect, were installed in office.

A discussion on the holding of a spring flower show was started by A. Jaenicke and J. F. Ammann. The president appointed the trustees, together with Mr. Jaenicke and George B.

Windler, to report on the advisability of holding a spring show. Samuel Seligman, with Wertheimer Bros., New York, was present and talked on the flower show to be held in Cleveland. Mr. Seligman took part in a discussion on corsage bouquets and why more of them are not used. The question box discussion ended this most interesting meeting.

A luncheon was served, after which an inspection of the greenhouses was made. Everything was found shipshape. The members extended to Mr. Bourdet and his family a hearty vote of thanks for the pleasant afternoon.

Various Notes.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle met October 13, at the home of Mrs. Emil Schray. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. George B. Windler, 4959 Delore avenue, November 10.

Adolph Jaenicke was one of the judges at a floral exhibition held at Webster Groves. Jules Bourdet acted in the same capacity at the St. Louis county fair.

Hugo M. Schaff, landscape gardener for the board of education, says that he and his big force of men are kept busy on school grounds throughout the city.

The Shackelford Nursery Co., at St. Charles road, received a large importation of bulbs last week. This company has a large force of men at work planting on the new tract of land which it bought recently.

William F. Gude, of Washington, D. C., who is well known in St. Louis, was with us last week, not in person, but in the movies, where he was in full view on the screen as chairman of the committee which entertained the old soldiers during the recent G. A. R. convention.

Joseph Witek, of 4748 McPherson avenue, is noted for his artistic window displays, which attract many of the society people to his place. Mr. Witek says trade has been splendid of late.

John Steidle's rose consignments to H. G. Berning are fine. His Hadley, Ward and Russell are high in color and have good stems and fine foliage.

Mr. Berning says he has no trouble in disposing of this stock.

The Retail Florists' Association held a well attended meeting October 18, at the Mission Inn Garden. Several applications for membership were received.

Vincent Gorly, head of Grimm & Gorly, is now buyer in the wholesale district. Marion Uhlschmidt is buyer for the east side store of this firm. Mr. Gorly says that trade has been excellent of late, especially the transient trade during the bright, clear days of last week.

William C. Young, head of the Young Bros. Floral Co., on Waterman avenue, reports that his firm will have a formal opening this week. Many invitations have been mailed.

George Waldbart and the Ayres Floral Co., at Grand and Olive streets, like the way business is moving.

The greenhouses of Otto Eirech, at 7035 Gravois avenue, were destroyed by fire last week. The damage was estimated at $2,000. David Sheppard, an employee, who is a deaf-mute, nearly lost his life. The timely arrival of a patrolman, who knew Mr. Sheppard and knew of his affliction, saved him from death.

J. F. Amman, of Edwardsville, Ill., vice-president of the American Carnation Society, says he will go to Cleveland to attend the meeting of the executive committee of this society. He intends to accompany the St. Louis delegation. J. J. B.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

SMALL shipments of Chinese sacred lilies have reached the trade during the last week.

CALIFORNIA is waiting anxiously for the beginning of the autumn rains, now somewhat overdue.

THE Gurney Seed & Nursery Co., of Yankton, S. D., is erecting a 4-story warehouse, 75x78 feet.

FIFTY tons of Japanese bulbs arrived in Chicago over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway October 14.

No one seems to be worrying about peas, although reports from the northwest ordinarily would be alarming.

QUANTITIES of onion bulbs are moving from the northwest and from Colorado to the California seed-growing districts for 1916 crops.

RALPH M. WARD & Co., New York, received 190 cases of bulbs on the boat from Marseilles that arrived at New York October 15.

THE lowest tenders on the government's order for grass and clover seeds for which bids were opened October 6 were Stokes' Seed Farm and F. W. Bolgiano & Co.

W. E. HAILE asserts that he is planting the largest acreage of watermelon for seed of any individual planter in the Monticello district, and it is well known that Jefferson county, Florida, grows more watermelon seed for the trade than any other one county in the United States.

WITH the onion set situation what it is, what will buyers who have bought under the market do when they are supplied with samples of the stock it is proposed to deliver? Will they release the seller, or will they merely reject the sample and insist on the delivery of a merchantable article?

THE seed trade in Great Britain are up in arms, the home guard, that is, against a government proposal to abolish the halfpenny post and to reduce the letter post from four ounces a penny to an ounce a penny. A meeting of the trade authorized W. Cuthbertson, of Dobbie & Son, Edinburgh, and Arthur Sutton, of Sutton & Sons, Reading, to memorialize the authorities with the plea that the plan will "not only place a new burden on the horticultural trades, but will go far to ruin their trade. The proposed change would also give an altogether unfair advantage to the foreign seedsmen, who will be able, unless the postal union regulations are canceled, to flood the British market with catalogues dispatched from abroad at existing rates."

HERE'S A NEW ONE!

Fire! Fire!!

Fire in the cash register of a Chicago seed store the other day!

Must have been mighty good business to get it het up like that, you say?

Sure, only it was the electric motor that made the smoke, according to the secretary of the W. W. Barnard Co.

THE BEST LILY BULBS

for the commercial florist in America are Horseshoe Brand Giganteum, and the best size to buy for general purposes is 7 to 9 inches. This gives you a mature bulb of fair size at a fair price. Large buyers use them almost exclusively, as they give the greatest yield for the money of any other lily bulbs. Just remember they are grown from only the most healthy bulblets to begin with; they are hand-weeded and carefully cultivated and fertilized, and disbudded before flowering time, in the fields, thereby reserving their strength so they can better stand the strain of greenhouse forcing. You cannot get better bulbs anywhere. They cost $15.00 a case of 300, size 7 to 9, and you can't invest $15.00 in a better way if you are in the florist business. The more you have room to grow the more money you can make from lily bulbs. We will put them in cold storage for you, if you ask us to, for shipment during 1916. The cost of carrying them is 15c per case per month. You can have lilies at any time of the year. Write us for further information.

Not how cheap but how good.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

The Reichardt & Schulte Co., of Houston, Tex., states that the biggest loss during the recent storm was a 50-foot sign, which was blown around an electric pole by a wind force of 125 miles per hour, according to the government records. Another sign was blown away and has not yet been found. Seed business before and since the storm has been good. There is a large call for insecticides, owing to the increase of bugs and the loss of the birds.

The Moers Seed Co., of Houston, was among the fortunate ones and hit upon a plan to furnish the farmer customers with seed at cost. This cleaned up much left-over stock.

The Beaumont Seed Co., of Beaumont, Tex., has moved into larger quarters at 608 Pearl street.

The Bollwinkle Seed Co., of New Orleans, La., had become well settled in the new location at 510 Dumaine street, but, unfortunately, was directly in the path of the recent storm, which caused the collapse of the upper floors of the building. More recent rains have completed the ruin. Some shipments were in the freight house, including 1,000 pounds of beet seed, a valuable cargo. These were saved. Mr. Bollwinkle philosophized: "Though badly battered, we still are in the ring."

Chris Reuter, of New Orleans, said that at one time his building, a solid brick and stone structure almost two centuries old, threatened to collapse. A big bulge is conspicuous. Mr. Reuter has decided not to take his honeymoon trip in an aeroplane. Thomas Ross, for many years with Baker Bros., of Fort Worth, is in charge of the extensive seed department.

The J. Steckler Seed Co., of New Orleans, was not in the path of the storm, but the warehouse and its contents were damaged. It was fortunate that more stock was not on hand, for there is no seed insurance to be had.

M. P. Hargreaves, of Galveston, Tex., reports a total loss of seed stock carried on the ground floor by the recent flood. At one time all hands were swimming in six feet of water, which came up so suddenly that there was no escape. Commenting on the warnings given, Mr. Hargreaves says they have received three since that time and nothing has happened; so if they were to try to avoid disaster by following these warnings, they would always be on the anxious seat. While the loss of life was less, the destruction of property was greater than that of 1900. At one time the wind blew for twenty-one hours at a velocity of sixty miles per hour. There were many remarkable effects. I saw two ocean freighters lying fully half a mile from the channel, high and dry. This will convey some idea of the force of the wind and consequent destruction. The gardens are cleaned out and an effort is being made to replant as soon as possible. The fine specimens of phœnix and washingtonia remain, while big oaks a century old were blown away. The craft are to be commended for their grit. They will welcome any surplus stocks of roses and chrysanthemums for outdoor planting. They have asked for no outside assistance, but it will be none the less welcome. M. ditions the United States has received a great part of its supply of winter rape seed from the Netherlands, but that, owing to the restrictions placed on the export of this seed during the last year, other sources of supply have been sought. This has resulted in seed of several types of plants being imported under the name of rape from countries not usually contributing to our supply. Approximately 95,000 pounds of seed of turnip rape, or enough to sow 19,000 acres, have been imported since April 1, 1915. This so-called turnip rape is not rape at all, but a turnip without the thickened root of the garden turnip, and is cultivated for its oil-bearing seed. As the seed of the turnip rape is being offered for sale throughout the country at the present time, under the name of winter rape, or Dwarf Essex rape, those desiring winter rape should be on their guard.

CLOVER AND ALFALFA.

The government crop report makes the condition of clover seed 66.9 per cent, lower than the low figure of 68.3 reported October 1 last year, and much below the estimate of 76.1 in 1913. The condition is considerably poorer than last year in the principal producing states east of the Mississippi, being particularly poor in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan, but much better than last year in Missouri, Kansas, Kentucky and Tennessee. The principal cause given for low production is that the constant rains, while beneficial to the growth of the plant, tended to wash out the blooms and prevented proper fertilization through the visits of bees and other insects. The western crop is generally reported as good, except in Washington, where dry weather was harmful.

The estimated yield per acre of alfalfa seed is 3.4 bushels against 3.7 bushels last year and 4.2 bushels in 1913. The yield is reported as extremely low in Nebraska, and somewhat lower than last year in the far western states, except Colorado, Nevada and Iowa. The reported total production of alfalfa seed, 70.4 per cent, is also considerably below last year's figure of 77.3 per cent, notwithstanding material increases in the acreage of alfalfa, due in part to the fact that considerable alfalfa intended for seed was cut for hay instead, in view of the heavy growth of the plant and the poor yield of seed. The estimated production is much below the 1913 production of 89.4 per cent of a full crop. The same conditions that lessened production of clover seed were operative in the case of alfalfa seed.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL, by Wm. Scott, the greatest book ever written for florists, sent by The Review for $5.

WE have disposed of nearly 100,000 carnation plants this spring. Please discontinue the ad in The Review. The plants were fine, but we think much of the success in moving so many of them was due to your valuable paper.—The Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

PELICANO'S DAHLIA FIELD.

Frank Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., San Francisco, recently entertained a number of his friends, several of whom are members of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, at his home and gardens in the Ocean View district. The accompanying illustration shows Mr. Pelicano and friends and members of his family in the dahlia field, which was in full bloom. The party includes, from left to right, Miss Eva Pelicano, Walter Hofinghoff, secretary of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society; Frank Pelicano, Wm. Kettlewell, originator of the famous Kettlewell dahlia; Mr. Costa, Miss Azalea Pelicano, G. A. Daly, with the MacRorie-McLaren Co.; Master Pelicano, Mr. Proietti, Miss McIntyre, Mr. McIntyre and Mr. Scallioni, a local gardener. The Kettlewell dahlia, a dark, velvety red, or Jacqueminot color, according to Mr. Pelicano can not be beaten as a paying dahlia for cut flowers, being an enormous producer. He has been cutting heavily since June 15 and still had a big crop, as shown in the picture. He has been growing these dahlias for the last six years, this year's crop being by far the largest produced. He also reports a continued heavy cut of Delice, Kalif and Geisha, all excellent varieties for the San Francisco section. H. S. G.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

A decided increase is noted in the out-of-town shipping business, much more than in transient or regular retail trade, though the latter also is on the upgrade. Practically everyone is home from his vacation and all are settling down with a will to the season's work.

The absence of early rains and the cool, open weather of October have been of great assistance to outdoor flowers, especially dahlias and roses, which were never better than this year.

Chrysanthemums might safely be said to be far in advance of anything seen in this city in previous years, and so far there has been nothing approaching a glut. Other items are about the same as last reported.

Various Notes.

The Los Angeles County Horticultural Society held a most enjoyable banquet and smoker October 9, about sixty members and friends sitting down to a fine meal and adjourning afterward for the smoker and a story-telling contest. Many members of the Pasadena Horticultural Society were present. President Shields should have been given the award for the best stories, only there was no prize forthcoming. Dr. Houghton, in his usual happy vein, amused the audience highly, but speeches were barred. Secretary H. W. Kruckeberg, of the Los Angeles society, worked hard and long to make the evening a successful one and he surely did it. Almost everyone at the table was called upon and almost everybody responded, so the list is too long to give. Treasurer James McGilvray and C. Shearer, superintendent of parks, were called upon to uphold the honor of Scotland, which they did. England and Ireland were well represented and among our German friends were J. Dieterich, Paul Staiger and others. But as Vice-president W. W. Felgate truly remarked, no hyphenated Americans were there, all being true Americans, no matter what their native country. This is the right feeling and it is pleasant to note that the other has entirely died out in the society. Adjournment was proposed and carried at 11 p. m. and all said they had never spent a more pleasant time.

A. H. Post, of Chula Vista, near San Diego, was a visitor this week. He is speaking of building glass on his place there.

The L. A. Floral Co. is enjoying a large shipping trade, especially on large yellow chrysanthemums. The fact that many of these shipments go to the northern part of Oregon and Washington speaks volumes for the careful methods of packing followed here.

Bernard Tassano has just returned from a pleasure trip to the San Francisco fair and reports the best time he has ever had. Tassano Bros. have been awarded the contract for the automobile show decorations.

Much to the surprise of his many friends, L. H. Freeman, of the Freeman-Lewis Co., was married to a Hollywood lady recently. They have gone to Honolulu for their honeymoon.

At J. W. Wolters' store, excellent business is reported.

Refitting and slight alterations to the store are in progress at the headquarters of the Redondo Floral Co., on Spring street.

of the death of his wife, from cancer, at San Diego, where they have been living for several years. Mrs. Slack was a most energetic and pleasing helpmeet to Mr. Slack and he will have the sympathy of a host of friends. He has had charge of the rose garden in Balboa park, San Diego, for some time, and in a letter to the writer he speaks well of the kind treatment he has received from John Morley and other officials in his bereavement.

The annual chrysanthemum show was opened in the new clubhouse of the Santa Monica Woman's Club, at Santa Monica, October 14. While the number of exhibits in the amateur classes for chrysanthemums was not large, the quality was distinctly good and some of the prize-winning blooms would have taken a high place in any competition. The trade exhibits were especially good. Walter Armacost had the front of the stage decorated, showing chrysanthemums in large vases, and a beautifully arranged display of roses in baskets. These consisted of popular varieties and novelties, fine baskets of Hoosier Beauty, September Morn, Prima Donna and others. The most prominent exhibit was a large crescent-shaped group from the Germain Seed & Plant Co., of Los Angeles. The exhibit was splendidly staged by the firm's nursery foreman, John Robertson. The prominent plants were clean, healthy specimens of Araucaria Bidwillii and fine kentias, bays and New Zealand flax, boldly arranged. Smaller kentias, ferns and foliage plants, interspersed with flowering plants and vases of the newer cannas, were used to outline the group. Large vases of chrysanthemums helped the general effect, which was extremely telling. A table of dahlias was put up by the same firm, consisting of many standard kinds and novelties, the new Belle Pauli sent out last year being much admired. Mrs. W. F. Laurie, of Pasadena, showed a large table of dahlias, including a number of the newer collarette types, which merited and received many encomiums from visitors. The Golden State Nursery had a group of foliage and berried plants and Miss Sadie Thomas, of Pasadena, showed several novelties in chrysanthemums. At the time of writing it is too early to say anything about the attendance, but there was already a lively crowd before the judging was finished. W. W. Felgate, H. R. Richards and John Robertson officiated as judges.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

There has been a good run of business. Social events have taken large quantities of flowers and the funerals of several prominent people have used all the surplus stock. Carnations still are scarce. Remembering the oversupply of carnations last year, carnation growers have held back their crops. Chrysanthemums are the most conspicuous flowers in the window displays. The first home-grown Chrysoloras and several varieties of pompons have appeared. The supply of home-grown violets has increased and the quality has improved. The first Lorraine begonias are shown. Cyclamens are becoming more plentiful.

Most of the downtown florists joined in the dress-up week campaign, promoted by the retailers' committee of the Chamber of Commerce, and unusually attractive window displays have resulted.

Nurserymen report a satisfactory amount of advance orders, but have not yet started to lift their stock.

Various Notes.

The Portland Seed Co. has received a shipment of California-grown rose bushes.

Herbert & Fleishauer are sending in some good pompon mums, in mixed colors.

Several florists accepted the invitation of the Willamette Dahlia Co. to visit its show gardens October 14. E. H. White and B. R. Amend, managers of the company, took the party around and showed them the 600 or more varieties of dahlias on display. This company began business five years ago and has increased its stock to the present proportions. The party did not visit the grounds where the stock is grown, which are located several blocks from the show gardens. The visitors spent a pleasant afternoon examining and admiring the displays.

Walter A. Martin, of 435 Lombard street, grower of dahlias, roses, perennials, etc., died last week. He had been sick for some time. Mrs. Martin is conducting the business.

The Martin & Forbes Co. was awarded first prize for the best decorated florists' window in the dress-up week contest. The prominent features were a large vase of Ophelia roses, a basket of Oncidium tigrinum and a hamper of violets. The background consisted of greenery and autumn foliage, dressed with satin ribbon of the same tint as the roses. The charm of the window was in the attractive arrangement of the materials.

Clarke Bros. were given second place in the window contest. Vases of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses, Hi Gill dahlias and mums and other flowers were artistically arranged in massed groups.

Mrs. Burkhardt, widow of the late Alfred C. F. Burkhardt, has leased her retail store and greenhouse range to the Swiss Floral Co. E. J. Nausa, who was with Mr. Burkhardt for eight years, has been placed in charge of the store.

The fire which destroyed the residence and church of Father Schoener, at Brooks, Ore., October 9, also destroyed the plants in the adjoining experiment gardens. For several years Father Schoener had devoted all of his spare time and available means to the propagation of new roses and fruits. He had a large number of varieties in different stages of development, many of the plants having been imported at considerable expense, and their loss has been a severe blow to him. His work has attracted the attention of the Portland Chamber of Commerce and a move is on foot to make provision for him to continue his work.

The light yellow peony dahlias shipped from Seattle to Clarke Bros. appear to be good keepers, a quality sadly lacking in many beautiful varieties. It is called the Hi Gill, after Seattle's popular mayor. S. W. W.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

While there has been considerable funeral work and a few nice dinner decorations, the trade shows less activity than for some time; the daily offerings do not clean up quickly. In view of the large supplies, however, the market is in excellent shape. With favorable weather, small summer stock is holding out remarkably well. Scabiosas are not so good, but there are plenty of marigolds, gypsophilas, statice, etc. There is an abundance of amarantus and last week there were heavy offerings of cosmos, which were well taken. Dahlias are as fine and nearly as plentiful as ever, but are not helped by being in competition with mums. There still are a good many gladioli, rather small, but otherwise good, and they move fairly well. Asters are about gone, but the Chinese, who bring most of them to the market, are now offering great quantities of outdoor chrysanthemums, which are attractive and find a good demand. With these chrysanthemums and pompons, which are much more plentiful and popular, and the magnificent indoor mums in almost infinite variety, mums can be had in practically any size up to ten inches in diameter and in almost any color. What are not needed locally are readily cleaned up by shippers. Prices are well maintained.

Notwithstanding the lack of rain, violets are good and plentiful, and many of them are being shipped. The plantings generally appear to be in good shape and if prices hold up the growers should do well. Carnations are fair, but continue scarce and receive little attention. Roses are gradually improving and the trade is beginning to discriminate more closely, though a lot of ordinary stock is disposed of. Some nice Beauties are arriving and Cecile Brunner is better than for some time. Irish Elegance is doing well in a limited way and Ophelia is one of the most popular varieties. Last week brought an abundance of Cattleya labiata and C. Mossiæ, while phalænopsis and other small varieties still are scarce. Flowering plants are rather scarce. No great number of cyclamens are coming in. There are a few primulas and most of the cockscomb has been cleaned up. A few spiræas are appearing at an opportune time. Greens are moving well and a good deal of eucalyptus and pepper-tree foliage, the latter showing clusters of red berries, is used.

Landscape Engineers' Day.

October 9, Landscape Engineers' day at the exposition was quite a memorable event to San Francisco people and was participated in not only by landscape engineers, but also by gardeners, nurserymen and florists. Perhaps the most interesting feature of the occasion was the honor bestowed on John McLaren, who is largely responsible for the fine showing made by the exposition and the city as a whole in the matter of flowers and ornamental plantings. The ceremonies were conducted on a platform at the east entrance to the Palace of Horticulture, which was almost hidden by the abundance of flowers brought by Mr. McLaren's many friends. A large crowd gathered, including many gardeners connected with the exposition, etc., growers from nearby towns and about thirty members of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society. To take part in the event, Mayor Rolph interrupted his vacation and arrived in time to present the beautiful silver cup to Mr. McLaren. The cup is distinctly a tribute from the people of the city, having been purchased by 10-cent contributions by a great number of people. In addition to the cup, Mr. McLaren was presented with wreaths and baskets of flowers by Margaret O'Connor, on behalf of the school children; and Donald McLaren, his son and associate, was presented with a handsome bronze plaque by the exposition. The speech of presentation was delivered by James McNab, of the exposition directorate. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. McLaren gave a reception to a number of their friends, at the Golden Gate Park lodge, and during the evening they were presented with a handsome silver vase by the Bohemian Club.

It Pays

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results. —Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

The transient rate for space is $1 per inch per insertion. Those who have stock to offer all or a considerable part of the year around should write for contract rates.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 22 to 24, 1916.

AN amendment to its charter has been filed by the McKinney Nursery Co., of Dallas and McKinney, Tex., increasing its capital stock from $20,000 to $30,000.

FORTY-SEVEN acres of land recently were acquired by Saddler Bros., of Bloomington, Ill., at the cost of $170 per acre. The land will be devoted to nursery stock.

THE last few weeks have brought a nice revival of business to many of the nurserymen, fall deliveries now promising much better than was thought possible before digging was begun.

LATE-FLOWERING SHRUBS.

The Best of the Buddleias.

While we have a wealth of deciduous shrubs that flower in early summer, there is a pronounced scarcity of them after the end of July. In early fall, while those in flower are less numerous than we might wish, we have some handsome and useful varieties. These, added to the many berry-bearing trees and shrubs, such as viburnums, cratægus, loniceras, ligustrums and others, make the shrubbery borders attractive.

Prominent among flowering shrubs are the buddleias, which have been making a splendid show for many weeks and will continue to do so until sharp frost destroys the flowers. B. variabilis is less showy than some of its improved forms, of which there are now a considerable number. Of these magnifica is, in my opinion, the best. It flowers profusely and the racemes are of a deeper violet-mauve color than superba, Wilsonii and Veitchiana. Superba makes heavier foliage, with racemes of great size and less pointed at the ends than those of magnifica.

All these buddleias are of easy propagation. Cuttings will root in a few days in sand in a warm greenhouse, and plants from 3-inch or 4-inch pots, set out in April or early May in rich soil, will make plants five to six feet high and as much across, the first season.

Buddleias in Pots or Tubs.

B. officinalis, carrying smaller and paler colored racemes than B. variabilis, comes into bloom too late to be valuable in the northern states, but makes a good pot plant. The latest of the family to flower, B. Asiatica, pure white in color, sometimes called the winter lilac, is a splendid greenhouse subject for pots or tubs from Christmas until the middle of February.

Buddleias will withstand a winter minimum of 10 degrees below zero in well drained ground, if given a winter mulch. They usually die down to near the ground. If they do not, it is better to cut them to the ground, as they then make more vigorous growth. Plants that are wintered over will flower earlier than spring-planted ones, but the latter will bloom later in the season.

There are several other fall-flowering buddleias, but the foregoing are the best. They should prove fine subjects for florists to work up stocks of, for spring sales. Cuttings are produced in profusion and, as before said, their propagation is of the easiest. Whether for planting in beds, for shrubbery effects, for cutting (the flowers keeping well in water), or for growing in tubs for fall flowering, buddleias are among our finest flowering shrubs. A great point in their favor is their freedom from insects and their delicious fragrance.

Clethras, Callicarpas and Others.

Some of the clethras, or spice bushes, were still flowering in late September, both tomentosa and alnifolia being in bloom. These succeed best in partial shade. In open, sunny spots they are often disfigured by red spider. Elsholtzia Stauntonii is a pretty shrub, growing five to six feet high and carrying dense lilac-purple, one-sided spikes of flowers six to eight inches long. Callicarpa purpurea, not unlike a ligustrum in habit, is carrying quantities of small, pale lilac flowers.

Clerodendron trichotomum is a handsome shrub in the north, dying to the ground in winter, but starting up vigorously from the ground in spring. It needs some winter covering, as do the buddleias. The flowers are white on a brownish-red calyx. This shrub is a native of Japan.

Hydrangeas and Hypericums.

While the well known Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora is now about flowerless, H. paniculata, with its more erect flower heads, is still in bloom. This should be more planted. It is more graceful than the much over-planted grandiflora. H. cinerea and H. arborescens are still carrying some fresh flower heads, although they have been blooming for months.

Hypericum Dawsonianum and the lower-growing H. densiflorum are golden with flowers, while the imposing H. Moserianum and H. patulum Henryi, in more sheltered locations, are still flowering.

Vitex incisa, with its dense panicled racemes of grayish-lilac flowers, is a graceful shrub, not so much seen as its merits warrant. It flowers for many weeks and even at the end of September was full of flowers. This is one of the best flowering shrubs we have had from northern China.

EUCHARIS AMAZONICA.

Will you please tell me what to do for my Eucharis Amazonica to get them to bloom well at their proper season? The plants are healthy, strong and pot-bound in 8-inch pots, but they will not bloom. Do they need a rest to ripen the bulbs, as do amaryllises, and is a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees sufficient for them? Do they need much feeding? Is November their flowering time? C. V. F. N.—Can.

The eucharis must have a rest for a few weeks, or else you will never flower it satisfactorily. Gradually withhold water, but not to such an extent as to cause a loss of foliage. It is better to move the plants into a cooler house while they are resting; 50 to 55 degrees at night is about right. Then place in as warm a house as you have, 60 to 70 degrees at night. Water well, and feed with liquid manure. The spikes should soon appear, if you have good-sized bulbs. If you can provide some bottom heat, the plants will do better. A crop can be had in November by timing the resting period right. Eucharis will give two and often three crops of spikes a year, provided they are rightly treated. A good rest should follow each season of growth, to induce flowering. Use a compost of coarse fibrous loam, cow manure and bone meal. In large pots it is an advantage to add some broken brick or sandstone. C. W.

While in Cheyenne, Wyo., he took back his former property which was sold to A. A. Underwood one year ago. BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business conditions have shown continued improvement. The weather has been cool. Inside stock generally is short, with the result that prices have advanced. Everything in the way of cut flowers was cleaned up at the end of last week.

Mums are arriving in larger quantities and are selling well, especially white. Chrysolora and Oconto are beginning to come in. Carnations are improving rapidly, although none too plentiful. The call for roses takes all that are offered, with white scarce and in good demand. Radiance and Mrs. Russell are also much called for.

The cool weather has been ideal for dahlias and those growers who escaped the frosts of October 9 and 10 are cutting fine blooms. Many patches were hit only on the foliage, the flowers not being open.

Greens are overplentiful, with no prospect of change until outdoor flowers have been killed.

Various Notes.

William J. Halliday is showing some fine specimen plants of Cattleya labiata and Oncidium varicosum, in bloom, in his store window. One of the varieties of nepenthes, in bloom, attracts attention on account of its unusual shape and color.

J. W. Penn is cutting some good Chrysolora mums.

Joseph S. Merritt has purchased a new touring car.

Akehurst & Sons, of White Marsh, Md., are cutting carnations. Their Enchantress and White Enchantress are specially good.

Lehr Bros. are sending some choice Ophelia to the Leo Niessen Co.

Visitors last week included J. J. Goudy, from Henry A. Dreer, Inc.; S. S. Skidelsky and a representative of the Robert Craig Co., all of Philadelphia.

A. S. Richmond has finished work on his new propagating house. A bench of Oconto is nearly ready for cutting. His other mums and carnations are also in good shape.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to J. J. Perry in the death of his mother, October 13, at the home of her daughter, in Washington, D. C. Both of Mr. Perry's parents have died during the year.

Matthew Richmond has the frame of his two new houses up and is filling the beds preparatory to spring planting. His pompon mums look good for a heavy cutting.

Erdman & Ulrich held their first annual dahlia show from October 12 to 17. A better attendance than was expected caused them to prolong the exhibition two days. The cut flowers were arranged in the service shed, being displayed against a background of ferns and oak foliage, which covered walls and ceiling. The greenhouses were attractive and the fern house and cyclamens were worthy of special mention.

James Hamilton is showing some fine Chrysolora mums in his Charles street store.

The next club meeting will be held October 25. W. F. E.

Bowling Green, O.—At the range of J. S. Brigham, a new greenhouse, 28x 70, has been completed.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The florists were quite busy last week, several early weddings, with a number of ante-nuptial functions, creating a brisk demand, which was well met by the increased supply of early chrysanthemums, whites and yellows moving quickly. Carnations are a trifle more plentiful and bring 2 and 3 cents. Roses are quoted at 3 cents up; violets are 50 cents per hundred and mums range from 75 cents to $2 per dozen.

Various Notes.

Joseph E. Koppelman was in New York last week. A new delivery car has been added to his equipment.

The annual chrysanthemum show at Peace Dale will be held November 3, in Hazard Memorial hall.

Samuel Kinder, of Bristol, R. I., is a member of a fishing party that started October 18 on a two weeks' trip down Narragansett bay.

Neil Ward, of Earle street, Lonsdale, R. I., is enjoying a vacation respite in New York and vicinity.

Peter S. Byrnes was elected permanent chairman at the Republican caucus of North Kingstown, at Wickford, R. I., October 14.

John J. Johnston, of Johnston Bros., 38 Dorrance street, made a business trip to Boston last week.

Thomas Curley, of 15 Harkness street, who is one of the oldest florists in Providence, underwent a severe surgical operation a few weeks ago and has only now recovered sufficiently to resume his business duties.

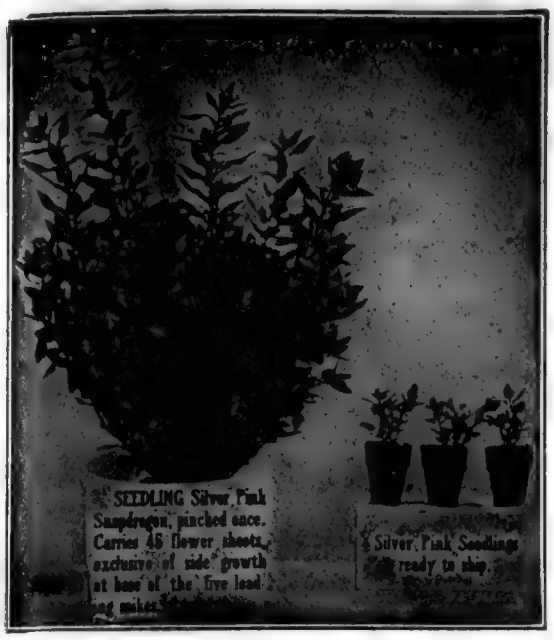
Charles W. Morey was defeated for renomination as councilman at the Republican caucus at North Scituate, October 14.

Albert Holscher, of Hartford road, is bringing in some excellent mums that find ready sale.

Miss Ellen O'Connor, of Thayer street, reports a good run of business since opening her new store.

Ned Brookes, with T. J. Johnston & Co., is away on a vacation trip to Cape Cod.

Miss Madge Banigan, stepdaughter of Timothy L. O'Connor, was married last week to Philip Fatio L'Engle, of Atlanta, Ga. A few nights later an attempt was made to break into Mr. O'Connor's home at Edgewood to steal the wedding presents.



Word has been received of the death recently of Michael Conroy, a former florist of Fall River, Mass., who was a frequent visitor to Providence.

E. A. Chipman, of Woonsocket, is making a specialty of small ferns in pots, to good advantage.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business picked up nicely the first part of this month. While the activity is spasmodic, things on the whole look promising. The trouble at present is the scarcity of stock. Roses are in fairly good supply and of excellent quality, but they are alone and the public tires even of roses. Mums are two weeks later than usual and carnations still are scarce. When stock arrives at the commission houses, there is a wild scramble and the flowers rarely reach the water at the wholesalers'. Some pink snapdragons are coming in, but they are extremely small.

A killing frost visited Detroit October 9 and put an end to every outdoor flower. Last year the first heavy frost occurred two weeks later than this year.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club October 12 was well attended and much enjoyed by all present. After the supper, which was well received, various topics came up for discussion.

A letter was read urging local florists to encourage a bill to stop the dumping of bulbs, seeds, etc., on this market. Secretary Forster was instructed to write to Secretary Redfield and to our members in Congress to have our wares included in such a bill.

Various Notes.

Albert Pochelon is displaying bulletins on his delivery cars advising the public what flowers and plants are in season. It is Mr. Pochelon's intention to change these bulletins frequently, in order that they may not become tiresome to the readers.

The first debutante of the season held her reception October 11, and it was estimated that the total cost of the bouquets, baskets and other novelties sold by the florists for the occasion would total $2,500. This season promises to be a lively one socially.

Several members of the trade recently visited Albert Stahelin's range at Redford. Mr. Stahelin is cutting some excellent rose blooms, which are always on call. His snapdragons, carnations and mums are looking fine.

Thomas Browne has approximately 75,000 mums planted, but he is cutting only a few. The plants, however, are in splendid shape and when they start to bloom his daily cut will be large. Mr. Browne has some fine stevias coming along.

Frank Danzer recently had occasion to visit Adrian, Mich., and while there spent some time at the Elmer Smith place. He found the stock in fine condition. Mr. Smith has been experimenting with artificial fertilizers, the results of which proved interesting to Mr. Danzer. It was noted that all the plants treated with the artificial manure were good.

George Pedrick, of Windsor, Ont., a member of the local club, has been sick for some time and still is ailing.

Robert Rahaley urges all members of the club to visit the Cleveland flower show, saying they will be well repaid for the time and money spent.

E. A. Fetters has purchased a new Overland delivery car, this being his second Overland car for delivery purposes. B. Schroeter, the Bemb Floral

HYDRANGEAS

Our Hydrangeas are all grown in the open ground during the summer, where they make a very luxurious growth, producing heavy heads. They are potted up in August and are thoroughly rootbound in October. They are extra heavy this season and will not only produce flowers from the shoots but also from the dormant buds at the base. They cannot be better and will satisfy the most critical.

GERANIUMS

It is the consensus of opinion that the supply of Geraniums is going to be somewhat short this coming season, on account of so many growers being short of stock plants. Our stock was never in better condition than it is now, so that we anticipate no difficulty whatever in filling orders; but at the same time we would suggest that the surest way is to let us book your order at an early date. New catalogue and price list for 1916 is ready for distribution; a request will bring it if accompanied by a business card.

We have a splendid lot of Geraniums in 3-inch pots, ready for shipment, just right for the southern trade or winter blooming, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

Coleus, Moonvines, Heliotropes, Lemon Verbenas, Parlor Ivy, Ageratum, Alyssum, Alternantheras, Salvias, from 2-inch pots, at $2.00 per 100; 3-inch pots, $3.00 per 100.

Lettuce and Cabbage Plants, at $1.00 per 1000; 10,000 and over, 85c per 1000

Parsley Plants, extra strong, for forcing .....50c per 100; $3.50 per 1000

Albert Sylvester, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, was seriously injured in an accident in which his auto collided with a street car. This happened nearly three weeks ago and Mr. Sylvester still is laid up.

Robert Plumb, son of Charles H. Plumb, who was married October 1, expects to move into the beautiful home he has built back of the greenhouses on Crane avenue. H. S.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Business last week was quiet and was confined mostly to funeral work. Chrysanthemums are becoming more abundant. Some fine Chrysolora and October Frost are seen. The demand, however, seems to be chiefly for the medium grades. Roses and carnations are getting more plentiful and the latter are meeting with a good demand.

Most of the growers have received their Dutch bulbs and are busy planting them. A good many complaints are heard that the Romans and narcissi are arriving in poor condition. The arrival of the azaleas is still a question. The city park forces are getting the beds ready for the planting of tulips, hyacinths, etc., which will be more largely planted than in former years.

Various Notes.

The new city greenhouses are completed and are being operated by P. Agnew, formerly gardener for the N. C. railroad. The city will now grow its own bedding plants, the orders for which were formerly distributed among the local florists.

The Heiss Co. recently installed a new 150-horsepower boiler. The firm reports business fair.

The Dayton Florists' and Gardeners' Association has adopted a plan whereby each one notifies the club of what surplus stock he has to offer and the announcements of the surpluses are posted in the downtown florists' stores.

W. W. Horlacher says his business has shown a decided improvement in the last two weeks. G. W. B.

New Nephrolepis Fern

JOHN WANAMAKER

In presenting this fern to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself.

A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzeli, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzeli, and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis.

Strong plants from 2¼-inch pots, $3.00 per doz., $20.00 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

The following ready for delivery:
4-inch pots, $50.00 per 100; 6-inch pots, $1.00 each; 8-inch pots, $2.00 each; specimens in tubs, $5.00 each.

The Market.

Business last week was better than it has been for some time. There were a large number of funerals and some weddings. Mums are coming in faster and the quality is good. Outdoor stock is still good, especially cosmos and dahlias. Killing frosts are late this year. There have been several light frosts, but not much damage resulted except to the especially tender plants. Not much firing is needed. Roses and carnations were scarce last week, but good crops are in sight.

Various Notes.

William Halbrooks is cutting some excellent carnations. The flowers are of good size and substance; the stems are strong and of good length for the season.

J. C. Elspermann was busy with funeral work last week and used a lot of flowers. His carnations are looking well. His mums are good. His houses are fully stocked with plants of all kinds and a large number are still out in frames.

Louis Fritsch reports a good business. He is advertising in one of the local dailies.

Karl Zeidler had so much business last week that he could not get enough flowers.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are cutting lots of roses. The carnations are improving. The cut of mums is on the increase each day. Business is excellent.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. is cutting some fine mums, roses and carnations. Business is good.

Louis Kleitz, Jr., is having good sales of lettuce plants through his ad in The Review. He is stocking up with a few varieties of plants for spring sales, including geraniums and Sprengeri.

Miss Nellie Goodge is busy getting her large stock of plants in shape for the winter.

Royston & Fenton are cutting mums, the first they have grown. The old Ivories, run through the summer without any rest, are giving a fine account of themselves. Business is good and increasing. E. L. F.

Greenhouse Heating.

THE COAL MARKET.

Recent reports from the coal men have been increasingly cheerful, and the cheerfulness is now based, they say, not on future prospects or any other vague uncertainties, but on actual, present conditions. They assert positively that prices are stronger and the volume of business larger. A writer in the Black Diamond remarks naively that "heretofore the reports have been hopeful enough, but they have not been quite convincing. This week they are all quite genuine." The heaviest demand is for screenings and steam sizes, but the acceleration is gradually spreading through all grades of fuel. The increase in the sales, of course, is believed to be due principally to the improvement in general business. Industrial activity is no longer limited mostly to the munition factories, but is becoming evident in nearly all departments of trade.

It is stated, too, that the much discussed car shortage, predicted for the last two months but scarcely believed possible, has now assumed a real existence and is interfering particularly with the movement of the florists' fuel, smokeless coal. Indeed, the journal already quoted says that "in smokeless coal the car situation is the principal factor. Reports from West Virginia are that the leading railroads there are able to supply only fifty per cent of the cars demanded. This is making a definite shortage of coal in the east, but especially in the west. If the demand should by reason of a change in the weather become normal for this time of year, the coal would quickly go to premium prices." At present, however, there is not much divergence from the previously quoted prices at the mines, $1.40 for mine-run and $2.25 for lump and egg.

WASTEFUL OF HEAT.

I shall be thankful if your expert on heating will answer the following queries: We have erected, from remnants, a greenhouse 20x110, as shown on the enclosed sketch. The house runs east and west. The north wall is brick and is three and one-half feet high. The south side is three feet high to the eave, with continuous sashes between the uprights. The east gable is glass to within a foot of the ground; the west gable is protected by a shed. West from the greenhouse, a distance of 188 feet from the east gable, is a barn with a basement. We wish to place the boiler in this basement, which is about six feet lower than the ground line of the greenhouse and of the shed that stands between the greenhouse and the barn.

We have enough 4-inch and 3-inch pipe for one line to the east gable, and we have other sizes, 1-inch, 1½-inch and 2-inch, in quantity for the branch lines. It would suit our purposes best to run this large line above the ground, on blocks, and take off branches at the east end of the house, to return to the boiler. Please tell us how to arrange the piping. Would the one main be sufficient to feed an adequate number of lines to heat the house to a night temperature of 50 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero? Please state how the main return and flow should be attached to the boiler, mentioning the number and size of openings. What size of boiler will be required, using a hot water system? What valves and checks will be needed? A lack of experience with hot water places us among the novices; so details will be appreciated.

T. F. B.—Pa.

I would by all means advise the placing of the boiler as near as possible to the greenhouse. If it is located at a distance of 188 feet, the loss of heat from the main will be nearly one-half as much as will be required to heat the greenhouse, unless the main is insulated with extreme care. While a 4-inch main might answer if the boiler shed adjoined the greenhouse, it will be necessary to use a 5-inch main or attach a mercury generator if it is located at a distance of 188 feet. It should be possible to heat the house with a boiler having a rating for 1,000 square feet of radiation, but it will be necessary to have a boiler rated for 1,500 feet if it is 188 feet from the greenhouse, especially if the pipe is carried on blocks above ground.

It is stated that the basement is about six feet lower than the ground line of the greenhouse, but, without knowing the height of the boiler and the slope of the ground between the boiler and the greenhouse, I cannot tell just how to attach and carry the mains. It will probably be necessary to carry the flow above ground, with a slight rise. The return, which should be of the same size as the flow, may be alongside it. The return may, however, be carried below the surface. In either case the pipes should be covered with asbestos insulation, and enclosed in a concrete or wooden box. If they are above ground, the space about them should be filled with some insulating material, such as mineral wool.

For the returns inside the greenhouse, six 2-inch and six 1½-inch pipes may be used. If only one house is to be heated it will not be necessary to have valves on the mains, but if the returns are arranged in three coils there should be a valve upon one of them, at least. Air valves should be provided at the highest part of each coil and wherever necessary to free the mains from air. In case it is possible to use overhead flow pipes as mains, three 2½-inch pipes may be put in, placing one upon each plate and the other under the ridge. Three or four of the returns may then be omitted.

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

Put Your Heating Problems Up to Us. We've Been at it for 44 Years.

The Market.

Business last week was unusually good, the receipts showing a decided improvement over any previous week this fall. This improvement was due, no doubt, to the heavy frosts and ideal fall weather, together with a big demand for flowers for numerous October weddings, church and social affairs, and funeral work.

Excellent growing weather, with plenty of sunshine, has been the rule. Greenhouse stock of all varieties is in prime condition.

Chrysanthemums are the leaders in cut flowers at present. The varieties on the market are increasing daily, while the demand is equal in every instance to the supply. Chrysolora, Pink October Frost, Golden Glow and Unaka are the best varieties on the market. Only a few dahlias are left and these have poor lasting qualities. Asters are numbered. Carnations are becoming more plentiful and sell well in place of the asters. Roses are plentiful, the better grades bringing good returns. Hoosier Beauty is a good seller. American Beauties are plentiful in the smaller grades. Gladioli and cosmos are gone. Valley is having a good call for autumn weddings, both in the city and out of town. Orchids are in good demand. Bronze oak foliage sells well.

Various Notes.

Miss Marguerite Flick is visiting a college friend at Logansport, Ky. Business is brisk at the store of the Flick Floral Co. The stock in the greenhouses in South Fort Wayne shows up well. A new delivery car has been put in service lately. R. F.

WESTERLY, R. I.

All of the greenhouse men in this vicinity have completed the overhauling and repairing of their houses, ready for the winter season.

Louis J. Reuter, of S. J. Reuter & Son, went to Boston and New York last week.

George L. Stillman has spent a busy season, his dahlias moving well. He has booked numerous orders for spring delivery.

John Young, of New York, was a recent visitor at the greenhouses of S. J. Reuter & Son.

S. J. Reuter, of S. J. Reuter & Son, recently celebrated his sixty-fourth birthday. His health has been much improved in recent months.

The Market.

Business is good. The supply of stock is such as to take care of present needs and at the same time to keep the market in a firm condition. Prices are fair for both the grower and the buyer. Shipping is heavy.

Roses are in good supply and are meeting with an active demand. The same is true of carnations. Easter lilies are plentiful and have been finding a good market. Receipts of rubrum lilies are not so large as heretofore. Offerings in chrysanthemums are large and include many excellent blooms of white, yellow and pink varieties. Lilies of the valley clean up readily. The cut of orchids is sufficient for present needs. Both cosmos and dahlias are still in the market.

Various Notes.

E. G. Gillett attended the Ohio state conclave of the Knights Templar at Toledo last week. He also visited Detroit and other northern points on business. Mr. Gillett was impressed with the window decorations for the conclave and with the general good quality of the flowers.

Louis H. Kyrk left October 18 on a two weeks' business tour.

R. C. Bertsch, of Greensburg, Ind., has been sending some excellent yellow mums to the St. Louis market.

Esh Bros. have opened a retail flower store at 1227 Vine street. It is the tenth retail store on Vine street.

Recent visitors were Mr. and Mrs. C. Edward Ruch, Richmond, Ind.; J. N. Crismore, Chicago; John T. Nicks, Cleveland, and James P. Keller, Lexington, Ky. C. H. H.

BENTON HARBOR, MICH.

The recent Benton Harbor Fruit Festival, held October 6 to 9, brought considerable business to the florists.

The Central Seed & Bulb Co. exhibited forty-four varieties of dahlias, thirteen of which were Thompson's new seedlings. They showed eight varieties of gladioli and a good display of ferns, palms and cut flowers.

Thomas Heaven made a fine display of ferns. The stock in his greenhouses is looking well, especially his adiantum.

Robert A. Smythe has his large house newly planted to carnations and will be in the market soon with some fine stock.

Robert A. Smythe was the main spoke in the wheel in getting up the premium list. He made a good job of it.

The Market.

It certainly is encouraging to be able to note a great improvement in trade. An advance in prices has taken place on nearly all the items. Stock cleans up well. The quality has improved more than the quantity has increased. Roses are becoming better and more plentiful. Russell, Ophelia, Killarney and Sunburst are mostly in demand.

Carnation receipts are not much heavier and the wholesalers experience no difficulty in moving the carnations at a good price. Gladioli have diminished to such an extent that they are no longer called for. Asters are yet to be seen, but they are of poor quality. Dahlias are still in great demand. Easter lilies meet with a good market, but there is an unusually short supply of them. Chrysanthemums are now the feature of the market, although the situation remains uncertain. There are a few of the early ones left and the second lot is not yet ready for shipment. Valley and orchids are in sufficient supply to meet the demand. Violets of a fair quality have made their appearance. Greens of all kinds move in a satisfactory manner.

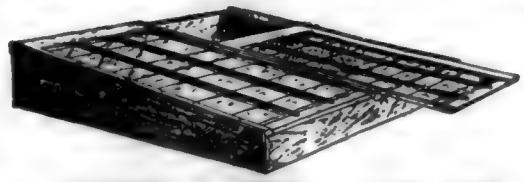
ELIZABETH, N. J.

J. E. and A. G. Hutchinson, 227 Broad street, report that business is getting better, though collections are still slow. As soon as the frosts have killed all the outdoor flowers it is expected that there will be a noticeable increase in business.



James White, whose father has grown flowers for many years in this city, and whose grandfather was also engaged in the same business, has opened a store at Westfield avenue and Broad street.

John Blakeley, 80 Broad street, still gets a large amount of funeral work. The first two weeks of October he had several weddings and he has had an occasional one since.

MAN IS ALWAYS STRIVING to improve the things that come under his hand. This is called Progress, and has made the world what it is today. There are some things that cannot be improved, and after all is said and done Nature's way is found to be the best. Nature's fertilizer, animal manure, has been proven the sure, safe and economical means of producing results wanted in the greenhouse. Like the diamond, it can't be imitated or improved. Nature holds the secret of the diamond, and just as surely does she hold the secret of what is in manure that makes it do for the soil and plant what man-made fertilizers and chemicals cannot do. Most successful growers know this to be a fact and use high-grade animal manures. Many of them have learned that

The weather last week was extremely cloudy and flowers consequently were scarce. Carnations have sold as high as $5 per hundred. Mums were scarce the first part of last week, but with sunshine they became plentiful. Roses have been of poor quality and scarce. Funeral work has been heavy and has kept flowers well cleaned up.

The department of floriculture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College is making plans for its annual fall flower show, to be held November 8 and 9. The entire first floor of the building, about 5,200 square feet, will be used. There will be exhibits of interest to the florist and gardener as well as to the general public. For the students in floriculture, there will be competitions in floral arrangement. The competition in table decorations will be limited to the junior class, with fourteen entries. The seniors will have a competition in basket arrangement, with ten entries. In addition to these competitions, there will be vase, plant basket and box arrangements, bouquets and corsages. There will be exhibits of pottery, baskets and various other types of containers, together with other accessories of the florist.

The Northampton and Holyoke Gardeners' and Florists' Club is to cooperate with the M. A. C. Florists' and Gardeners' Club for a joint meeting one evening of the show, at which time some outside speaker will talk upon floral arrangements and exhibits.

NOT ASSEMBLERS BUT MANUFACTURERS

THERE are a lot of greenhouse, as well as automobile builders, who are assemblers. They do not make their parts; they buy them here, there and everywhere; and put them together.

We are not assemblers; we are manufacturers.

With but a few minor exceptions, we make everything we sell. Consequently, it is made particularly for the particular purpose for which it is to be used.

Take for example our boilers; we don't buy them, we make them. We make them so they will be made the way a greenhouse boiler should be made. They are not the regular house heating boilers bought of some outside firm who cast our name on the door.

It's the same even with a somewhat minor thing like our Tell Tale Ventilating Apparatus.

We don't buy it of some recording machine company. It is made right in our own factory. A glance at the pointer will tell exactly how wide the ridge sash is opened.

And so we could go right through our house, and show you how practically everything in the construction and equipping of our houses is made by us, for our house.

That's one of the big reasons why you can depend on depending on Hitchings. And, remember, that we go anywhere for business, or to talk business.

New Nozzle Used in Zuck & Sons' New House

IN the big, iron frame vegetable house recently erected by Zuck & Sons at Erie, Pa., they fully equipped it with the Skinner System of Overhead Watering, using our new nozzle, with its improved throw.

The house is 75 feet wide by 393 feet 4 inches long.

The first and second crops will be lettuce; probably followed by tomatoes.

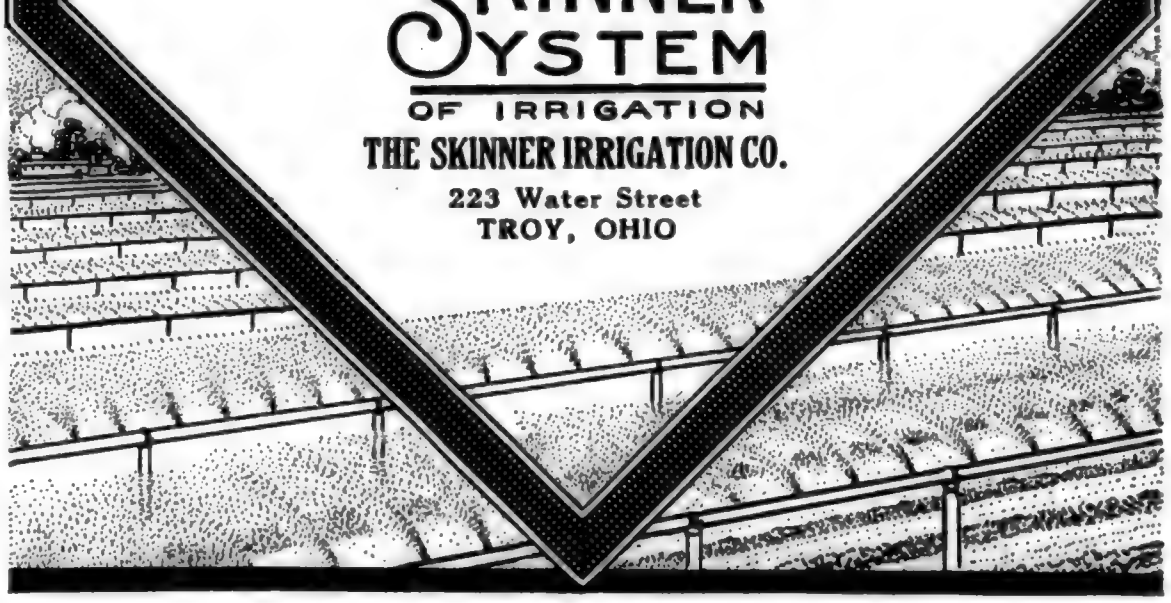
Every one of the houses in the entire Zuck range is "Skinnerized," as they call it.

You who have used our System know how well our old greenhouse nozzle did its work. But this new one has that one beaten every way.

Its throw is more uniform and practically free from drip.

It is made in three sizes, to water a space 16, 24 or 35 feet wide.

It has a detachable intake, making cleaning easy and sure.



We want to send you a sample nozzle and make you an exchange offer for your old ones.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

SELLERS SERVE SAINTS AND SOULS

Chief among the flower days in southern states is All Saints', or All Souls', sometimes drawing large quantities of stock from northern markets. So widely known is the observance at New Orleans, the trade will find much of interest in an American florist's account of the event in Manila, the Philippines.

WHEN October comes, with its frosty nights, wholesale florists at Chicago turn expectantly toward New Orleans, since the observance of All Saints' day and the needs of the southern city are likely to determine the pulse of the cut flower trade in "The Great Central Market" and other cities shipping southward. Besides its religious significance in the Catholic church, All Saints' day, like Memorial day in the north, is of large importance to florists among the holidays in the Louisiana city and the immediate neighborhood.

Time was when Chicago shipped flowers by the actual carload for the All Saints' day observance in the south, but in recent years the southern cities have developed a considerable home supply, largely of chrysanthemums grown outdoors, perhaps with lath or cloth protection. The success of these crops depends, of course, more or less on the weather: When they are good the northern markets do not feel the old-time demand, but when weather conditions are unfavorable and the local mums are destroyed or are not ready on time, then the northern wholesalers may be hard put to it to fill their orders, especially as each year sees an increase in the quantity of stock required for this quaint, Old World custom.

A Southern Custom.

At no other place in the United States are sights to be seen like those of New Orleans at All Saints' day. Nowhere except in the south is the day observed and nowhere except in New Orleans are there such quaint, old, great cities of the dead.

The Old World observance of All Saints' day places the great public celebration, not November 1, but on All Souls' day, immediately following, which is the occasion it is intended to commemorate. The first day of the month is, as its name indicates, a time of prayer in honor of the saints and martyrs, while All Souls' day is kept in commemoration of all faithful souls. The New World has fixed November 1, instead, as the principal time for paying homage to the souls of all the dead, making it a two days' affair. This year, with November 1 falling on Monday, there will be many flowers taken to the cemeteries Sunday.

In Uncle Sam's Islands.

But since Uncle Sam assumed the guardianship of the Philippines we have another metropolis in which the observance of All Saints' day takes an important place on the church calendar, if not on that of the florists. "Regretfully," writes a florist long familiar with the observance in the southern states, "there is no means by which the trade at home can profit by the observance here—and it lasts a week! Everybody takes part, too!"

"Florists who know the customs in our own south," writes this American florist now resident at Manila, "would watch with interest the observance here, but it would be a grief to them to see that so many artificial flowers are used for the decorations, natural flowers being scarce. The celebration is not confined to one or two days, but lasts a week, which of course multiplies the demand for decorative material. Too bad that the Philippine Islands are so far away from the States! Perhaps some day there will be a fast airship-express service to Manila, which will bring this market within reach of American growers."

The illustrations give an idea of how flowers are combined with electric lights in the decorations. Paco cemetery resembles those in New Orleans. The graves are above ground and avenues of large, stone sepulchers, facing upon parked spaces, take the place of tombstones and monuments. "One week before All Saints' day, a large electric cross is placed at the entrance of each cemetery. The grounds are illuminated along the main walks and remind one of a fairgrounds or a carnival. The illumination inside the cemeteries takes place October 30 and 31, which are the big days. The graves and plots also are decorated with flowers and electric lights, and the lights are kept burning on those two nights. The poor people who cannot afford electric lights burn candles."

All Saints' Day in Paco Cemetery, Manila, P. I.

Making a Week of It.

Another unusual feature of the occasion, to be seen at La Loma cemetery, is the sight of many families camped in and about the cemetery grounds, living in tents. They spend the week at the cemetery in worship and prayer.

"Paco cemetery has large, encircling walls. The outside wall serves

The illumination inside the cemeteries takes place October 30 and 31, which are the big days. The graves and plots also are decorated with flowers and electric lights, and the lights are kept burning on those two nights. The poor people who cannot afford electric lights burn candles."

All Saints' Day in Paco Cemetery, Manila, P. I.

Making a Week of It.

Another unusual feature of the occasion, to be seen at La Loma cemetery, is the sight of many families camped in and about the cemetery grounds, living in tents. They spend the week at the cemetery in worship and prayer.

"Paco cemetery has large, encircling walls. The outside wall serves as a fence around the cemetery. The inner walls are about ten feet across and sixteen feet high. These contain many vaults, each measuring about two feet square in front, and extending back into the wall. The compartments are close together, each just large enough to contain a casket. After the casket is in place the vault is sealed with a slab bearing name and epitaph. Around each slab the families of the departed place their floral decorations and electric lights.

"In the center of Paco cemetery is a small chapel, in which, as with all Catholic churches in the Philippines, excepting the 'American church,' there are no seats. On the floor of this chapel are tablets, or slabs, of the well-to-do families of those who have departed. The tablets are cemented flat on the floor. These, too, are decorated with flowers and lights. Candles are burned on the last night in addition to the electric lights.

"The scenes are alike in all the cemeteries on All Saints' day. One of the prettier cemeteries is Del Norte, which is new. Most of the grounds is in park and one of its distinctive features is the nursery. In front of a vault in this cemetery, which is shown in the illustration, the mourners burn incense for two days and nights.

If One Swallow Made a Summer.

"If one big holiday a year could make a florist prosperous, Manila would be the place to go. Everybody, almost without exception, takes part in the festival and buys flowers—too often artificial flowers. The natives and Spaniards turn out by thousands on the two principal days, and the routes of travel toward the cemeteries are thickly congested. The Filipinos seem to keep more of the Old World spirit and traditions in their celebration of All Saints' and All Souls' days than do the people in the United States, and the wise florist knows it is a good thing when this spirit is kept alive. Besides, a little religion does no harm."

HEAD AT MELODY FARM.

Thomas W. Head, until recently proprietor of the Bergenfield Nurseries, Bergenfield, N. J., has been appointed superintendent and business manager of Melody Farm, the country home of J. Ogden Armour at Lake Forest, Ill.

Mr. Head is well equipped for the position, made vacant by the return to England of James Burgess. Mr. Head was for some years in charge of the estate of Morton F. Plant, at New London, Conn. Later he had experience in the commercial side of the business with the Bergenfield establishment recently sold back to the Stumpp & Walter Co., New York. While a vast amount of work already has been done at Melody Farm, the 2,000 acres and the ambitious plans for its development will give scope for the display of Mr. Head's undoubted genius for gardening and for administration. Work now in progress includes a garden theater and the addition of numerous houses for fruits and plants.

CARE OF DAHLIA ROOTS.

Dahlias should be harvested shortly after their foliage has been killed by frost. I find from experience that as soon as the frost kills the foliage the strength of the stalk recedes back into the bulbs, and that if they are not harvested shortly, each bulb sends forth a sprout which becomes a shoot, and, if left long enough, a stalk, and as there is danger of frost any time after the first severe frost, no matter how long left, they can never grow long enough to reach maturity and bloom before being killed.

This sprout or shoot is new, brittle growth, not hard and woody like the stalk; and when the clumps are dry, if the sprout is two or three inches long, it is generally allowed to remain, if a foot or so long is cut off, the same as the stalk. In either case this new and brittle growth lacks substance, and as it has not sufficient substance to carry it through the winter, the sprout commences to decay during the winter months, oftentimes causing the whole clump to decay; and however the case, the plant life and vitality required to grow this is wasted, because it is taken from the clump. This same life and vitality should have been used in the spring, when it would be ten times as valuable.

By digging two or three days after your plant has been killed by frost, your clumps are in a perfectly dormant condition, having no sprouts, and will keep perfectly all winter, sending forth sprouts in the spring, which is the proper time.

Dahlias may be dug with fork, spade or plow. In digging or harvesting the clump, great care should be taken; dig them, and dig very carefully—do not pull them up. You have a large cluster of bulbs or clump; each bulb has a neck, which is the small portion between the bulb and where it joins the stalk. The clump should be dug or lifted carefully, so as not to break the necks of the bulbs. If you crack, girdle or break a neck, sometimes they will dry up, or at other times decay. However, when the clump is divided, the bulb with a broken neck is weak and not as good, and requires longer to become established and to commence to grow after being planted in the ground.

After removing the clump, shake gently to remove the soil that would naturally fall off. Cut off top within two or three inches above top of clumps, allowing them to be exposed to the sun and air for only an hour or two. Do not allow them to stay out two or three days to dry up, then wonder why they are withered and fail to sprout.

Pack in a cool, frost-proof place, where extremes in temperature may be avoided, a place having an average temperature of about 45 degrees. Do not cover, or pack in any material or with any substance; cork, sawdust, shavings, coal ashes, sand or earth, all hold and retain a dampness or moisture, something unnatural. They are also too close, compact and damp, causing the bulbs to start to mildew, or to decay. Would you pack your potatoes in any of the above? Simply pack clumps one on top of the other, placing each clump upside down.

Undoubtedly you are aware that the dahlia stalk is hollow, and that this hollow contains a watery substance, or acid. If you pack your clumps with the stalk up, the acid will flow back into the crown of the clump, causing decay; whereas, if you turn your clumps upside down the acid must flow out, and clump will remain in a perfectly dormant condition. Pack clumps upside down, in boxes or barrels, packing one on top of the other.

Dahlias in an old-fashioned cellar will keep well without any covering, but in a cellar having a cement bottom, or heat, the boxes or barrels should be lined with heavy paper, and covered with paper or burlap. Covering with paper or burlap excludes the air and preserves a more even temperature. In heated places the circulation of air and heat causes the bulbs to shrivel and dry up. A covering of this kind prevents the roots from shriveling.

INDIANA FLORISTS TO MEET.

The November meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana will be held with Richmond members, November 2, instead of November 8, as announced at the Anderson meeting. Please make due note of the above and arrange to spend the day with our Richmond friends. Indianapolis florists will leave the Union station at 7:05 a. m. over the Pennsylvania railroad. Buy tickets to Easthaven, which is the stop directly opposite the plant of the E. G. Hill Co.

RIPENING GREEN TOMATOES.

As of interest to the grower who has a garden, it may be timely to note that green tomatoes, carefully picked and wrapped in tissue paper and placed in a room that is temperate to quite cold but dry, will ripen successfully up to Christmas. A late-planted vine, or late crop, seems to yield a firmer product than green fruit of early-planted vines. I have before me some beautiful, firm fruit, weighing from one-fourth to one-half pound, and especially nice for slicing. Theo. F. Beckert.

MUM SHOW AT BANGOR, ME.

The first chrysanthemum show to be held in the state of Maine will take place November 1 and 2, at Bangor, in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce. It has been arranged under the auspices of the Maine State Florists' Society. The members are hoping the show will be successful enough to make it an annual event. Alexander Lurie, instructor in floriculture and landscape gardening at the University of Maine, who informs The Review of the plans of the society for holding the show, writes as follows:

"The florists have responded splendidly and have done themselves proud in the exhibitions which have been held in connection with agricultural fairs."

CULTURE OF EUPATORIUMS.

Will you please advise me as to the culture of eupatoriums?

L. M. S. & C.—Del.

The treatment of eupatoriums is practically the same as that of stevias. Take cuttings in winter and either grow them on in pots plunged outdoors through the summer, or plant them out, lifting and potting them before there is danger of frost. Give them cool greenhouse treatment. The plants will need one or two pinchings through the early summer. Good varieties to grow under glass are E. riparium, E. glandulosum and E. glabratum. There are also a number of good hardy eupatoriums, useful in the hardy perennial borders. The blue variety, E. cœlestinum, is now classed as a conoclinium.

CHICAGO SPECIAL PREMIUMS.

A Fine Showing of Prizes.

All the plans for the Chicago Grand Floral Festival, to be held at the Coliseum, November 9 to 14, were fully discussed in a half-day meeting of the executive committee, held at the Morrison hotel, October 21, when A. Henderson, W. N. Rudd, W. J. Keimel, August Poehlmann, N. J. Wietor, E. F. Kurowski, Guy W. French, N. P. Miller, E. A. Kanst, Payne Jennings, Robert Brenton, J. H. Burdett, August Koch, James Morton and M. Barker were in attendance. The final premium list is in the hands of the printers and will be ready for mailing this week. Copies may be had on application to Secretary N. P. Miller, 179 North Wabash avenue, Chicago.

An item of unusual interest is the twenty-five silver cups being donated by the greenhouse manufacturers of Chicago. Instead of taking space in the Coliseum annex, making trade exhibits of greenhouses and greenhouse appliances, the same as is usually done at the annual convention of the S. A. F., the greenhouse manufacturers of Chicago suggested that the space be sold to others and that a contribution be collected among the manufacturers and donated to the show to be used as prizes. Lord & Burnham Co., Foley Mfg. Co., Garland Mfg. Co., Ickes-Braun Mill Co., A. Dietsch Co. and the John C. Moninger Co. were represented at a luncheon at the Grand Pacific hotel October 13, at which a subscription was taken and a fund of $500 was made up for the purchase of silver cups. It is expected that the action of the greenhouse manufacturers in getting together in this way and making a bulk contribution will set a precedent for others of the allied trades and the future may bring more concerted action in this direction. P. L. McKee was given authority to collect the funds, arrange for publicity and distribution of the prizes. It is expected they will be exhibited in one of the large stores downtown prior to the opening of the show.

In addition to the handsome collection of cups donated by greenhouse construction concerns in the vicinity of Chicago, a large number of other special prizes have been received, including the following:

The Guarantee Fund.

In order to guard against such a misfortune as might come with a week of bad weather, the executive committee some time ago started a guarantee fund in charge of A. F. Poehlmann. It was agreed that ten per cent of the net profit of the show goes to the guarantors in proportion as they subscribe for same. The balance of the profit, if any, goes equally to the Chicago Florists' Club and the Horticultural Society of Chicago. Among those who had subscribed October 20, were:

I wish to correct an error I made in giving notice of the next meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery. The meeting will be held November 11, at

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Committee Meeting at Philadelphia.

The work of preparation for the Fourth National Flower Show, to be held at Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2, 1916, received a great impetus through the three days' visit of the National Flower Show committee, October 18 to 20. With the exception of W. N. Rudd, of Morgan Park, Ill., the whole of the committee, with President Patrick Welch of the S. A. F., were present. President S. S. Pennock, of the American Rose Society, was present also.

Early the first morning the members of the committee were greeted by Chairman George Asmus, of Chicago, at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, and the subcommittee on schedule, with Chairman Asmus, C. H. Totty, Thomas Roland, Adolph Farenwald and Secretary John Young, adjourned at once to Parlor 215, where the preparation of the second preliminary schedule was commenced.

Secretary Young presented a list of special prizes offered for various exhibits, and the disposition of them through the schedule occupied considerable time. In the section for private growers, a class was added covering a group of flowering and foliage plants, arranged for effect, to occupy twenty-five square feet, the stock shown to be produced from 2,500 square feet of glass, or less, the exhibitors to be members of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. This class will be appreciated by private gardeners who are limited to a small area of glass for their products. In the commercial section a class was added for a group of crotons, arranged for effect, to cover 100 square feet, with prizes of $150 and $100. The premium list for the carnation section was approved and many other matters settled.

Sub-Committees Report.

The sub-committee on schedule was again in session in the afternoon, and at this meeting there were present many of the chairmen of the local committees, and the gathering eventually merged into a meeting of the local executive committee. W. P. Craig, Arthur Niessen, secretary and treasurer of the local executive committee; Robert Craig, E. J. Fancourt, W. F. Therkildson, Frederick Cowperthwaite, Charles Grakelow, S. S. Pennock, John P. Habermehl, Louis Burk, William Kleinheinz, C. H. Fox, J. Otto Thilow and Franklin Barrett all made reports for their respective committees, which showed the work was progressing in a most satisfactory manner.

Mr. Therkildson, chairman of the committee on publicity, presented samples of advertising stickers for use on stationery, packages, and in other ways, 250,000 of which have been ordered and may be obtained by anyone who can use them to advantage. He also displayed samples of large posters and two sizes of card posters, all of which were approved by the committee and adopted. Mr. Therkildson's report was interesting and covered in detail the work and plans of his committee. In closing, he appealed to all who can do so to furnish him with articles and photographs covering floricultural subjects adapted for use in his campaign of publicity.

Here's the Latest Corsage Position, on the Stole of Fur.

Mr. Thilow, for the committee on lectures, reported that his program was practically complete; it provides for moving pictures each afternoon and illustrated lectures each evening. Mr. Grakelow, for the committee on special features, outlined what his committee aimed to achieve, and some novel show features are now expected to evolve from the committee. Mr. Barrett, for the committee on aquariums, promised an extensive line of exhibits in the aquarium section.

General Session.

A full meeting of the National Flower Show committee was held October 19 at the Bellevue-Stratford, there being present Chairman Asmus, Secretary Young, Treasurer W. F. Kasting and Messrs. Farenwald, Totty, Roland, Craig, and President Welch. Local Executive Secretary Niessen was also present. Secretary Young reported that the guarantee fund was practically complete, that space aggregating over $6,000 had been reserved already in the trade section, and that advertising contracts amounting to over $1,200 had been booked for the official souvenir program. In all probability, he said, every available foot of space for trade exhibits would be sold. The committee voted that a call be made for fifty per cent of the amounts subscribed to the guarantee fund, February 1, 1916.

The recommendations of the various committees made at the meeting of the local executive committee were considered, and appropriations made to cover the requirements of such committees. The local executive committee was authorized to secure an office in a central location and to employ the necessary clerical help for the committees. The price for trade tickets was fixed at 25 cents each, not less than twenty-five tickets to be sold to anyone at this price. C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., was appointed chairman of the board of jurors, and William Graham, of Philadelphia, was appointed manager of the show.

In the afternoon the committee, with the chairmen of several of the local committees, visited Convention hall and inspected it thoroughly. With the information now available as to requirements of the competitive exhibits in point of space, it was obvious that more room would be required than was afforded by the present layout, so it was decided to move the trade exhibits a little distance from the marked central area of the hall, to increase the room for the competitive exhibits. The secretary was instructed to notify any exhibitor holding a reservation, whose plans might be affected by the change, that the rearrangement was made necessary by the great number of competitive exhibits promised, and the elaborate scale on which many of them

November 11—Meeting of Florists' Telegraph Delivery, at 11 a. m. The bowling tournament will be held at the Erie bowling alleys, time to be announced. Visiting lady florists and wives of exhibitors to be given a pink tea, with some novel entertainment features.

November 12—Meeting of the American Rose Society. Meeting of executive committee of the American Carnation Society. Adjourned meeting of the Ohio Gladiolus Society. In the evening a banquet to the visiting florists and exhibitors.

November 13.—Saturday evening, a smoker for all visiting florists and exhibitors.

November 14—Sunday, the show will close at 10 p. m.

Meetings of all societies will be held in the rooms of the Cleveland Florists' Club at the Hollenden hotel.

A new class has been announced as No. 162, for 150 valley, any foliage or greens allowed; arrangement to be considered; must be grown and arranged by exhibitor, who may furnish one vase. The prizes, offered by Charles Schwake & Co., New York, are $12, $8 and $5.

Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, L. I., has drawn honors by being first to make entries for the show. Many other entries are being received daily, assuring a big show.

The decorating committee met October 26, and Chairman F. C. W. Brown outlined the final plans for obtaining novel effects.

The executive committee approved plans for making a tea garden a prominent social feature of the show.

F. T. D. AT THE HOLLENDEN.

I wish to correct an error I made in giving notice of the next meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery. The meeting will be held November 11, at 9 a. m., at the Hotel Hollenden, Cleveland, O., instead of at the Hotel Statler, as I stated in my previous notice.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Committee Meeting at Philadelphia.

The work of preparation for the Fourth National Flower Show, to be held at Philadelphia, March 25 to April 1, 1916, received a great impetus through the three days' visit of the National Flower Show committee, October 18 to 20. With the exception of W. N. Rudd, of Morgan Park, Ill., the whole of the committee, with President Patrick Welch of the S. A. F., were present. President S. S. Pennock, of the American Rose Society, was present also.

Early the first morning the members of the committee were greeted by Chairman George Asmus, of Chicago, at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, and the subcommittee on schedule, with Chairman Asmus, C. H. Totty, Thomas Roland, Adolph Farenwald and Secretary John Young, adjourned at once to Parlor 215, where the preparation of the second preliminary schedule was commenced.

Secretary Young presented a list of special prizes offered for various exhibits, and the disposition of them through the schedule occupied considerable time. In the section for private growers, a class was added covering a group of flowering and foliage plants, arranged for effect, to occupy twenty-five square feet, the stock shown to be produced from 2,500 square feet of glass, or less, the exhibitors to be members of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. This class will be appreciated by private gardeners who are limited to a small area of glass for their products. In the commercial section a class was added for a group of crotons, arranged for effect, to cover 100 square feet, with prizes of $150 and $100. The premium list for the carnation section was approved and many other matters settled.

Sub-Committees Report.

The sub-committee on schedule was again in session in the afternoon, and at this meeting there were present many of the chairmen of the local committees, and the gathering eventually merged into a meeting of the local executive committee. W. P. Craig, Arthur Niessen, secretary and treasurer of the local executive committee; Robert Craig, E. J. Fancourt, W. F. Therkildson, Frederick Cowperthwaite, Charles Grakelow, S. S. Pennock, John P. Habermehl, Louis Burk, William Kleinheinz, C. H. Fox, J. Otto Thilow and Franklin Barrett all made reports for their respective committees, which showed the work was progressing in a most satisfactory manner.

Mr. Therkildson, chairman of the committee on publicity, presented samples of advertising stickers for use on stationery, packages, and in other ways, 250,000 of which have been ordered and may be obtained by anyone who can use them to advantage. He also displayed samples of large posters and two sizes of card posters, all of which were approved by the committee and adopted. Mr. Therkildson's report was interesting and covered in detail the work and plans of his committee. In closing, he appealed to all who can do so to furnish him with articles and photographs covering floricultural subjects adapted for use in his campaign of publicity.

Here's the Latest Corsage Position, on the Stole of Fur.

Mr. Thilow, for the committee on lectures, reported that his program was practically complete; it provides for moving pictures each afternoon and illustrated lectures each evening. Mr. Grakelow, for the committee on special features, outlined what his committee aimed to achieve, and some novel show features are now expected to evolve from the committee. Mr. Barrett, for the committee on aquariums, promised an extensive line of exhibits in the aquarium section.

General Session.

A full meeting of the National Flower Show committee was held October 19 at the Bellevue Stratford, there being present Chairman Asmus, Secretary Young, Treasurer W. F. Kasting and Messrs. Farenwald, Totty, Roland, Craig, and President Welch. Local Executive Secretary Niessen was also present. Secretary Young reported that the guarantee fund was practically complete, that space aggregating over $6,000 had been reserved already in the trade section, and that advertising contracts amounting to over $1,200 had been booked for the official souvenir program. In all probability, he said, every available foot of space for trade exhibits would be sold. The committee voted that a call be made for fifty per cent of the amounts subscribed to the guarantee fund, February 1, 1916.

The recommendations of the various committees made at the meeting of the local executive committee were considered, and appropriations made to cover the requirements of such committees. The local executive committee was authorized to secure an office in a central location and to employ the necessary clerical help for the committees. The price for trade tickets was fixed at 25 cents each, not less than twenty-five tickets to be sold to anyone at this price. C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., was appointed chairman of the board of jurors, and William Graham, of Philadelphia, was appointed manager of the show.

In the afternoon the committee, with the chairmen of several of the local committees, visited Convention hall and inspected it thoroughly. With the information now available as to requirements of the competitive exhibits in point of space, it was obvious that more room would be required than was afforded by the present layout, so it was decided to move the trade exhibits a little distance from the marked central area of the hall, to increase the room for the competitive exhibits. The secretary was instructed to notify any exhibitor holding a reservation, whose plans might be affected by the change, that the rearrangement was made necessary by the great number of competitive exhibits promised, and the elaborate scale on which many of them are to be staged, all adding to the attractiveness of the exhibition. If found necessary, the secretary was authorized to issue a new plan.

Space was allotted for booths for the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the garden clubs of Philadelphia and vicinity, for the lecture room, and for the exhibits of aquariums.

Club Meeting.

On the evening of October 19 the members of the National Flower Show committee were guests of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia at a special meeting of the club held in its rooms, President Burton surrendering the gavel to Chairman Asmus, of the Flower Show committee. The forthcoming Fourth National Flower Show was, of course, the whole subject of the program, and tremendous enthusiasm in the project was evoked. The spirit of optimism prevailed, and if there was a pessimist anywhere in the neighborhood who wished in any way to throw cold water on the enterprise, he very discreetly kept away. It was a "get together" meeting, if ever there was one. Speeches came thick and fast, and applause was unspared. It was a meeting long to be remembered and spoke volumes for the success of the show.

John Young, Sec'y.

BY WEIGHT, NOT BULK.

In the last paragraph of my recent notes on "Carnations in the South," on page 18 of The Review of October 21, I made what might prove to be a misleading statement in regard to the mixing of sheep manure and guano. I suggested a mixture of two parts of sheep manure to one part of commercial guano. That proportion is correct if the two fertilizers are mixed by weight, not by bulk. If they are mixed by bulk, the ratio should be four parts of sheep manure to one part of guano. Applied in the usual quantity, the two-to-one mixture in bulk would be excessive in nitrogen and might have bad effects. L.

BABY DOLL ROSE.

Some confusion having arisen, it is well to state that there is no connection whatever between the roses George Elger and Baby Doll. George Elger is a miniature yellow rose which we introduced in this country last year, having secured it from the producer, E. Turbat, of Orleans, France. Baby Doll is larger and stronger in both bud and stem and the color is entirely new and pronounced by the most expert rosarians entirely different from any other rose, the lower part of the bud being yellow but blended toward the end to deep carmine red. It is a wonderful color that creates admiration and wonder wherever shown. We are producing, at the South Park Floral Co., Newcastle, Ind., the stock that will be disseminated by ourselves and some other firms this coming year. Those experienced in the promotion of new roses predict a great demand for this unusual novelty.

M. Heller.

[The rose called Baby Doll has been referred to as being sold on the New York market by the John Young Co., and on the Chicago market by the E. C. Amling Co., both handling cut stock received from Mr. Heller's company. The confusion as to the identity of the rose doubtless grew out of the practice of renaming these small roses, Mlle. Cecile Brunner being best known as Sweetheart, etc.]

THE DONALDSON GAS SUIT.

William H. Siebrecht, attorney for John Donaldson, of Patchogue, in his suit against the Newton Gas Co. for damages done the stock in his greenhouses at Elmhurst, L. I., states that the case has been settled. The company paid Mr. Donaldson over $2,700.

The settlement of this suit is of more than usual interest, inasmuch as the gas main which caused the trouble was practically new, having been laid only two years prior to the damage, and, furthermore, no one ever smelled gas in Mr. Donaldson's greenhouse. Nevertheless, the growth of his stock of Easter lilies was stunted and his calla lilies were destroyed. Experts who were called into the case pronounced illuminating gas the cause of the injury to the plants and flowers, and this was substantiated by certain experiments which Mr. Siebrecht caused to be conducted.

Shortly after this leakage Mr. Donaldson sold his property in Elmhurst and moved to Patchogue. His son, Alexander Donaldson, now conducts the florists' business at his father's old place. The first winter that the son put through in the same house there was another leak, or a continuation of the same leak, which resulted in another suit against the same gas company.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

WILTING OF CUT BLOOMS.

I have a fine lot of chrysanthemums, with tall, stiff stems and good, green foliage. I am cutting Chrysolora and Polly Rose and the blooms are large and fine. After cutting them, I put them in water of the same temperature as the air and in a cool room, although no ice is used, but the next day both blooms and leaves wilt. What can I do to prevent this? J. V. A.—Ky.

Chrysanthemums do not need ice when placed in water. The question of their wilting after being cut comes up every fall. If the stem at the base, where they are cut off, is extremely hard, they should be either split up or bruised with a hammer in order to permit the water to be drawn up into the stem. It may be said that the most frequent cause of flowers wilting is that the stem is so hard that the water will not pass up. Again, when mums are cut, it not infrequently happens that they are stuck into vases entirely too small for them; consequently they flop all over and do not get a chance to take up the water properly. Mum blooms should be placed in a receptacle deep enough to allow the flowers to stand erect. When this is done and the stems are split or bruised as already directed, there should be no trouble with the blooms wilting.

Chas H. Totty.

WINTERING STOCK PLANTS.

My early chrysanthemums are all cut and I have been thinking of lifting the old plants, planting them outside in a coldframe and covering them with a heavy layer of leaves during the winter. In early spring I would remove the leaves and cover the frames with sashes. Do you think this method would give stronger and hardier cuttings, or do you think it would not work at all? If you do not approve of the plan, will you kindly tell me of a good way to keep over the old stock plants so as to insure strong cuttings? I am growing such early varieties as Smith's Advance, Smith's Sensation, Golden Glow and Pacific Supreme. I am greatly crowded for room, and should like to try a new way of keeping the old stock plants.

F. A. W.—Ohio.

It is all right to lift old plants and plant them outside in a coldframe until spring. When they are replanted, however, one must be sure that they are well firmed in the soil, and they should not be covered with leaves until the winter is well advanced, so they will have a chance to make some roots and get established in their new quarters. They will certainly give much stronger and better cuttings than if they were kept in the greenhouse and thrown under the benches, which happens in too many places where mums are of secondary consideration.

If you are feeding your plants much, you will find it far better to grow some stock plants of all your varieties out in the field and not to propagate from plants that have been forced in the greenhouses year after year. This is the sole cause of so many splendid varieties of chrysanthemums breaking down so early and coming to an untimely end. By all means put your plants out in the frame and, unless the winter happens to be unusually severe, they will come through perfectly.

Chas. H. Totty.

MONEY IN THIS MUM.

The excellent prices obtained this season for good early mums has had the effect of measurably stimulating the demand for stock plants of certain varieties and, no doubt, the same increased call will later be noted for cuttings and 2½-inch pot plants. But the demand is discriminating; not all varieties share in it. "It is not especially pleasant," write Zieger & Sons, of Philadelphia, who have been advertising stock plants in The Review, "to have to return good cash, being oversold on Early Frost at $15 per hundred, while no one seems to want Golden Glow. That the trade wants one variety and not the other is an established fact, or The Review would have sold us out of Golden Glow by this time, too. We know this because, although we were sold out of double pink bouvardias and discontinued the ad two weeks ago, we still are receiving orders every day, showing how even the back numbers of The Review are searched by those who want certain kinds of stock."

The special call for Early Frost as compared with Golden Glow, of course, is due to the fact that nearly everyone has the older variety, while only a comparative few have the newer one. There is, however, the further fact that a large number of Golden Glow damped off or were badly spotted by the peculiar weather conditions this summer and early autumn, costing the growers considerable money, while the white came good and brought excellent prices.

Early Frost is a Dorner variety, sent out last year. It is exceptionally early, the result of a cross between Golden Glow and October Frost. It has the Golden Glow habit of setting early buds that will develop into perfect flowers; pure white, with incurved petals, and full to the center. The height in a normal season is three feet, which makes it well adapted to side benches.

SHOULD NOT BE DISBUDDED.

We have a nice lot of chrysanthemums in 7-inch and 8-inch pots. Please tell us whether the pompon varieties should be disbudded the same as the large-flowered sorts. D. & K.—Mich.

No. Pompon chrysanthemums should never be disbudded. C. W.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

The Baker Bros. Floral Co., of Fort Worth, Tex., anticipates good business this season. C. Papworth, manager of the seed department, notes an exceptionally healthy stock of callas and Lilium candidum. Failure to receive their order of Chinese lilies, because of reported cholera in China, caused Edward Baker to remark that this was a great time for germs and germicides.

En route to Dallas is a pleasure park, the entrance of which is covered with the Cardinal Climber, introduced by H. A. Dreer, Inc. A pergola at the Dallas state fair was decorated with this bright climber. It is a splendid plant for the south and has done exceptionally well this season.

S. J. Mitchell, of the publicity committee of the fall flower show to be held at Houston, Tex., reports excellent progress. He is enthusiastic over the features planned for the S. A. F. convention next year and believes that no one will regret making the trip. An object of great interest to the visitors will be the southern vegetation. The recent storm, which caused great havoc, has been almost forgotten, so quick are our southern confreres to recover their equilibrium. The trade is rapidly getting into shape.

Peter Morgen, of Huntingburg, Ind., is shipping chrysanthemums and roses of fine quality. The houses make an attractive appearance, having been overhauled and repainted. W. M.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

Albert Lash, of Warwood, W. Va., is putting the finishing touches to his new greenhouse.

Albert Kehrer & Son, of Martins Ferry, O., have had funeral work to keep them busy for the last few weeks.

W. A. Whitaker, of the J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., Cincinnati, with his daughter, spent several days at Wheeling, W. Va. Mr. Whitaker was busy taking orders for seeds and bulbs.

Charles O'Beirne, of Martins Ferry, has established a good flower business during the last six months. Mr. O'Beirne added flowers as a side line to his confectionery business.

John Dieckmann, of Elm Grove, W. Va., has been cutting some excellent chrysanthemums.

J. W. McCay, of the South Park Greenhouse, Morgantown, W. Va., has taken an interest in the Fleming Greenhouse Co., of Fairmont, W. Va. Charles Fleming is the other member.

The H. Weber & Sons Co., of Fairmont, W. Va., is located temporarily in the Boston Store building.

Hagan Bros., of Uniontown, Pa., have been busy in all departments. Business conditions in and around Uniontown are improving.

J. L. Watts, of Morgantown, is attending to repairs at his range.

SCENES AT CEDAR ACRES.

An uncontrollable fire may wipe out of existence, in a few minutes, property that has cost months and years of men's most strenuous efforts. But the men, however greatly distressed or even discouraged they may be at the time, are not usually baffled by such a catastrophe—if they are the right sort of men. Instead, they proceed to outwit and thwart the fire-fiend, if they can, by building a larger and better edifice than the one that was destroyed, and building it of such materials that it will be a less easy prey to fire than the former structure was. Thus did B. Hammond Tracy, bring good out of evil on his gladiolus fields at Cedar Acres, Wenham, Mass., when he erected the handsome bulb house which is here seen in the illustrations.

The new building, which takes the place of one that was demolished by fire in November of last year, is believed by Mr. Tracy to be thoroughly fireproof. It is constructed of concrete and terra-cotta blocks, with a "slap-dashed" finish. Its dimensions are 60x80 feet. On the upper floor is a show room, 36x45, which, as indicated by one of the illustrations, seems to be excellently fulfilling the purpose for which it was intended. In the rear of the show room are the offices, and the remainder of this story of the building will be used for bulb storage. On the ground floor are the wholesale flower room, carriage rooms, garage, carpenter shop and additional space for bulb storage.

Mr. Tracy stated, when he had nearly completed the harvesting of this year's crop of bulbs, or corms, that he had never stored cleaner or more healthy looking stock. "We are grateful," he said, "to be able to harvest so fine a crop of the best commercial varieties, though we still feel keenly the loss of the many choice varieties that were destroyed by the fire."

Pomona, N. C.—J. Van Lindley took a day off October 20 to celebrate his twentieth anniversary in the florists' business.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

A steady increase in business, accompanied by a growing cash trade and a favorable outlook for the winter, was noticeable last week. More social affairs have been announced for this winter than we had all of last winter.

With the exception of carnations, stock is plentiful. Chrysanthemums are plentiful, while good roses equal the demand.

It has been several years since carnations have been as scarce at this time of year as they are now. It is well, however, that this is the case, for with a full crop of chrysanthemums on, the demand for carnations is much curtailed.

Various Notes.

The Kentucky Society of Florists will hold its monthly meeting at the store of Secretary August R. Baumer, in the Masonic Temple, on Wednesday, November 3, at 8 o'clock.

George E. Schulz, president of the Jacob Schulz Co., is a member of the Ohio Falls Fanciers' Association, which will give a big poultry and dog show at the Louisville Armory during Thanksgiving week. He has been appointed chairman of a committee to interest the florists in making a display for advertising purposes. The association agrees to give each florist as much space as he may wish to have, without cost. Several florists have availed themselves of this liberal offer.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Miller, of the C. H. Kunzman Co., have issued invitations to a reception to be given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kunzman, who were married October 5.

John D. Bettman is the only local grower of carnations who is cutting the usual quantity. A. R. B.

Laconia, N. H.—The branch store of C. L. Howe, of Dover, known as the Laconia Flower Store, has a new motor car as an addition to its delivery service.

LANCASTER, PA.

Club Meeting.

The Lancaster Florists' Association met October 21 in the room of the Chamber of Commerce, with a large attendance. Robert Pyle, of the Conard & Jones Co., of West Grove, Pa., was present and gave an interesting account of his trip to the Pacific coast last summer, as well as his impressions of floriculture in the west. Mr. Pyle showed some fine pictures, which added much to the evening's pleasure. On the motion of Rodney Eshleman, a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Pyle.

Messrs. M. J. Brinton, Elmer J. Weaver and Frank L. Kohr were appointed as a committee to draw up resolutions of sympathy on the death of our lamented fellow-member, the late George G. Goldbach.

R. L. Mowbry, assistant treasurer of the Conard & Jones Co., congratulated the association on its attendance and the enthusiasm shown. Frederick Hardy and Adam Felsinger were elected to membership.

Quite a discussion followed on the workingmen's compensation bill passed recently by the Pennsylvania legislature.

The visiting committee is arranging a trip to Reading for early in November, to visit the florists there. A large number of the members expressed their intention of going. At the next meeting, November 18, mums will be the subject for discussion.

Charles B. Herr, of Strasburg, entertained the Glad Hand committee. The members of this committee are all past masters at croquet. Of the five classy games played, J. Butler Hess and Mr. Herr won four. Their opponents were Ira H. Landis and J. Wade Gayley. After the games refreshments were served by Mr. Herr.

Members Visit Greenhouses.

A party of more than twenty members of the association paid visits to seven of the florists' establishments around the city the day of the meeting.

The first stop was at the houses of the Wheatland Greenhouse Co., where George Ream showed the sights to the visitors. Matchless, Enchantress Supreme, Mrs. Akehurst and Alma Ward carnations are grown here. Cutting was going on in a house of exceptionally well-grown Chrysolora mums. Their Golden Glow, the best ever grown by the company, were all sold several weeks ago and the space filled with potted carnations.

Thomas R. Fries was visited next. His houses are located on the historic property where President Buchanan lived. Mr. Fries is a specialist in ferns and other decorative plants, of which he has some fine varieties, all in the best possible shape. He grows mums also, and is one of the largest bulb forcers in this section.

Third among those visited were B. Frank Barr & Co. Their carnations are starting splendidly. Matchless, Mrs. Ward, Benora, Delhi and White Ward are the principal varieties. The rose houses are full of good, thrifty plants, loaded with young, blooming wood. Ophelia is well thought of by them. Mums in great variety were in fine form.

Albert M. Herr's place was the next stop. This is where millions of geranium cuttings are raised annually. His immense houses of stock plants are a sight pleasant to look upon. Houses of Asparagus plumosus, in 2½-inch pots, were noted. Mr. Herr is rooting a fine stock of Buddleia Asiatica. This beautiful flower has a great future as a greenhouse cut flower.

Rudolph Nagel's establishment was inspected along with the rest. He is erecting two new houses and installing a large Kroeschell boiler. His early mums are nearly all cut. The principal varieties were Smith's Advance, Unaka and Golden Glow, all of which were grown to perfection. His Alice Salomon, Pink Gem and Chieftain, as well as a house of singles and pompons, are looking well. Geranium cuttings are one of his specialties.

The next call was at H. D. Rohrer's houses, on East Orange street, where the growth of Bonnaffon mums gives promise of a large cut. William Turner, Chieftain, Dolly Dimple and the Chadwicks are grown also. In carnations, Matchless, Enchantress Supreme, White Wonder, Alice and Sacrlet Wonder are grown, and indications point to a good cut of blooms. Orchid-flowering peas are well advanced. Beds of myosotis and Primula malacoides are in good shape.

A call was made at the greenhouses of the late George G. Goldbach. His Matchless and Mrs. Ward carnations looked well. Snapdragons, calla lilies, calendulas, sweet peas, violets and a house of Kaiserin roses, all give promise of a good cut of blooms throughout the season.

J. P. Siebold was the last grower visited. Rooted geranium cuttings are his main stock. His plants are in fine condition. H. K. R.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week ending October 23 was not quite up to expectations, until its close, at which time the usual Saturday strength materialized and the Sunday morning call absorbed everything of value except the chrysanthemums, with the surplus of which we must now reckon daily until Thanksgiving. In the suffrage parade, October 23, yellow mums were much in evidence, but growers must have had this event in mind, if the flood of yellow flowers in the market was an indication.

The present week opened with clear, cold weather and the fall season fairly started. Shipments of all kinds of seasonable flowers are rapidly increasing. A few chrysanthemums of exceptional size brought $4 and $5 per dozen, but $2.50 to $3 per dozen more accurately represents the value of the special blooms. From these prices down to 50 cents per dozen and even less sums up the gradations.

This week ends the dahlia season, the best year of its experience. Sweet peas are again arriving, the Spencers bringing fair prices. There are few high grade gardenias and these are quickly absorbed at fancy prices. The short-stemmed stock even is firm at higher rates than usual at this date. There is still a sufficiency of orchids and prices continue abnormally low for late October. Valley is abundant and can be bought at $2 to $3 per hundred. Longiflorum lilies are also down, the best last week selling as low as $6 per hundred. The New York market never has seen finer cosmos.

Violets are rapidly improving in quality and shipments grow heavier daily. The top price to date has been 50 cents, but a better violet season than usual is generally anticipated.

The shortage in carnations is over and the quality and size are much more attractive to buyers, but with twenty-five varieties of roses to pick from, and as many of chrysanthemums, the old-time prices for carnations seem to be unattainable. Blooms had to be large and perfect last week to command $3 per hundred.

Beauties must be perfect to hold the top quotations, with so many novelty roses now bidding for recognition and rapidly approaching their best in size and stem. With Key, Hadley, Hoosier Beauty, Radiance, Shawyer, Ward, Sunburst, Ophelia, Mock, Russell and Stanley all in good shape, it is hard to say which is the favorite.

Various Notes.

Flower shows this week at Red Bank, Madison and Glen Cove and next week at Oyster Bay, Tarrytown and New York make these the gala weeks of the fast waning autumn season. From November 3 to 7 the flower lovers of New York city will have a continuous opportunity, the American Institute exhibition running from November 3 to 5, and that of the New York Horticultural Society, at the Museum of Natural History, from November 4 to 7.

Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the American Dahlia Society, will give a stereopticon lecture before the Rosebank Garden Club, on Staten Island, on the afternoon of November 5.

Charles H. Totty, of Madison, will lecture on "Hardy Chrysanthemums," on the afternoon of November 1, at the rooms of the Country Life Permanent Exposition, above the waiting room of the Grand Central Terminal, on Forty-second street. Monthly flower shows from this date on will add interest and variety to this enterprise.

Max Schling says he has had twenty-one wedding decorations in the last eleven days.

G. E. M. Stumpp is at home from his summer enterprise at Southampton, L. I., where he has had a most prosperous season.

T. Murray, manager of the Tuxedo Park Association nursery, Tuxedo, N. J., was a recent visitor.

Frederick Zahn now is manager of Charles R. Jaeger's flower store at 2109 Seventh avenue, one of the best localities in upper New York.

most a duplicate of the headquarters at 119 West Twenty-eighth street. This concern had the misfortune last week to lose one of its valuable horses by drowning.

Madison avenue is fast becoming the retail florists' Mecca, three new stores having been opened in the last few weeks. The latest is that of William Kather, at 754. Mr. Kather formerly was with Wadley & Smythe and is a decorator of wide reputation.

New counters, iceboxes and all the usual facilities for an extensive business now are complete at the new store of Riedel & Meyer, Inc., at 48 West Twenty-eighth street.

Chairman Henshaw, of the transportation committee, states that there will be a special car for Cleveland on the New York Central, train leaving its station at 5:30 p. m. Tuesday, November 9. The fare is $25.38 round trip. It is probable that twenty or more will go. J. Austin Shaw.

The annual fall inspection tours of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers have again been arranged. The tour over Long Island will take place Friday, October 29. The party will start from the office of William H. Siebrecht, Jr., Queens Plaza Court building, Long Island City, at 9 a. m., and will travel in touring cars furnished by the members to visit the establishments in Long Island City, Woodside, Elmhurst, Middle Village, Flushing, Whitestone, Jamaica and Flatbush. The trip through New Jersey will take place Friday, November 5. Messrs. Zeller and Wagner are the committee which has the Long Island trip in charge, and Messrs. Fiesser and Schoelzel have charge of the Jersey trip.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

Business is better than the most sanguine expectations; in fact, it is positively brisk and encouraging. Delightful fall weather has set in, thus rendering firing easy. Outdoors the men are engaged in drawing sod and planting bulbs. Bulbs this season are a credit to the growers. If we could always get such stock without having to go to war it would be a much greater credit.

Valley has advanced in price to $4 for No. 1 quality and $3 for No. 2 quality. The demand keeps up. Beauties are plentiful and of good color, and the new varieties of roses are in large demand. Orchids were scarce last week, owing to the great demand from the large cities across the border, but Cattleya labiata and C. Trianæ will be plentiful again in a few days. Violets are in full crop and meet a ready sale at 50 cents per hundred, and mums are now beginning to arrive in large quantities.

Various Notes.

The last of a batch of 50,000 pteris from the Dale Estate was cleared out last week. The stock is better than any other ever grown at the Dale Estate.

As there is to be no flower show at Toronto this fall, the Ontario Horticultural Society's annual convention will be held in the Parliament building, Toronto, November 10 and 11.

The taxpayers of Georgetown, near Brampton, recently passed a by-law whereby a loan of $30,000 was made to the Glass Garden Builders' Co. for the purpose of erecting a factory in the town.

J. H. Dunlop and party visited the Dale Estate last week to view the greenhouses. Frank Dunlop leaves shortly to take a course at Cornell University. W. G. P.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The last fortnight has been ideal fall weather, rather warmer than normal, and with the disappearance of outdoor stock there has been a decidedly better tone to the market; in fact, all agree that we are having good business conditions, fully as good as before the war.

Roses continue plentiful and the quality is improving every week. Carnations are in full crop and the quality is good, although they still lack something in size. There are plenty of first-class chrysanthemums at last, but no surplus has developed as yet. There are practically no American Beauty roses on the market here at present. Orchids are fairly plentiful, but not so abundant that they will not clean up at $1 apiece. Orchids here mean cattleyas, for, although we see some good ones of other varieties at times, they do not sell, possibly because they have never been offered in sufficient numbers to acquaint the public with them. In general, prices, both wholesale and retail, are satisfactory; in fact, prices are rather better than in an average year.

Everyone seems to have plenty of valley and no one seems to be worrying about the future. There still are plenty of pips on hand to last for several weeks.

Those who handle the most Dutch bulbs report that business has been unusually good thus far this fall. We are told that some varieties are growing scarce already. The demand for tulips has been especially good. A few years ago tulips did not sell at all well here, as the early varieties bloom in this climate before they develop any stem to speak of. The introduction of the taller Darwins has brought the demand.

Various Notes.

The Joy Floral Co. has laid cement walks in all its greenhouses. It is a great improvement, as the walks are not only always dry to the feet of the workmen, but they make it much easier to roll the barrows when handling soil or fertilizer. This is a new departure for Nashville. The company is planning a new office building for next spring.

We note that Haury & Sons have been making an improved showing in their windows of late. We saw some fine large chrysanthemums at their place this week. This firm seems to be having exceptional success with the growing end this year.

Geny Bros. are handling a line of exceptionally beautiful aquariums. They are on stands that are about three feet tall and are so arranged that they hold pot plants as well as fish. One makes a good ornament in a store, and they are a good side line for the trade.

Joe Brown, of Lischey's Gardens, is beginning to improve his place again. Two years ago he thought he was going to die so soon that it was of no use to improve. He seems perfectly well again. F. B.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The last week has seen business go flat again, after a busy period of about two weeks' duration. However, some good orders have been placed for Halloween, for which a good supply of stock is promised. Saturday was the best day of the week and most of the stock was moved. There was a good quantity of funeral work. Weddings are not numerous and they are small affairs.

Stock has been good and fairly plentiful. Chrysanthemums are the chief sellers, in yellow, pink, lavender and white, and their quality is fine. Chrysoloras are especially good and sell splendidly. Quantities of roses are arriving daily. The new rose, Mrs. Hearst, is particularly well liked. Sunburst, Ward, Hoosier Beauty and Hadley are excellent and are purchased in preference to some of the older kinds. Carnations are improving, but the crop is not heavy. Easter lilies are good and sell fairly well. Valley is also good. Orchids and gardenias move slowly. A few sweet peas were in the market last week and sold well. Violets are making their first appearance and sell readily. Dahlias have been plentiful and of fine quality. Pansies are good, but the short stems prevent many sales. Mignonette, tuberoses, daisies and bouvardias complete the stock. Flowering plants are becoming more plentiful.

Various Notes.

Visitors last week included G. Reising, of L. Baumann & Co., Chicago; William Dykes, of Ed. Jansen, New York; a representative of the Manhattan Ribbon Co., New York, and E. F. Kennon, of the Climax Mfg. Co., Castorland, N. Y.

George B. Hart and George Cramer were in Buffalo, N. Y., last week on a business trip.

The Rochester Florists' Bowling Club met at the Elks' Club last week for practice previous to the Cleveland trip.

E. C. Armbrust was responsible for the decoration at the Powers hotel last week, the event being a donation for the Home of the Friendless. Large quantities of pink dahlias and pink and white cosmos were used. Business with Mr. Armbrust is excellent and he is well pleased with so good a beginning.

October 19 was Apple day in western New York. Scores of business houses made their windows a big attraction by the use of beautiful displays of apples. Among the florists taking part were Salter Bros., J. B. Keller Sons, H. E. Wilson and the Rochester Floral Co. H. E. Wilson did not enter the prize contest, but was awarded honorable mention. His window was artistically arranged with a huge horn of plenty, the mouth of which was full of choice apples. Several baskets of specimen apples also were shown, and there were baskets and vases of large yellow and white chrysanthemums, with a background of palms and ferns. Crowds of people visited this display.

A song has been written and set to music by one of our florists, Max Pawbezek. Music and flowers are a good combination. It is said that the song is getting quite popular.

Albert Rayton is shipping some extra fine yellow chrysanthemums, which find a ready sale.

William Galentine, of Greece, N. Y., is cutting a splendid lot of dahlias, which include some fine specimens. Vick & Hill, of Barnard, are also shipping a large quantity.

E. R. Fry will open a new store on West avenue, at the corner of Brown and Genesee streets, as soon as the necessary alterations are completed.

Hugo Teute is growing a fine lot of Golden Chadwick mums. He expects to cut 1,000 blooms from a 125-foot bench. Most of his stock is for Thanksgiving trade.

S. W. Morgan, of Le Roy, N. Y., and John Ward, of Mumford, N. Y., were in this city last week.

James Vick's Sons report an extra heavy call for all kinds of bulbs. Their bulb sales exceed those of last year by a good margin. H. J. H.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Buying conditions were exceedingly trying last week, for business was remarkably good and there was a great scarcity of roses, carnations and, in fact, almost all kinds of flowers. Chrysanthemums were the only flowers that could be had in any quantity. In these there were many new arrivals. Foremost among them were Monrovia, Pacific, Touset, Unaka and Polly Rose. Carnations were extremely scarce, but the few blooms available were of good quality. Roses were more plentiful. Mrs. Russell, Sunburst, Shawyer and Ophelia are good sellers. The smaller varieties of roses are in good demand for corsages, many of which are sold for the early dances.

There were several killing frosts last week and there is not a particle of outdoor stock left on the market. Heavy firing is being done in the greenhouses these days, especially at night, when it is extremely cold. The growers are beginning to receive their Dutch bulbs and word has been received by one grower that the azaleas have already arrived in New York.

Easter lilies and rubrum lilies are in good supply. A few snapdragons are seen on the market and the first violets are making their appearance. Valley and orchids are meeting with a good sale.

Various Notes.

At the real estate banquet held at the Commercial Club several florists donated flowers for table decorations. They were F. J. Knecht, the Flick Floral Co. and W. J. & M. S. Vesey.

Miss Helen Patten, of the Patten Flower Shop, Toledo, O., spent last week in this city, a guest at the Flick residence. Miss Patten is boosting the Toledo flower show, to be held the first week in November. Several retailers are planning to make exhibits of table decorations, wedding bouquets, etc. Miss Patten reports that business is all that could be wished for this fall and that she is looking forward to a good season.

The F. J. Knecht greenhouses are making a fine showing. In the chrysanthemum houses, Chrysolora and October Frost are splendid. One house of Russell roses looks promising. Shawyer and Sunburst were in a prime condition. This concern has 50,000 feet of glass and only has been in existence a few years. Frank Knecht is planning to take in both the Toledo and Cleveland flower shows in November.

A number of representatives of the Flower Growers' Corporation, of Detroit, were visitors last week. R. F.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

The weather at present is unseasonably warm, which is a great help to florists who still have outdoor work to do. The supply of cut flowers is more plentiful than that of last week. Choice mums can be had from $3.50 to $20 per hundred. This stock is excellent for this time of the year. Roses, especially Killarney, Richmond and Aaron Ward, are fine and sell at $3 per hundred and up. Carnations now have longer and stiffer stems and those with larger flowers bring $2 per hundred for firsts and $2.50 for fancy. American Beauties are scarce.

Club Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Toledo Florists' Club, Elmer Smith, of Adrian, Mich., exhibited several varieties of chrysanthemums. These choice blooms were later auctioned off and the proceeds given to Mr. Smith.

Much enthusiasm was shown by the retailers over the fall show and a great success is expected. Nearly every retail florist is preparing a table decoration for the show and, besides, each and every one is planning an exhibit to please and inspire the public. All chrysanthemums and cut flowers exhibited will be shown in fine ivory-finished china vases, thus adding greatly to the attractiveness of each exhibit.

The board of directors of the show has secured many costly reels of motion pictures to be shown during the show, treating of the care and culture of mums, bulbs and all kinds of growing plants.

While George Bayer was presiding, thieves entered his home on Fulton street and ransacked the entire house, but did not take anything of importance.

Various Notes.

J. L. Schiller has exceptional success with Jerusalem cherries. Mr. Schiller is an expert in this line and finds a ready sale for novelty plants such as these.

Feniger, the Adams street florist, has had a large electric sign installed above his place. The sign represents a vase about six feet in height containing a cluster of American Beauties.

Jacob Helmer, with the Patten Flower Shop, is rejoicing over the arrival of a baby girl, while Albert Lehman, with Schramm Bros., is happy over the arrival of a baby boy.

Paul Timm, of Monroe street, is cutting choice chrysanthemums.

The city has finished the erection of a 5-house range for Jacob Fischer, of Central avenue. The city agreed to build him modern greenhouses for his old ones, which stood on the ground wanted by the city for the new boulevard.

George Bayer & Son are erecting two greenhouses, each 25x180 feet. They will be devoted to violets. G. B. S.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Flowers still are scarce and high-priced, though arriving in slightly larger quantities and greater variety. The larger chrysanthemums are beginning to make their appearance and the quality is considerably improved. The prices are high, though a little more moderate than before. It is hard to get good roses and the prices in the wholesale market are consequently high; nothing worth looking at by the first-class florist can be secured at less than 8 cents each. Valley also is high, the best costing about 4 cents a spray. Carnations are only a little more plentiful. The better blooms bring about 4 cents each. It is probable that the great amount of cloudy weather in the early part of last week had a tendency to keep the flowers from developing. The greenhouses are filled with fine, budded plants, and when they are fully in bearing there will be no dearth of carnations.

There still are some good dahlias in the market, but they are not plentiful. Asters have disappeared. A few sweet violets have come in. A considerable number of fern jars are being sold. Cosmos is plentiful and is about the only cheap, pretty flower. Branches of colored oak leaves are arriving in quantity from the Adirondack mountains. There have been several October weddings within the last ten days, as well as considerable funeral work. There were several warm days last week, but these were followed by cold weather that threatens such flowers as still remain in the open.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Essex County Florists' Club was held last week in the Krueger Auditorium. The business meeting was followed by refreshments, to which all the members did justice. It was decided to hold a chrysanthemum show. Several members were added to the committee previously appointed, and the full committee will have charge of the arrangements, including the selection of the place and date. The members added to the committee were Henry Hornecker, Fred Philips and Edward Jacobi.

Next year the city of Newark will celebrate the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the city and is planning one of the most elaborate programs ever carried out by any city in this country. The Essex County Florists' Club wants to have some prominent part in this celebration, and it was thought that a fine chrysanthemum show this fall, given in a central location and widely advertised, would place the club in a better position to do something worth while next year.

Various Notes.

Henry A. Strobell, at 931 Broad street, has had four large weddings of late, besides considerable funeral work. The counter trade is reported as slowly but surely increasing.

Philips Bros. have sold their old delivery automobile and purchased a new one, with several novel features that make it unusually attractive. Business is reported as greatly improved and is considered fair for this time of the year.

Fred P. Wolfinger has had a large amount of funeral work during the last few weeks and has recently had three large weddings. The fall work is opening well and the outlook for the future is good.

August Begerow reports business better, but still a little slow.

The flower and plant department at the new store of Goerke & Co., at Broad and Cedar streets, reports business as highly satisfactory. Last week many of the Newark stores observed "Shop in Newark" week. Because of this a number of bargains were offered. Special prices were made on potted ferns and fern dishes.

A feature of the window display at the store of George Penek, 637 Broad street, last week was a cage of "waltzing" mice. Their antics attracted a large crowd continuously and served to call attention to the beautiful display of flowers in the window.

Improved business is reported at the store of Chris. Penek, 173 Market street.

Strobell & Co., 895 Broad street, report that business is improving, but is spotty—active one week and quiet the next. Good business is expected, however, during the fall and winter. Potted fern jars were a feature of the display in one of the windows last week.

The Clinton Hill Improvement Association set aside two Saturdays, October 23 and 30, for the purpose of planting bulbs in school enclosures, parks and open grass plots, and several thousands of bulbs were planted on the first date by the citizens, with the coöperation of the school children. R. B. M.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business continues to hold up well, in spite of the large supply of stock. Mums are arriving in much larger quantities, Chrysolora holding the stage in yellow. White is plentiful in the medium grades, but few good pinks are to be had. Several orders for pinks were unfilled last week. Roses have increased in quantity and improved in quality. They experience a good demand. Carnations are of good quality and sell well. There is an oversupply of greens.

The clear, cool weather of the last two weeks showed its effect on dahlias by bringing them out in surprising quantities and of really fine quality. The supply of dahlias, while as large as at any time during the season, was moved at fair prices, but there will be no more dahlias in the market for another year, as the heavy frost of October 23 destroyed all outdoor stock, such as dahlias, cannas, etc.

Various Notes.

P. B. Welsh is shipping some good Amorita and Halliday mums to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. from his place at Glen Morris.

In addition to excellent mums, Charles Siegwart has been cutting good cattleyas, which find a ready sale. The specimen chrysanthemum plants which he intends to enter in the show of November 16 to 20 are certain to find places among the winners.

Gustav Lotze, Jr., has a new yellow seedling mum of his own origination, of which he may be justly proud. Some of the blooms sent to the C. S. A. committees at Philadelphia scored ninety points on the commercial scale and eighty-nine points on the exhibition scale.

Miss Altinia Van Reuth, aged 70 years, died at the home of her brother, Lucien Van Reuth, Harford road, October 22. The trade extend their sympathies to Mr. Van Reuth.

Stevenson Bros. are sending in good Ward roses to the Leo Niessen Co.

W. F. E.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

The Market.

The wholesale market for cut flowers is again active and the cash receipts for the month will surpass any previous year. The summer season greatly exceeded that of any other year. The days get pretty warm yet, but the temperature has been low at night and the boilers have been fired for a month. Never before has rain been so scarce. Due to this fact the carnation plants were not brought into the greenhouses from the fields as early as usual, awaiting a storm and cloudy weather. For the last two months any kind of a carnation could be disposed of. The best carnations are being sold at $3 per hundred and the seconds at $2 per hundred. The rose crop is fine and there has been no shortage as yet, except on novelties, such as Ophelia and Hadley. The price reaches as high as $10 per hundred on these. The stems of the roses are straight and firm, the majority of them being classed as medium grade. The call for roses of late has been large and all demands have been satisfied. Mrs. Taft is going to make a big hit this season. Shawyer, as usual, is preferred in pink roses. Killarney is good, but it looks as if it would not be long before it will not be grown at all. Hadley and Hoosier Beauty are preferred to Richmond. Hillingdon does not move so well and it will be replaced by Ophelia next year. Beauties were quite scarce before the chrysanthemum season began, but there are plenty of them now, and not much of a demand.

All the stores are well supplied with chrysanthemums, but the local growers have been short and could not keep the retailers in stock, which caused them to resort to the California market. The earlier varieties, October Frost and Polly Rose, are gone. Chrysolora and Pacific Supreme are heaviest on the market at present and will soon be followed by Bonnaffon, Timothy Eaton, Chieftain and others.

Plants do not move well at present. The potted chrysanthemums and Boston and Whitmani ferns prevail.

Various Notes.

George Wray has reopened a flower store with the Keith O'Brien people, at the corner of State street and Broadway. By all indications, he will have a good business for the coming season.

William Sorensen, of the Intermountain Floral Co., has placed the first sweet peas on the market. He also has a fine stock of valley.

The Salt Lake Floral Co. is having good success with orchids.

The Rieben Floral Co. is growing roses.

The Porter-Walton Co. says that deliveries of hardy trees and shrubs have begun and that the funeral work has been good.

Utah Notes.

The Miller Floral Co., of Farmington, says conditions were never better for a successful year's business. Large shipments of palms have been received from Henry A. Dreer, Poehlmann Bros. Co. and the C. C. Pollworth Co., to place in the new greenhouse which has just been erected for the enlargement of the plant department.

Elizabeth Huth, who runs the Flower Shop in Ogden, says that funeral work has been heavy and business is good.

O. Lindgren, of Bountiful, has added four new greenhouses to his range of glass.

S. B. Eckstein, the designer whom the Miller Floral Co. obtained in New York, met with a little ill luck, the house where he resided being burned, but all the furniture was got out in time to escape the fire.

A. Silvester, who ran a flower store in Park City, has gone to Rexburg, Idaho, to open a flower shop. O. F.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The balmy autumn weather last week had a good effect on business, aiding the wholesalers in disposing of the largely increased supply of flowers. A clean-up, however, can hardly be reported, as mums have now assumed their usual importance and other cut stock has only an ordinary demand.

In mums, all the early varieties are now crowding the market. Some extra fine blooms were noted and these brought $3 per dozen. There are plenty of small white chrysanthemums, which sell well for funeral work. All varieties of roses are arriving. Beauties are all that could be desired in both quality and quantity. Prices have gone down somewhat, but remain firm on the extra fancy grades. Carnations are arriving in large quantities, with the ordinary grades greatly exceeding the fancy. Prices run from $5 to $20 per thousand. Violets, too, are plentiful, but the quality is not up to standard. Orchids are only in fair supply and meet with a good sale. Easter lilies are fine and bring $12.50 per hundred. Valley holds its regular price and the demand equals the supply. The quality is of the best. There was an excellent demand for asparagus last week. Wild smilax, too, came in for its share of the demand.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association will hold its monthly meeting November 3 at the Eleven Mile House. A large amount of important business will be transacted. Secretary Joseph Deutschmann is sending out strong notices to the members.

The Foster Floral Co., at Seventh and Olive streets, will move this week to Sixth and Locust streets.

The Schoenle Floral Co. is sporting a new auto delivery car, which Mrs. Schoenle says was much needed in this fast growing business. The display of cut mums at the store last week was quite attractive.

Werner Bros., who supply this market with roses of fine quality, are also sending in an excellent cut of valley, which commands top prices.

Among the best cut mums last week were those consigned to the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. by the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co. These were sold at $4 per dozen.

Messrs. Kalisch, Boerm, Sanders and Waldman, florists along Delmar boulevard, had attractive window displays last week. They report a big improvement in business since the mum season opened.

There is to be a big display of chrysanthemums at the Missouri Botanical Garden this week. Max Schiller says the plants are in fine shape and the show should have great drawing powers.

C. E. De Wever is out of the hospital and seems to be fully recovered. He is supplying the trade with some extra fine Boston ferns.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. has finished its new private office in the front part of the salesroom.

Fred H. Weber, at Maryland and Boyle avenues, says fall business has opened in great shape. He has a number of wedding receptions and dinner parties booked for this week.

Walter Mott, representing Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y., spent a few days here last week calling on the trade.

George Angermueller, who has a large shipping trade in the southwestern part of the state, says the orders for supplies last week were splendid. The cut flower department, too, was busy.

Mullanphy Florists are preparing to move this week into new quarters at Eighth and Locust streets. The new store is quite attractive in appearance.

Chas. Young, of the C. Young & Sons Co., says tulips and hyacinths have had a big sale so far this season. The new range of greenhouses at Olivette is completed and the houses are now being stocked up. Walter Young, the store manager, says he has every reason to believe this will be a prosperous season for his firm.

It looks as if the Kirkwood growers are going to have a heavy cut of mums this season, from the way the daily supply of early varieties is coming in. They say the late varieties are showing fine prospects.

Phil. Goebel, Jr., says his roller skates, for which he traded his Panama hat, come in handy now. It is said Mr. Goebel is the most graceful skater at the Webster rink, especially for a heavyweight.

W. J. Pilcher is cutting some of his Mazzura violets, but it takes cold weather to put fine color and stem into this variety. Mr. Pilcher has had great success with his roses. His Kaiserin and Hadley have fine, long stems, and Milady, Russell, Ward and Killarney promise well for the season.

Adolph Brix, who has charge of the floral arrangements at the war relief bazaar at the Coliseum this week, says the local retailers, growers and wholesalers have been generous with donations of cut stock and plants for the flower booths.

The trade extends its sympathy to O. C. May, of Kirkwood, in the loss of his mother, who died last week. The funeral was held October 24 and was attended by many of the florists.

A meeting of the officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club will be held October 28 at the home of Frank Windler, 4245 Virginia avenue, to arrange for a working program for the next club meeting. The spring flower show committee, the transportation committee and the carnation society committee have been invited to meet with them, so as to arrange final reports for the November meeting of the club.

J. J. B.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

The market shows a decided change. The stock was insufficient to meet the demand during part of last week.

Beauties are now of excellent quality and especially good in color. Other varieties of roses continue about the same, all selling at good prices. Ophelia sells as well at present as any. There is a large call for Mrs. Russell.

Chrysanthemums are more abundant than anything else. While some stock is excellent, there also are a large number of second and third grade mums. Pompons made their first appearance and have found a good demand. They are selling well. Carnations are steadily increasing. They are much better in size and length, and especially good in color. The Ward carnation sells as well as any. Violets are finding a good market. Lily of the valley is rather scarce and is selling at $6 per hundred. Orchids, too, are selling well. Snapdragons are arriving in small lots. Pansies and calendulas are quite plentiful.

Various Notes.

W. J. Palmer & Son report a busy week in funeral work for some prominent families. Among the pieces were a huge blanket consisting of 2,000 lily of the valley and 400 White Killarney roses, a casket cross of 100 orchids and 1,000 valley, and several wreaths of orchids and valley.

Galley Bros., of Gardenville, will open a flower shop on Genesee street November 1.

David Scott, of Corfu, has planted a large number of Golden Spur bulbs. As yet he has not cut many carnations, but he expects to be cutting steadily all winter.

The Buffalo Florists' Bowling Club, the championship trophy winners, met October 19 at Ordell's alleys for a farewell game with Joseph Streit. Though they are losing one of their best players, they are confident of holding their own with most of the teams. The scores made October 19 were as follows:

Cleveland, O.—The McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, announces that William Q. Potter has purchased its Cleveland branch and from October 21 will conduct it for himself, entirely independent of the Pittsburgh store, with which he has severed his connections. Mr. Potter has made a success of the Cleveland venture.

OBITUARY

Geo. Economopoulos.

George Economopoulos, one of the proprietors of the Alpha Floral Co., at Chicago and at Des Moines, Ia., died of ptomaine poisoning at 6 a. m. October 27. Mr. Economopoulos became quite ill the afternoon of October 25 and was taken that night to the University hospital. All treatment, however, failed and he sank rapidly. Only about 42 years of age, he was well known in the trade.

Joseph F. Smith.

Joseph F. Smith, of Norwich, Conn., died at his home at 409 Washington street, October 17, death resulting from a complication of diseases. Mr. Smith was born in Germany, December 6, 1838. He came to this country when 13 years of age and resided at Philadelphia until 1865, when he moved to Norwich and became gardener for Joseph Ripley. In 1871 he started in business for himself at Norwich, which business he conducted up to the time of his death. He is survived by his wife, four daughters and five sons, Joseph J., of Middletown, Conn.; Edward A., of New London, Conn.; Frederick W., George A. and Frank, all of Norwich.

Henry Baldinger.

Henry Baldinger, who was classed as one of the pioneer florists of Pittsburgh, Pa., died at his home October 21. Mr. Baldinger was in his eighty-second year. He was apprenticed to the trade in Germany, where he was born, but came to this country when a young man. He first worked as a private gardener at Baltimore, Md., and was later associated with Peter Henderson. He moved to Pittsburgh to enter the employ of Jeremiah Knox, who made the Jacinda strawberry famous. After the death of Jeremiah Knox, Mr. Baldinger went into business for himself at what was then Knoxville. He conducted a flower stand in the Pittsburgh market up to the time of his death. Although for many years almost an invalid, Mr. Baldinger was able to look after several small greenhouses. He is survived by two daughters and two sons. Clarke.

Trimble, O.—Clyde Haskins is back at his post after a two months' pleasure trip to San Francisco and other Pacific coast cities.

Des Moines, Ia.—H. E. Lozier is putting $1,000 into his display window; that is, he is spending that much for remodeling and outfitting the window. It is Mr. Lozier's ambition to have the finest window in the state for displaying florists' wares.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—A bill has been filed in the Chancery Court seeking an equitable distribution of the interests in the Karsten flower store, at 614 Cypress street. The complainants are William Karsten and Mrs. J. Shell, his sister, and the defendants are John, Charles and Matilda Karsten. The establishment has been operated for a number of years as a family affair, with no definite agreement as to ownership. The bill seeks to separate the interests in the business through a receivership.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1915: President, Patrick Welch, Boston; vice-president, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo

Officers for 1916: President, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; vice-president, R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex. Secretary and treasurer as before.

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THERE are plenty of good things for florists to talk about besides the faults and shortcomings of others in the same line as themselves.

IF it turns out that the valley pips of 1915 crop get through the blockade all right, there are buyers who will wonder why they took hold of Romans so strongly.

THERE are a lot of florists, selling from their greenhouses and lacking a cost system, who are charging too little. Sooner or later they realize it, but usually it is too late.

IT is interesting to note that the Mrs. Russell rose is making good on the Pacific coast and in the south, as well as in the middle west, reminding one of the old saying about the prophet.

WILL COME AGAIN.

Sometimes it takes a surprising amount of persuasion to induce a man with stock to sell to try the logical method of telling the trade—through an ad in The Review—but, once tried, it scarcely ever is necessary to urge that man further. He comes again of his own accord, as soon as ever he can. Like this:

This was our first trial of advertising in The Review and we are pleased with the result. You will hear from us again as soon as we have stock to offer.—Henry E. Richardson, Woonsocket, S. D., October 17, 1915.

There are several wholesale plantsmen, especially in the east, who could profit by the Woonsocket florist's experience.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

THREE YEARS.

Hack, William, Indianapolis, Ind.
Bezdek, W., Cedar Rapids, Ia.

TWO YEARS.

Jones, Wm., South Hamilton, Mass.
Gove the Florist, Burlington, Vt.
Miller, John F., McHenry, Ill.
Flanders, Pearl, Ann Arbor, Mich.
Lippold, F. O., Reading, Pa.
Schwab, H., Zanesville, O.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

PHOTOGRAPHS WANTED.

The Review wishes to receive several good, sharp photographs of Halloween window decorations. To be useful, the reflection in the glass must be avoided by night photography or other device, so that the details of the decoration will be apparent. For such photographs as meet its requirements The Review will defray the cost of the florist. If you have a good special Halloween window, have it photographed tonight.

WHY BUSINESS IS GOOD.

The government crop reports show the 1915 harvests to be the largest ever—and we all know that good crops mean good business for florists of the middle west.

Now comes another department of the government with a report of exports, mostly manufactures—and we all know brisk business for eastern manufacturing towns means good business for florists there.

According to the U. S. Department of Commerce, "exports during the week ending October 16 amounted to the astonishing total of $73,694,600. This is the highest record established for any week since the outbreak of war in Europe. It exceeded by more than $5,945,000 the exports for the week ending October 2, which was the previous high record. The report shows that the exports since the beginning of October have been extremely large, promising to break the monthly record for the war period thus far.

"The imports during the week amounted to $29,782,000, the smallest recorded since the week ending September 11. As a result, the balance in our favor amounted to $43,912,500.

WHERE'S THE PUNCH?

In half a dozen cities, from Boston to Denver, those who call themselves publicity specialists now are urging the trade to buy and distribute stock advertising literature of more or less pretension—calendars, mailing cards, booklets, and what not; there is as great a variety as there are manufacturers of the material. Some of the work is extremely fine when judged by artistic standards and prices are held fairly reasonable by printing in quantity and selling to a considerable number of florists, one in a town, merely striking in the name and address of the buyer in a space left for that purpose. Going on the theory, often recommended to retail florists, that any advertising is better than no advertising, all this artistic stock literature is good, some of it extremely attractive, and sure to get a look. But the question that should be asked of himself by every intending buyer is, "What are the selling qualities, especially the selling qualities for me?" The fact is, most of this pretty stock printing has no direct sales power and those who expect direct returns are disappointed. If the florist thoroughly understands that he is paying a certain sum for general publicity, all well and good; he then can judge his purchase on that basis. If it does not cost too much, it is well worth doing.

NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER.

Weekly weather forecast, issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., for the week beginning Wednesday, October 27, 1915:

For the Region of the Great Lakes—Partly cloudy October 27 and 28 will be followed by rain October 29 or 30, and probably by fair weather at the end of the week. It will be warmer October 28 and 29 and somewhat cooler during the second half of the week.

For the Upper Mississippi Valley and Plains States—There will be rain October 28 or 29 in the northwest, extending October 29 and 30 into the central plains states and the upper Mississippi valley, probably followed again by fair weather October 31. Temperatures will rise early in the week and should again fall October 29 and 30, but no unusually low temperatures are expected.

For the Ohio Valley and Tennessee—Fair weather for about three days will be followed by unsettled weather with rain October 30 or 31 and again by fair weather November 1 and 2. It will be somewhat cooler October 27, followed by rising temperature October 28 and 29, and again by falling temperature toward the end of the week.

For South Atlantic and East Gulf States—With the exception of local showers October 27, generally fair weather will prevail during the week, with seasonable temperatures.

For the West Gulf States—Generally fair weather, with seasonable temperature, is indicated during the week.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The Chicago market is in a decidedly erratic condition. The end of last week saw a rather short market, with good demand. The opening of this week revealed an easier supply and an appreciable falling off in demand. This variation in the demand, however, was only transitory. The quality of the stock received is, on the whole, quite satisfactory. As to the volume of the coming week's business, there is no uneasiness, for a large number of advance orders for All Saints' day have already been booked.

Although nothing is positively short, there is no surplus of roses. There are enough of them, however, to fill orders without substitution. Russell, as a matter of course, leads, with the other newer roses next in request. Beauties are still reveling in excellent quality and urgent demand.

Good carnations are much more plentiful than they were last week, but they are not more than sufficient to fill orders. Stems are a good length and color is satisfactory. A few hundred outdoor asters got into the market the first of this week and caused no little comment, but this is unquestionably the last measure of their swan song. Daisies are scarce enough to be picked up at once, and sweet peas are becoming a noticeable factor. There is a small quantity of cut cyclamen and mignonette on the market, but as yet no great demand for these flowers has been manifested. Pansies also have made their appearance. Violets, both double and single, are becoming more plentiful and already the street venders have them.

Easter lilies and rubrums continue to be good property. The supply of valley is again balancing demand.

Chrysanthemums are plentiful and the range of choice is sufficiently large to permit satisfying the most varied tastes. Quality is much better than heretofore, as the mid-season sorts are in. Pompons are abundant in every color and meet with a ready sale.

Greens continue to move, but not hurriedly.

A Gladiolus Deal.

A deal of more than usual interest was consummated last week, when C. S. Clausen and A. B. Bonvallet acquired the entire stock of Gladiolus Myrtle and also the remaining stock of Gladiolus Mrs. Frank Pendleton, Jr., in the hands of A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind. The variety Myrtle has been on this market as a cut flower for two or three years, but has not been disseminated. Pendleton is in the hands of several growers, in limited quantities. A number of offers have been made Mr. Kunderd for Myrtle, but none he would accept until the present. No statement is forthcoming as to the number of bulbs secured, or the price, but it is known that eight barrels of bulbs were at once shipped the purchasers at Wichert, Ill., and arrived there with a declared valuation of $2,500, much to the excitement

Boxwood

Quality is of great consequence in Boxwood as well as flowers.

October Business.

With few exceptions October has been an excellent month for the wholesalers, most of whom were able to figure up, October 23, that they had done more business than in the whole of October last year, which was the month in which this market felt the worst effects of the unsettlement that followed the outbreak of the war. In most cases October sales are expected not only to show a big increase over last year, but to compare favorably with the best previous October, making this the best October on record. But it has been a poor month for those who have come to rely on purchasing a considerable part of the stock used to fill shipping orders.

Budlong to Move.

The wholesale cut flower house of J. A. Budlong concluded, October 26, negotiations for space in the new Le Moyne building. The new location, which is secured by an advantageous lease, expiring April 30, 1921, is an L-shaped space extending from the Wabash avenue front to the Lake street side of the building, with entrances on both streets. Philip C. Schupp, manager, says possession will be taken about November 8, with a full complement of new fixtures and every up-to-the-minute appliance. The new address will be the southwest corner of Wabash and Lake. The building may now be considered a wholesale flower center. Other tenants are the A. L. Randall Co., E. C. Amling Co., Bassett & Washburn and the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

Grading has begun for a large addition to the glass of the A. F. Amling Co., Maywood. Otto H. Amling states that the range under contemplation is about 200,000 feet of glass, to be ready for early planting in 1916, but that details are not yet worked out.

October 22 the store located at 23 South Crawford avenue and known as Clark's Flower Shop became the property of C. L. Achembach. Mr. Achembach was for several years connected with the Flower Shop, Racine, Wis. He will conduct the business under the style of the Crawford Flower Shop, as it is located in the Crawford theater building. He will be assisted by his brother, H. E. Achembach.

By way of diversifying his occupation, H. C. Wullbrandt, 5315 West Madison street, has gone to his Georgia place to harvest a crop of pecans.

Two of Elmer D. Smith's new chrysanthemums were before the local C. S. A. examining committee October 23. The committee consists of N. J. Wietor, George Asmus and W. E. Tricker. It is in session each Saturday at the store of Wietor Bros.

A most attractive Halloween window has been arranged by the Atlas Floral Co., in which a rail fence, cornfield, autumn leaves and most artfully disposed jack-o'-lanterns figure. The lighting of the lanterns is, of course, red and by a continual flashing produces a most weird effect.

An automobile belonging to Will Kral, brother of Frank Kral, 1907 South Halsted street, was stolen October 24 and returned two days later. There is no clew to the identity of the thieves.

At last the office force of Bassett & Washburn is located in its new quarters, which are complete in every detail.

Miss Mabel Curran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Curran, 2909 Archer avenue, was married to Charles Quinlan in St. Bridget's church the morning of October 27.

sine has been added to Peter Reinberg's string of automobiles. Counting the truck that hauls the stock in from the greenhouses, he now has four cars.

Setting the sidewalk skylights level with the walks has made a great improvement in downtown Chicago, one of the flower stores especially benefited being that of John Mangel. He always has a good display and pedestrians now may stop before his window without blocking traffic or being compelled to mount steps to get out of the way.

The Mrs. Moorfield Storey and Champ Weiland roses were used in making up corsages to feature in certain pictures to be used by the publicity committee of the fall flower show in the daily and Sunday papers. John Risch, of Weiland & Risch, in speaking of future rose growing, expressed the opinion that the grower who adheres strictly to Killarney and its ilk will find himself left behind. The Russell and the other newer varieties now have the demand. And if one is to make the most possible out of rose growing he must grow at least a fair proportion of those varieties that are new and in special demand.

After an illness of several weeks and a sojourn in the German hospital on the north side, George Perdikas is again able to get down to his Wabash avenue store.

The second week of this month Zech & Mann did as much business as they did during the first two weeks of October a year ago, according to Allie Zech, who has a way of sawing wood and saying little.

November 1 will see the removal of the Venetian Flower Shop, 15 East Washington street, from the basement to the main floor.

Work on the five new houses of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove, is being rushed with all speed to make room for the ever-growing plant department, for in addition to the stock already crowding its allotment of space, an importation of 6,000 azaleas from Belgium has arrived. The crotons that are to be used for exhibition purposes at the flower show are fine.

The blackboard bulletins in the salesroom of Kyle & Foerster are not only instructive but ornamental of late as the result of an application of colored chalks and a truly artistic hand.

After closing their country home at The Grove, northwest of Chicago, the Kennicott family, Mrs. Flint Kennicott, her daughter and H. B. Kennicott, of Kennicott Bros. Co., are living at 4021 Calumet avenue. January 1 Mrs. Kennicott and her daughter will go to their Florida home.

October 22 A. L. Randall and family returned from their gladiolus farm in Michigan, where they spent the summer. MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business is steadily improving from day to day and, taking this condition as a criterion, it seems that the trade will have a banner season. The retailers are busy, and it is not all funeral work, either. The wholesalers' greatest trouble is to take care of orders satisfactorily, but as the growers promise an increase in the quantity of stock soon, this state of affairs will be over in a short time.

Roses may be somewhat more plentiful, but there has been little increase in the total supply. There seem to be plenty of long stems, but as the bulk of the orders are for short stock, quite a little trouble is experienced in supplying the trade with their requirements. The quality is good, and the receipts are cleaning up quickly each day. Carnations are quite a bit more plentiful; in fact, the supply has increased to such an extent that all orders can be taken care of. There is no surplus, however. Although prices have dropped a little, the stock still moves at good figures. The fine weather of the last few days has been largely responsible for the increased cut and has kept the quality up to standard. Violets are coming in more heavily every day and their quality is steadily improving. They are now a factor on the market, although the supply still is light. There are some exceptionally fine orchids on the market each day. They are moving well.

The mum supply shows little change. The quality of the mums is good and they are moving nicely. The late varieties are not in as yet, and there may be a slight break between the early and late crops on this item. Valley has become more plentiful and is in fine shape. This makes it somewhat easier to take care of the heavy demand for this stock. Lilies are about equal to the demand, and the prices on them are kept down to some extent on account of the large quantity of mums.

Various Notes.

October 22 F. H. Holton made a trip to Racine and Kenosha in his new car. He was accompanied by G. Pohl, W. R. Schroeder, N. Zweifel and J. G. Heitman. The trip was a pleasant one, but Mr. Holton was relieved of $18.65 at Racine by a judge, at the instigation of a guardian of the speedway. Mr. Holton says the expense in itself did not amount to much, but he does not like to have it taken from him and get nothing in return. After driving a car in and about Milwaukee for about seven years, it remained for the small, but enterprising, town of Racine to garner in the fruits of his first offense.

C. B. Whitnall, an eloquent speaker, will address the members of the Milwaukee Florists' Club at the regular meeting Thursday, November 4. The subject, "The Garden City," undoubt-

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market eased perceptibly during the week ending October 27. There was less activity in the shops, with a larger quantity of flowers to draw from. Values fell in all the staple varieties, without exception. The frost of October 23 and 24 destroyed the dahlias beyond hope of recovery, the wholesalers assert. They believe that the dahlias received October 27 have closed the season for that flower. A few were received on that day, but not in sufficient quantities to amount to anything. Chrysanthemums are in larger supply. Alice Salomon, Early Snow and a few Early Frost are the best whites; Chrysolora, Robert Halliday and belated Golden Glow are the best yellows; Pacific Supreme is the best pink. Choice stock has receded to from 50 cents to $1 per dozen. There are more flowers of ordinary grade offered than during the last fortnight. Pompons from outdoors have arrived in quantity, while a few of the fine indoor-grown blooms are now available. Carnations have suffered from three causes—less business, larger receipts and competition with the dahlia. The net result is a decidedly lower price on all grades. Roses, too, have fallen, except in the case of fancy stock and novelties. These are the sorts for the coming-out teas, where the best of everything is wanted. Both valley and Easter lilies are in demand at lower prices. Asparagus plumosus suffers from the competition with autumn foliage, which is now at its height. Double violets, both the bright blue Marie Louise and the paler Lady Campbell, have arrived. Snapdragon is coming in more freely, although it is hardly a staple flower as yet.

Current Events.

Every member of the National Flower Show committee of the Society of American Florists who was here last week worked hard to further the interests of the show. Those present were Chairman George Asmus, of Chicago; Adolph Farenwald, of Roslyn, Pa.; William F. Gude, of Washington, D. C.; William F. Kasting, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Thomas Roland, of Nahant, Mass.; Patrick Welch, of Boston, and Secretary John Young, of New York. They were met by the chiefs of the local committees and by influential members of the trade in this city in several meetings. The result was decided progress in the preliminary arrangements for the great event. The most important of these, or, at least, the matter that gave most anxiety to all, was the advertising. For no matter how splendidly a show is staged, it cannot be considered successful unless it is well attended. W. F. Therkildson, who is advertising manager for W. Atlee Burpee & Co., is chairman of the committee on publicity. Mr. Therkildson has taken hold of his task with vigor and, with his committee, has mapped out a plan of action that promises well. So much pleased was the national committee with Mr. Therkildson's idea that it increased the advertising appropriation from $1,500 to $5,000, in order that nothing might be wanting to thoroughly advertise the show. Posters of great size are to appear in favored places, both in this city and elsewhere.

Window cards will be used freely. About 250,000 Red Cross stamps of pleasing design and moderate cost will be distributed among those interested, to be used on their stationery, while newspaper notices on any subject pertaining to horticulture will appear almost daily, if possible, as the time for the show approaches. It is intended to make the program a feature, though this expense, it is hoped, will be paid by the advertising it contains. These are a few of the plans made to attract visitors to the show.

Next in point of interest is the solution of the heating problem of Convention hall, which, as is well known, is a vast unheated building. Mr. Farenwald has virtually closed a contract with F. C. Bower, the vacuum expert, to heat the hall for a moderate sum. The heating plant is to belong to Mr. Bower, who simply agrees to erect and rent it for the time required, thus giving him an opportunity to demonstrate the economic value of his system of heating by vacuum valves. The reduction made by the city authorities in the rental of Convention hall, on the representation that the show would be of benefit to the city, makes it possible to heat the building, remove and afterwards replace the chairs and do all other necessary work, at a moderate price. In fact, the total cost is estimated not to exceed $3,000, which is less than one-third of the rent paid for the Grand Central Palace at New York, where the last show was held. Another matter of special interest is the opening of an office, probably in the Widener Arcade building, where the show committee will have its headquarters, say from November to May. Here all necessary data pertaining to the show will be collected and all necessary letters will be sent out. This will relieve the members of the committees from the necessity of doing show work in their offices and will enable them to make their show work more efficient.

While these facts were touched upon briefly last week, they are of such importance as to demand fuller comment. With the knowledge that the committees are doing their level best, each one of us will feel that he must do his part

C. E. Critchell has enjoyed a good call for bronze galax.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been finding an excellent market for pompons.

Among the trade visitors last week were A. Miller, of Chicago; George Lampert, of the Lampert Floral Co., Xenia, O.; H. Ehrhardt, of Sidney, O., and Frank Farney, representing the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia. C. H. H.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Market conditions have improved considerably, although there still is a shortage of stock. Galax and magnolia leaves are used to help fill the orders when cut flowers are low. It is expected that there will be plenty of stock of all kinds next week, as mums will then be in big supply. Roses are scarce and high in price. Beauties are of excellent quality and the supply equals the demand. Carnations are improving in quality. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful and some excellent stock can be seen on the market. The midseason varieties, such as Chieftain, Wm. Turner and others, have arrived. Easter lilies and valley always have a steady demand.

Various Notes.

Arthur Newell had a good run on funeral work last week. He reports business good in all lines, especially for hospitals.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. is cutting a large quantity of carnations and chrysanthemums. At the retail store it is said basket work is picking up at a lively gait.

A. F. Barbe says it is too warm for a large cemetery business, as everybody is out riding and enjoying the fine fall weather. However, he looked quite busy October 24.

Nelson Jarrett has his place in fine shape and well filled with young bedding stock for spring sales. His begonias and ferns are looking especially well.

T. J. Noll & Co. report a heavy shipping trade. They have a large supply of cut flowers, consigned to them by local growers.

Among the visitors last week were E. C. Pruner, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, and J. R. Simanton, of Simanton & Pence, Falls City, Neb.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Seasonable weather conditions resulted in a marked improvement in business last week, chrysanthemums being easily the leaders. Whites have the call by large proportions, with the pinks and yellows about equal seconds. Carnations are a trifle more plentiful and better, while violets have appeared on the scene, so that there is a considerable easement in the market over preceding weeks.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held October 20, with an unusually large attendance. Several new members were admitted, following which W. N. Craig, of Brookline, gave an interesting and instructive talk, with illustrations, on "Hardy Herbaceous Gardens and the Planting of Bulbs." The annual chrysanthemum exhibition will be held at the Narragansett hotel November 11 and 12.

H. Howard Pepper, of the Melrose Rose Gardens, was one of the guests at the complimentary dinner given by the Industrial Trust Co.

Frey Bros. have completed the addition to their range at 50 Radcliffe avenue. It is 21x83 feet.

William A. Brown, of the Providence Seed Co., is busy with arrangements for the thirtieth annual exhibition of the Rhode Island Poultry Association, of which he is secretary, in Infantry hall, November 30 to December 4.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists — those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists— has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now —before you forget it?

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.85 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received----------	$513.85
Less 20% allowed senders--------	103.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.85

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florists's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

More cut flowers are arriving than a week ago, the mild season bringing along chrysanthemums in larger numbers. While sales have to be made at recessions in price, they appear satisfactory when compared with this time a year ago. Chrysanthemums are now the leaders and clean up tolerably well. Such varieties as Ramapo, Halliday, Unaka, G. S. Kalb, Pacific Supreme, Polly Rose, Glory of Pacific and Chrysolora are mostly in evidence. Some Bonnaffon and Ivory are also at hand. The first named sells as well as ever. Pompons, especially yellow and bronze shades, sell well. Roses are now off crop with many growers. They are not selling as satisfactorily as a week ago, but clean up nicely. American Beauties go more slowly, but the demand for hybrid teas is quite good, the long-stemmed stock suffering most from the abundance of chrysanthemums. Stanley, Mock, Miller and Francis Scott Key all come good in quality and sell well, in addition to Hadley, Russell, Sunburst, Ophelia and Ward. White Killarney is fine and has sold better than Killarney. Some good Maryland is seen. This rose does well with some growers.

Carnations steadily improve in quality. Temporarily they have to sell at somewhat lower prices, but probably will come into their own a little later. Single violets are more abundant and lower in price. Valley continues to sell well. Asters and gladioli are over for the season, but a few dahlias still arrive. Lilies move well; some short-stemmed speciosums go slowly, however. Small lots of callas and some Bouvardia Humboldtii are seen. Pansies are plentiful, most of the flowers being outdoor grown. Pink snapdragon cleans up better than other colors. Sweet peas are not yet numerous. Trade in green stock has been quite good.

Flower Exchange Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Boston Flower Exchange, held at Young's hotel October 23, brought out a record attendance, was brim full of enthusiasm and was in every way the best of many occasions of this kind that this progressive body of wholesale flower growers has yet held. The banquet table was never graced with more beautiful flowers. Rose Mrs. Moorfield Storey occupied the place of honor, while beautiful vases of Alice, Pink Sensation, Morning Glow, Miss Theo and other carnations, with sweet peas, snapdragons and chrysanthemums, made the best floral display I have seen at any of these dinners. The banquet itself was a royal one, decidedly the best ever.

A business session followed the banquet. W. C. Stickel presided in his usual happy and inimitable style. The treasurer's report showed receipts of $19,196.65, and a cash balance of $3,393.92, after paying a fifteen per cent dividend to stockholders. W. C. Stickel, S. J. Goddard, L. W. Mann, A. Christensen, George Cartwright, A. S. Parker, C. A. Paine, A. A. Pembroke and H. H. Bartsch were elected as the board of directors for the ensuing year. Mr. Bartsch took the place of Eber Holmes, whose retirement was received with regret, a vote of thanks being given him for his services.

The postprandial exercises were varied and interesting. President Farquhar spoke for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and appealed for stronger commercial support for that body. He spoke of the work done and being planned and was given a rousing reception. Practically all succeeding speakers pledged him their support. H. H. Bartsch responded in his usual happy way for the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, and William H. Elliott for the Boston Coöperative Flower Market. William J. Stewart and W. N. Craig spoke for the press. For the bachelors, A. Leuthy, and for the "best looking salesman in the wholesale markets," W. H. Carr, responded. James L. Miller, as a newly married man, said the best advice he could give the two preceding speakers was to go and do likewise. Henry M. Robinson, Jr., for the wholesale commission men, quite electrified his hearers by the ease and rapidity with which he poured out his peroration. Other speakers included Peter Fisher, William Nicholson, William Capstick, M. A. Patten, A. S. Parker, A. Christensen, J. T. Butterworth, John Walsh, W. J. Thurston and H. L. Cameron.

A pleasing feature of the evening was a vote taken on woman's suffrage, which one speaker advocated. Florists are evidently in favor of the movement, as the vote stood fifty-seven for, twenty-seven against and twenty-three neutral. A first-class orchestra furnished excellent music, popular songs being sung with a zest. The singing of "America" closed a most delightful evening's entertainment, where a thoroughly get-together feeling was manifested, full of optimism, and one which will linger as a pleasant memory with all who were privileged to attend.

Boston County Fair.

There was a fine display of fruits and vegetables at the county fair, which opened at Mechanics building October 23, but cut flowers and plants were only shown in moderate numbers, largely owing to the approach of the fall show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. In cut roses W. H. Elliott took first for Ophelia, Hadley and Sunburst; also for a display of polyantha varieties. James Philbrick was first for White Killarney. There was a better show of carnations. For fifty white H. N. Eaton led with Matchless and James Wheeler was second with the same variety. N. F. Comley was first for scarlet with Beacon. For light pink James Wheeler won with fine Alice; N. F. Comley was second with Mrs. Ward. For variegated, James Wheeler's vase of Benora was in the lead. For 100 carnations Patten & Co. led with a fine assortment, including Matchless, Alice, Peerless Pink, Pink Sensation, Beacon, Pink Delight, White Wonder and a light pink seedling; A. Roper, second. Edward Winkler's new Morning Glow received a certificate of superior merit as a commercial variety.

N. F. Comley was first for fifty white chrysanthemums with Polly Rose, first for pink with Pacific Supreme and for yellow with Chrysolora. He also took first for general display and pompons. W. H. Elliott had the best group of chrysanthemum plants. W. W. Edgar Co. captured first for group of flowering and foliage plants, and Mrs. J. F. Flood was second. N. F. Comley was first for display of violets, and John McFarland for 100 valley. R. A. Washington had the best pansies, and E. F. Dwyer & Son showed a splendid dahlia collection, which captured first prize.

The Breck-Robinson Co. had an extensive collection of well-grown evergreens, which captured both first and second prizes. For dinner table decoration H. R. Comley was first with a dainty arrangement of valley and yellow oncidiums with adiantum and Cyrtomium Mandaianum; second, Wax Bros., who used yellow and bronze pompon chrysanthemums with croton leaves; H. R. Comley, third, with Mlle. Cecile Brunner roses.

Penn's Pushing Progressiveness.

There have been rumors for some time of Penn opening a new store on Boston's busiest street. The new location selected is 124 Tremont street, where Thomas F. Galvin was located so many years. It is practically in the center of the Hub and the best possible stand for a flower store. Work on the internal arrangements is already progressing and it is hoped that the new store, which is likely to be the finest in Boston, will open for business about November 15. The word Penn is almost a household one in New England, and it is doubtful if there is today any more widely known florists' firm in America, or, for that matter, in the world. The way the business of these two indefatigable, courteous, wide-awake and progressive florists has grown reads almost like a fairy romance. The Penns are firm believers in publicity and advertise more heavily than any other florists in America. Their new store will undoubtedly immensely increase their already big business, for they will bring flowers before the people as no other firm seems quite able to do.

Various Notes.

The nursery employees of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., at Dedham, Mass., held their first social and dance October 22. The stage of Memorial hall was beautifully decorated with foliage and flowering plants and there was an attendance of 400. So successful was the occasion that it is now planned to make it an annual affair. The growth of the Farquhar firm, especially at the nursery end of the business, has been phenomenal. They now have 200 acres of nursery stock and a big block of greenhouses, which are being constantly added to to keep pace with the demand. The officers of the association are: President, Robert Laurie; treasurer, Patrick Fordham; secretary, J. Traquair. The executive committee, in addition to the foregoing, consists of W. E. Gordon, R. G. Walsh, Jr., J. Scanlan, J. Cody and H. Steele.

The Budlong Rose Co. is getting large daily shipments of chrysanthemums. Early Snow and Chrysolora have been excellent. Russell is coming fine; so is Ward, with 18-inch to 30-inch stems. Francis Scott Key sells well.

The annual autumn show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which opens November 4, promises to be an unusually good one. Growers from a distance, who may be unable to attend, should send exhibits prepaid addressed to W. P. Rich, Horticultural hall, Boston, and they will be promptly cared for. The word chrysanthemum is no longer applied to this show, as it is so much less exclusively a mum show than formerly, orchids and many other flowers being more featured each year. Growers of novelties should send their exhibits here, as the Boston shows always attract a large attendance of flower lovers.

Littlefield & Wyman are having excellent success with their new seedling carnation, Miss Theo, for which they are already getting good orders. They have two other fine pink seedlings. One carries a larger flower than Enchantress and is a little deeper in color. It scored eighty-seven points at Buffalo. Other varieties grown are Champion, Benora, Beacon, Matchless, White Wonder and Fenn. They report that their nursery business this fall is heavier than ever before.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, have recently installed a Johns-Manville electrical cooling machine for a large storage room, which works satisfactorily. They now grow roses almost exclusively and will not grow any lilies as heretofore. Hadley, Killarney, Ophelia, Sunburst and Prince d'Arenberg are their leaders.

A. Leuthy has just received his first shipment of azaleas from Belgium, 146 cases, in good shape. He reports fall business as decidedly better than a year ago.

H. L. Cameron, of North Cambridge, is our largest and most successful grower of bedding geraniums. Last year he sold 100,000 plants, although he advanced the price $1 per hundred at wholesale. He has 150,000 cuttings rooted for next season, all of which he feels sure will be sold without any trouble.

William H. Elliott says returns from sales of roses show a big improvement over a year ago. Extra fine with him now are Miller, Ward, Sunburst, Hadley and Ophelia. He is marketing large numbers of well-flowered, bushy chrysanthemums.

William R. Nicholson had some superb Ramapo chrysanthemums October 23, which sold at $6 per dozen. He has just finished a grand lot of Chrysolora. There is a great demand for pompons. All his carnations are doing finely, Mrs. Ward, Matchless and Pink Delight being especially good.

R. T. McGorum, of Natick, grows a house of Ivory chrysanthemum which will be in season about November 10. He finds this a paying sort; also, the old Mrs. Henry Robinson and the crimson, Harvard. In roses he is growing Ophelia, Sunburst, Ward, Hadley, Killarney and White Killarney.

John W. Foote, of Reading, is practically our only successful grower of Bouvardia Humboldtii. He is getting a fine crop on long stems. This is one of the finest flowers we have for wedding bouquets. Mr. Foote's carnations are coming into good crop, particularly Pink Delight, White Wonder and Benora.

Robert Montgomery is this season growing a wider variety of roses than ever before and they never looked better. Hoosier Beauty is doing well; so are Russell, Sunburst, Hadley and Ophelia.

C. S. Andem, of Putnam, Conn., is sending in a fine lot of mums. At present his leading sorts are Pacific Supreme, Halliday, Tint of Gold and Fairy Queen.

Recent visitors have included F. G. Sealy, representing the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.; Geo. E. Baldwin, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Harry A. Barnard, representing Stuart Low & Co., Enfield, England; J. L. Porter, Narberth, Pa.

J. T. Gale, of Tewksbury, has started cutting Bonnaffon mums, of which he grows a large quantity. His single violets and yellow daisies are both coming along in good shape.

Fred Holbrow, of Brighton, has just finished building a new show house and installing a Lord & Burnham boiler. He has a fine batch of Begonia Gloire de Chatelaine.

Paul F. Brigham, of Westboro, is cutting Chrysolora mums of excellent quality. Carnations are his specialty. Those doing particularly well now are Ward, Matchless, Pink Delight and Benora.

Galvin, at his Park street store this week, has an attractive window of specimen crotons. Another window is devoted entirely to specimen mums, while in still another an excellent orchid display is to be seen.

Thomas Capers' fine new carnation house, built to replace one blown down last summer, is producing superior flowers. Alice blooms abundantly and early, with somewhat shorter stems than Pink Delight. Other favorites with him are Pink Delight, White Enchantress and Beacon.

Henry R. Comley, on Park street, uses sprays of Celastrus scandens, with its bright-colored fruit, in his windows to good advantage. I also noted here some fine nerines, bouvardias and strelitzias.

J. T. Butterworth, of South Framingham, has been fifty years in the business this week. Many readers would be surprised to learn that Tom's birthdays have passed the half century mark, although he already sees in his 2-year-old grandson signs of an expert orchid grower.

Charles Rapp, of Melrose Highlands, is getting a fine lot of Cattleya labiata. He has finished cutting Oncidium Rogersii, but has a grand lot of Cattleya Trianæ in sheath.

Harry Quint spent a six weeks' vacation recently in Cuba and is enthusiastic over the island's possibilities. He says that fall business is now coming along nicely.

A. E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, who specializes in pink snapdragons and yellow marguerites, is already getting a good cut of each. His carnations are looking well.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held November 23, in lieu of the regular date, No-

John McFarland, of North Easton, is cutting Polly Rose and Pacific mums. He has also started on Bonnaffon, which is his leader. His poinsettias look well.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. had a large wedding order last week at the Hotel Beaconsfield for Miss Gray. Mr. Rosenthal reports steadily improving business. I am glad to report Mrs. William Rosenthal is back at her place as bookkeeper, after a long illness from typhoid fever.

Everett E. Cummings, of Woburn, has a fine house of grandiflora sweet peas in bloom. Another house of new Spencers will be in good crop before Thanksgiving.

E. H. Borowski, of Roslindale, has received his first shipment of azaleas and another is due in a few days. He has, as usual, a fine lot of Cincinnati begonias and cyclamens for Thanksgiving and Christmas trade. W. N. C.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

The Market.

During the last two or three weeks trade has been unusually brisk, everyone having all he could conveniently care for. Roses and carnations have been rather scarce and mums have hardly been equal to the demand. This was due partly to the numerous decorations for the marriage of Governor Dunne's daughter and the many social functions given in her honor.

Various Notes.

The force at the A. C. Brown store was extremely busy last week. Mr. Brown had the decorations for the church and the executive mansion for the Dunne-Corboy wedding. He also

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE gladiolus bulbs are lifting in fine shape.

THE German flower seeds still come to hand in regular succession of parcels within the weight limit of the mails. The field and garden seeds are another matter.

SEEDSMEN who are interested in gladiolus bulbs will find a note in the Chicago news letter in this issue concerning the sale of the stock of bulbs of the Kunderd variety, Myrtle.

THE trade looks forward to an unusually strong demand for onion seed this season, as a result of what is expected to be an inevitable shortage of onion bulbs in the produce markets in late winter.

AGAIN seedsmen's assistants are in request. There are plenty of men without training, but the approach of another season brings out the dearth of employees capable of going ahead without constant supervision.

THE new Chicago plant of the Albert Dickinson Co., nearing completion, involves an estimated total investment of $3,000,000 to $3,500,000, and will give employment to about 650 men. The holdings of the company now cover more than seventy acres.

IT is interesting to note that the imports of Dutch bulbs through the port of New York to October 18 were 32,591 cases, against 31,396 cases to the same date last year. The difference in the situation is vastly greater, however. Last year there was great outcry about demoralizing the market and the dumping of surpluses, while this season bulbs are selling fully as well as ever before and many varieties are short of the demand. Prices, here and in Holland, average right up to those of normal times.

SWEET CORN IN OHIO.

Not in our thirty-five years' experience have we seen so wet and cold a summer and fall as we have had here in Ohio in 1915. The result is our crops of corn are all extremely late; eighty-five to ninety per cent got ripe; the balance of the crop was killed by frost. The crop therefore is three to four weeks late, which makes it all green at this writing, October 25. Just now we are having good drying weather, and if it will continue throughout November and hard freezes hold off we shall have fair to good seed corn crops to ship to our customers. The fields of topped sweet corn have just started to dry a little. Therefore one can judge how late the crop is. One year ago today we had 7,000 bushels of seed corn in our warehouses ready to ship. Today we have not 100 bushels of the new crop that is dry. We shall start using heat to help dry it at once. C. S. Clark & Son.

THE GLADIOLUS SITUATION.

There is an old saying to the effect that "it is a long lane that has no turn," and apparently the turn has been reached on the way the gladiolus bulb

PRICE IS A CHANCE ACQUAINTANCE

Quality is a friend you will remember forever. The quality of Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs is always higher than the price. Not only that—the quality is higher than that of any other brand. If you buy Horseshoe Brand Giganteum you know you are getting the best to be had in lily bulbs. In all transactions of every kind and nature, both sides must profit. And when you buy Horseshoe Brand Giganteum you profit because of the high standard quality capable of producing many flowers, and we profit chiefly by reason of the large quantity we are able to sell. You can buy a case of 300 Giganteum bulbs 7 to 9 for $15.00 that will bring you very profitable returns if you handle them right. You could not buy that case for $20.00 if it was not for the large volume of business we do. The prices for other sizes of Horseshoe Brand Giganteum are as follows:

GIGANTEUM

$16.00 per case of 400 bulbs, 6x 8
15.00 " " " 300 " 7x 9
19.00 " " " 200 " 9x10

industry has been traveling these several years. It seems to have come, in the natural order of things, as the result of the mistaken policy that has been followed here, but more especially in Holland. Prices, long on the downward course, are going up.

Since Holland growers went in heavily for gladiolus growing they have been forcing prices lower and lower, overproducing and cutting prices to get orders. It made it difficult for American growers to make any money, but at length the Hollanders cut to the point where there was nothing in it for them. Now there are two classes of men in the bulb business in Holland—growers and exporters. Many of the latter grow nothing, but buy the crops of the producers. Apparently the merchants failed to appreciate that they had not been giving the growers living prices and that a good many of them had closed out their stock, turning to crops that promised better returns this war year. The merchants kept on selling at low prices, only to find at harvest that Holland's gladiolus bulb crop this year is not nearly so large as in recent years. Orders exceeding supply on certain varieties, prices have rebounded sharply, to the surprise of some of those who are oversold.

In America there is about the usual increase in acreage that has been noted in recent years, but the production of bulbs has not been enough to take care of the demand without considerable imports from Holland and, to a less extent, from England and Germany. With these imports likely to be materially reduced and with certain Holland houses trying to buy American-grown bulbs to fill their American orders, the American growers feel they are fairly assured of another turn of good business at profitable prices.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

The J. L. Ullathorne Seed Co., of Memphis, Tenn., is gratified over the increase of business since moving into the new store, which is managed by C. W. Eichling, Jr. Mr. Ullathorne has charge of the 750-acre seed farm at Franklin, Tenn.

Otto Schwill & Co., of Memphis, have secured the agency for a mechanical cotton picker, which promises to be a big saver of labor. Bulbs are moving rapidly. A leading local journal printed a seasonable, well written article on bulb planting, which boosted the sale of bulbs.

The Leifer Bros. Seed Store, of Little Rock, Ark., notices a considerable change in its country trade since the advent of parcel post.

The Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., of St. Louis, Mo., is of the opinion that it will require a steady helmsman to steer the ship of business amid the rocks of high prices and shoals of short stocks during the next seed season.

The St. Louis Seed Co. is receiving many encomiums upon the new building, which is of the latest approved style. The lower floor has display windows of double frontage, which are attractively trimmed with plants, bowls of goldfish and everything required by the amateur gardener.

The Hayes-Thomas Grain Co., of Little Rock, reports last season as being the best in its experience in the seed trade.

William Walker, of the David Hardie Seed Co., Dallas, Tex., said last season reminded him somewhat of the meeting of the minister and Mrs. Jones, when the following conversation took place: "Amid all your troubles," said the minister, "I am pleased to see that your sense of gratitude does not fail." "Rheumatism is bad enough," replied Mrs. Jones, "but I must be thankful I still have a back to have it in."

Manager W. Robinson, of the Texas Seed & Floral Co., Dallas, Tex., is in the optimistic class and says his house is preparing for all the good things coming this fall.

The Blackwell & Hickey Co., of Hydro, Okla., has entered the field of seed growers. Mr. Hickey was with the Barteldes Seed Co., of Lawrence, Kan., for several years.

The Drumm Seed & Floral Co., of Fort Worth, has received the major portion of its bulbs. This company specializes in a strain of Drumhead cabbage that is hard to beat. The store has been remodeled.

The Kimbrough Seed Co., of Meridian, Miss., has moved into a larger store, directly opposite the old stand.

The McVay Seed & Floral Co., of Birmingham, Ala., reports a steady advance in both departments. There is an optimistic spirit in the air. Onion sets seem to be plentiful in this region.

The Gorman-Gammill Seed Co., of Birmingham, issues an up-to-date catalogue, which the officers of the company consider a good investment.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Santa Cruz, Cal.—Owing to ill health, Mrs. Emma Lasswell has discontinued her business at 47 Pelton avenue.

Eugene, Ore.—Elmer B. Guerry has sold his half interest in the Eugene Floral Co., to his partner, and has moved to Portland, Ore., where he expects to make a desirable business connection.

MAIDENHAIR FERNS.

Will you kindly tell me why my maidenhair ferns do not leaf out? During the spring and part of the summer a great many fronds started, but they did not mature. A fine, healthy stem develops, but the end looks as if it had been burned. The plants are young and the new soil always has done finely.

A. L. H.—Cal.

The trouble described would seem to indicate that an undue proportion of ammonia was contained in the soil, which would cause the plants to behave in such a manner. A reasonable proportion of well rotted manure forms a good fertilizer for maidenhair ferns, but fresh stable manure is likely to cause injury.

If this is not the cause, I should suspect alkali in the water as a possible source of the trouble. W. H. T.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Last week was one of varying fortunes; some days brought good business, others were extremely slack. A few hot days pushed the stock along rapidly and this gave the impression of a glut. It is at such times that the need of a good central market makes itself apparent. The growers peddling their wares to retailers, who already have more flowers than they can handle, would be amusing were it not pathetic. Then when the scarcity comes, the grower is the last to know of it and often sells his stock at about half its value before he hears of the big demand. The Japanese growers already have found the advantage of centralizing their efforts in this direction. The situation as to the market may be summed up as good business, but too much stock in all lines.

Various Notes.

Frank Lichtenberg was unusually busy last week with funeral work. Transient trade also was good. Herbert Bateman, of the store force, has returned from a month's vacation at San Francisco, where he visited old friends and attended the exposition. He reports having the time of his life.

J. J. Darcy, formerly of Oakland and later of Sacramento, is in the city. He has just recovered from a serious illness and is gaining strength every day, which improvement he ascribes to the glorious climate of Los Angeles county, and southern California generally.

Edward Rust's nursery and greenhouses at Pasadena are always well worth a visit. The orderly manner in which Mr. Rust maintains his place alone is worth the trip. A house containing the beautiful Chatelaine begonia is a sight worth going a long way to see. The foliage and Lorraine types, cyclamens and other flowering stock for Christmas are especially good this year. A pleasing collection of cannas, dahlias, verbenas and other showy plants are shown in what Mr. Rust calls his "flower garden."

The Review is by far the best advertising medium for the trade, as we have proved in selling out of Callas and Freesias for this season.

J. H. WILLEY & CO.

Santa Cruz, Cal.
Oct. 17, 1915

G. M. Bridgeford, of Eagle Rock, has taken in another large piece of ground near his home and is planting large quantities of Dutch and French bulbs. He has an exceptionally fine strain of forget-me-nots, which have long, stiff stems and large, deep blue flowers.

The L. A. Floral Co. is evidently extending the scope of its operations, New Orleans, La., and Colorado Springs, Colo., being among the labels noted in the store recently.

S. Murata & Co. are supplying some of the finest violets ever seen in this market, notwithstanding the hot weather. The mums, too, are extra fine, and Mr. Murata says he will be able to keep up this quality until Christmas.

A son was born to Morris Goldenson October 15, but he only lived one day. The sympathy of the trade is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Goldenson.

J. W. Howell says he is more than satisfied with the business done at his new location at 702 West Seventh street. He is making a specialty of ferns and palms.

Business is much improved at the retail store of G. W. Smith, Seventh and Figueroa streets. Evidently the pioneer work done in this locality is beginning to bear fruit.

George Eischen, of the J. W. Wolters store staff, and Carl Brose, of F. Lichtenberg's, report a good time hunting rabbit and quail. They secured twenty-one of the former in one day.

Helen Drew, daughter of O. H. Drew, of Tropico, Cal., was married at the home of her brother, October 21, to Atlee Vail, of Milton, N. Y. Mr. Drew was formerly in business at Hibernia, N. Y., as a mail-order seedsman. Mr. and Mrs. Vail left for New York the same evening.

In the matter of exhibits, the flower show opened October 21 at the Woman's Club, at Hollywood, was a great success. At the time of writing the staging of the exhibits is in progress. Among the trade exhibits noted were a garden scene by Paul Howard, a group of cut flowers and plants from the Germain Seed & Plant Co., of Los Angeles, plants from Anton Soethout, of the Hollywood Nurseries, and fine cut flowers from Walter Armacost & Co.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Growers reserved much of their finest stock for exhibition purposes at the exposition last week, and the dealers had to content themselves with fewer choice flowers than usual. Especially was this true of chrysanthemums. So many of the choice blooms were reserved for the show that first-class stock was at a premium for a few days. This did not interfere with trade, however, as it helped other lines which had received little attention in competition with the great variety of excellent mums.

Many dahlias were used for show purposes also, and this, together with the shortage of first-class mums, made them clean up closely. Pompons are being handled in great quantities, but there is no evidence of a surplus in any quarter from day to day. They show good quality and largely take the place of the small summer stock, which is gradually going out.

Carnations are beginning to come in more freely and the quality is fairly good. They are carefully graded and the better blooms bring good prices.

Violets are more plentiful, but they continue to clean up readily, as the shipping demand is gradually improving. Some of the shippers are still holding off, however, claiming that the violets are too soft yet to ship to advantage. Roses are more plentiful than for some time and the average quality is better. Hadley, Ward and Russell make a good showing. Some nice Ophelia are arriving. More Cecile Brunner could be used, and long-stemmed Beauties are still scarce, though there are plenty of Richmond, Killarney, Maryland and Sunburst. Orchids meet the demand and the supply of gardenias is equal to the call for them.

Horticultural Day at Fair.

Horticultural day at the exposition, October 21, was the occasion of the fall flower show, held under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society in conjunction with the Chrysanthemum Society of America and the Department of Horticulture of the Panama-Pacific Exposition. The day was crowded with attractions and special features. One hundred thousand packages of flower and vegetable seeds were given away, as well as about 50,000 cut dahlias, 3,000 potted ferns, 2,000 cans of preserved fruits, 1,000 baskets of apples and grapes and 1,000 bottles of olive oil. There were concerts by seven brass bands and by Hawaiian, Spanish and American singers. A large section of the Palace of Horticulture was given over to the flower show displays. A splendid showing was made the first day, chrysanthemums being the principal feature. This was by far the finest display of these flowers ever presented on the Pacific coast. Visitors crowded the building all day, and the show section remained open until 11 o'clock in the evening. Working in conjunction with Manager H. Plath was an exhibition committee consisting of John McLaren, Daniel MacRorie, T. Taylor, Frank Pelicano, E. James, Angelo J. Rossi, D. Raymond, W. A. Hofinghoff, Donald McLaren, William Kettlewell, William Munro, John R. Fotheringham, P. Ellings and M. Poss. The show lasted six days, each day having its special contests and entertainment features. Competition for the prizes was keen.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Frank Smith was here last week purchasing supplies with the intention of opening a flower store in Modesto, Cal.

C. Kooyman received a large shipment of Holland bulbs last week and has been busy filling orders. He says the bulbs arrived in good shape.

W. F. Pitts has been made manager of the Luther Burbank Co., 301 to 303 Market street. He succeeds Leo V. Belden, who has acted as secretary and manager since the opening of the store two years ago.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. has been sending in some good spiræas the last week or two. These early offerings come in nicely at this time, when few flowering plants are available.

Jack Olson, of the New Rosarie, is building a greenhouse at his home place on Seventeenth street, where he plans to propagate a lot of spring stock for bedding, for which he has a large demand at the store. He will give most attention to the new English larkspur, which has been immensely popular this year with his trade. He will grow zinnias and ferns also.

Henry J. Kessel, of the Richmond Ferneries, is growing a large lot of poinsettias, primulas, begonias and ferns for use in assortments for holiday baskets and jardinieres. As soon as this stock is off his hands he intends to tear down some of the old houses and replace them with lath houses for ornamental plants. He has practically cleaned up a big lot of young Adiantum California ready for planting.

F. T. Schlotzhauer, of the Francis Floral Co., takes considerable pride in an order recently received in competition on the strength of artistic design. The occasion was one of the numerous conventions in this city. The committee in charge of the affair arranged that each of the visiting ladies, numbering 250, should find a box of flowers in her apartment on arriving. Many different kinds of roses were used: Shawyer, Ophelia, Ward, Irish Elegance, etc., sprayed with California violets and enclosed in boxes which were colored to harmonize with the particular variety of rose enclosed, the whole being double-tied with ribbons in harmonizing tones.

Following the death of George H. Evans last spring, the Jordan Park Floral Co., at Clement street, was taken over by F. E. Stratton, who continues as proprietor. R. A. Brown, who has been connected with the business in that location for the last six years, is now manager of the establishment. He says business for the summer was good.

Alfred Serveau, who has long been associated with his father, Emile Serveau, in the flower business on Fillmore street, near Sacramento street, was recently taken into partnership. Emile Serveau is giving all his attention to the store, having sold his calla-growing establishment in the Ocean View district to his brother, Charles. There are between 300,000 and 400,000 callas planted on this place, and it is expected that the coming season's business, both in cut flowers and bulbs, will be even larger than this year. S. H. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Last week the volume of business decreased slightly, but the first three weeks of October have been considerably better than the corresponding period of last year. Chrysanthemums are the leading flowers. Early Snow, Columbia and White Ivory, locally grown, and Bonnaffon, from California, have appeared. Several varieties of white dahlias are being used with good advantage in designs. The cut of roses has diminished somewhat, and the cut of carnations has increased. Potted mums, azaleas, cyclamens and Lorraine begonias are leaders of the blooming plants.

The sale of ferns and ornamentals has fallen off. Some of the shipments of Paper Whites and Romans have arrived. There has not been enough rain to put the soil in the nurseries in good condition for lifting stock.

Club Meeting.

About two-thirds of the members of the Portland Floral Society attended the meeting October 19. The "get acquainted roll call" showed among the visitors Bernard Rynveld, of Hillegom, Holland, and E. B. Guerry, of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston. One new member was elected and one application filed. R. W. Gill, manager of the dahlia show, reported that he had not yet received all bills pertaining to the show and, therefore, could not make a final report. Exhibitors of stock other than dahlias will be asked to help to pay part of the expenses incidental to the show.

The president stated that his protest against the tax assessments on greenhouse grown stock had resulted in a compromise, and that the county authorities admit that it is an open question. They have fixed the assessments on small and medium-sized ranges at $100 to $150 each. This covers tools and equipment, with the exception of store fixtures and delivery vehicles. If anyone in this county is assessed for more, he is paying more than he should.

On request of the rose festival managers, a committee was chosen to attend the meeting of the clubs which support the festival, October 20, consisting of the president, James Forbes and Julius Dossche.

It was voted to hold another ladies' night during the second week of December, at a date to be arranged by the entertainment committee.

William Borsch, chairman of the growers' committee, reported that his committee held a meeting earlier in the evening and discussed several topics. The committee will hold a meeting of all the growers this week.

It was announced that club members would receive invitations to attend the meeting of the State Horticultural Society, to be held at the Oregon Agricultural College, about November 18. Twenty members signified their intentions of attending the meeting. On motion, a committee consisting of R. W. Gill, J. B. Pilkington and Charles Welty was selected to arouse interest in the affair and arrange for exhibits of cut flowers and plants. The entertainment of the evening consisted of a number of colored views of California and foreign countries, interspersed with comics, thrown on the screen by J. G. Bacher, who took many of the photographs on his trip to the exposition.

The refreshment tables were decorated with a number of vases of dahlias brought in by E. H. White.

G. Indermuhle recognized all the colored scenes of Switzerland and J. B. Pilkington exhibited a comprehensive knowledge of the streets of San Francisco.

H. E. Weed said he had lifted some stock and finished some landscape work, which had turned out in good shape.

August Zitzewitz said his carnations were just coming in. His October Frost, Golden Glow and Smith's Advance were nearly all cut.

John Holden said his company had several varieties of blooming pot plants ready to market.

Henry Clemmens remarked that he had been able to take three crops a year from his range at Newberg. Sweet peas, gladioli and tomatoes form the crop rotation he follows.

J. G. Bacher received congratulations on the arrival, October 6, of the fourth addition to his family.

Various Notes.

Max Smith took a hand in furnishing entertainment for Mayor Thompson, of Chicago, who recently visited Portland. Mr. Smith reported a good run of funeral work last week. He is having splendid success with cyclamen this year.

PAPER WHITES IN GLASS JARS.

September 20 I planted some Paper Whites in 4-inch glass jars, using moss fiber, and placed them at once in a dark, cool cellar. The roots have started nicely, filling about one-third of the jar, and the tops are two inches high. Is this too much of a top for the root growth, and shall I keep them in the cellar until more roots are formed? They are a fine lot of mammoth, thrifty bulbs, and I am anxious to bring them into bloom if possible. J. B. B.—Ill.

Paper White narcissi make rapid growth, and it will be better to move your plants into the light now. Other and slower-growing bulbs require to be kept in the dark longer. C. W.

It Pays

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results. —Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

The transient rate for space is $1 per inch per insertion. Those who have stock to offer all or a considerable part of the year around should write for contract rates.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 22 to 24, 1916.

THERE is little prospect of low prices for European nursery products next season; the labor shortage will be an increasingly important factor.

JACKSON & PERKINS OFFICERS.

A meeting of the directors of Jackson & Perkins Co. was held last week, following the return of the president, C. H. Perkins, from California. The resignation of John Watson as director and secretary, which had been tendered September 23, was duly accepted and regret was expressed by the other directors over the termination of his connection with the company's affairs. George C. Perkins was elected to the vacant secretaryship. He will fill both that office and the one of treasurer, which he already held, and will resume the more active participation in the management which he partly relinquished some years ago because of being at that time in ill health.

Chas. H. Perkins II, a nephew of the president, was made a director and was also elected vice-president. He is well known to the trade, having been for a number of years the company's traveling representative. During the growing season he also has a general supervision of the various nursery farms. His election as a director and officer is felt by the other directors to be a well deserved recognition of his services.

Paul Fortmiller, who has been Mr. Watson's chief assistant for the last four years, was promoted to the position of office manager and will have charge of a considerable part of the correspondence.

The outdoor organization remains unchanged, and the directors feel the company is to be particularly congratulated on having built up and maintained a corps of such loyal and efficient employees. The heads of the greenhouse department and of the shipping department have each worked for the company over twenty-five years; in fact, both of them grew up with Jackson & Perkins at Newark, N. Y., and neither man ever worked anywhere else.

DELIVERIES UNDER CONTRACTS.

A nurseryman who makes a contract to deliver a certain quantity of trees cannot avoid liability in damages for failing to live up to the contract on the ground that he expected to obtain the necessary stock elsewhere, but was unable to do so, unless he has protected himself against that contingency by provision in the contract. This is according to a recent decision of the California Supreme court. (Pearson vs. McKinney, 117 Pacific Reporter 918.) Other important phases applicable to sales of nursery stock were involved in the case.

The contract between the parties provided for a sale of 25,000 budded orange trees of standard size, with option of the buyer to purchase when the stock should be 1 year old from the bud, at 30 cents per tree; or at the age of 2 years, at 35 cents per tree; or at 3 years, at 40 cents per tree. Standard trees of the first two ages were fixed at five-eighths and three-fourths of an inch, respectively. The buyer was required to give notice one month before budding as to the varieties he would select. Under these terms, the Supreme court held that there was no implied warranty on the part of the seller that the trees would attain the standard size at any particular time, and that the seller was entitled to a reasonable time to procure budding.

The provision giving the buyer an option to take the trees at one or two years from the bud, of a standard size, was held not to entitle the buyer to demand them at that exact age. The seller was entitled to make delivery within a reasonable time after demand, so that if the number of trees demanded had not grown to the standard size when demand was made, without the seller's fault, the buyer would have to wait until they attained that size, although the trees were more than 1 or 2 years old from the bud when delivered. Subject to such rule, the buyer could make successive demands for reasonable quantities less than the 25,000.

It was further decided that the provision in the contract that the buyer should give notice as to the varieties of trees he desired, did not preclude him from selecting a reasonable number of varieties of those trees which could be obtained by the seller with reasonable effort.

It was contended by the seller that the buyer's demands were insufficient because no money was tendered in payment, concurrently with the demand for delivery. In overruling this contention, the court said:

"It is true that upon a sale of goods for an agreed price, if the contract contains nothing to the contrary, payment and delivery are concurrent acts. But actual payment need not accompany the demand for delivery unless such delivery is to be made then and there. If the goods are not present, to be then and there delivered to the buyer, the buyer may accompany his demand with an offer to pay when actual delivery is made to him. This the buyer did in this case. His demand was made at the office of the seller, and it was accompanied by the statement that he was ready to pay for the trees upon delivery. He was met with a refusal, and a statement that there were no trees on hand of standard size that were subject to the contract. The trees were then at the nursery, seventeen miles distant. The buyer thereupon went to the nursery to get the trees, prepared to pay for them on de-

AVIATOR

$100.00 per 1000

There is at present no thoroughly satisfactory scarlet carnation. We believe we have such a variety in Aviator and we have decided to disseminate it, beginning delivery January 1, 1916.

THIS IS THE FIRST TIME A NEW CARNATION HAS BEEN SENT OUT BY US SINCE WE INTRODUCED ENCHANTRESS, AND YOU MAY BE SURE WE ARE CONFIDENT IT'S GOOD OR WE WOULD NOT PUT OUR NAME AND REPUTATION BACK OF IT.

DESCRIPTION—Parents, red sport of Maceo and red seedling. Color, intense scarlet, very bright. Stem, thin, wiry and stiff. Flowers, fine, full and nicely fringed. Habit, clean; upright growth; every break makes a rapid advance, producing a profusion of fine flowers in a very short time. The most prolific carnation ever offered to the trade, barring none. No disease, no grass, easy to propagate. There are larger reds offered, but Aviator will outbloom them 3 to 1. We have plants of Aviator on which we can count 24 buds for the first crop and the houses easily average 15 buds per plant.

WE HAVE PLANTED 40,000 AVIATOR

One house is to be devoted exclusively to the production of cuttings. The other houses are to produce blooms. INSPECTION INVITED.

At the Illinois State Fair, Springfield, September 21 to 23, on 11 entries we took 8 first prizes, 2 second prizes, 1 third prize. If you want first-class cut carnation blooms, order of us.

Houston, Tex.—As the election to the vice-presidency for 1916 carries with it a seat on the board of directors of the S. A. F., R. C. Kerr has tendered his resignation as a director, to which place he was appointed last January, to take effect January 1. This will give the incoming president three directorships to distribute unless the president for 1915 takes prior action.

SCRANTON, PA.

The Market.

Last week was a busy one. Weddings and funeral work kept the stock cleaned up. Chrysanthemums are plentiful and are sold at $1.50 to $4 per dozen. Carnations are scarce at 75 cents per dozen. Roses bring $1 to $3 per dozen.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Scranton Florists' Club was held October 21 at the store of A. L. Besancon & Co. President L. E. McClintock was in the chair. There was a good attendance and much business was transacted. It was decided to hold the spring flower show April 2 to 4, 1916.

The following officers were nominated for the ensuing year: President, M. L. Ruch; vice-president, John W. Beagle; secretary, T. B. McClintock; treasurer, Miss Gertrude Schultheis.

A luncheon was served by Miss Besancon.

Various Notes.

Miss Annie Griffiths, of the West Side Floral Shop, reports business good, especially in funeral and wedding work.

Miss Kennedy, of Clark's, has returned from a two weeks' vacation spent at Washington, D. C.

Anton Schultheis is cutting some fine mums and carnations. He has finished repairing several of his greenhouses.

Andrew Velton, former manager for Ira G. Marvin at his Pittston branch, has started business for himself and has opened a store at 16 Williams street, Pittston. He has the best wishes of all the craft.

The store windows of A. L. Besancon & Co. have been decorated artistically with mums, roses and carnations. A basket of the new pink rose, Sweet Marie, took everybody's eye. The company reports an active business.

John P. Brown reports business good. James Cusick, of his place, has resigned his position.

Mrs. W. G. Parks, of Jermyn, Pa., was a caller last week. She reports business fair.

T. B. McClintock is cutting some fine Chrysolora mums, which sell readily.

F. W. Mackey reports a heavy call for Boston and Whitmani ferns. He is also cutting excellent mums.

Baldwin the Florist has been doing a big business during the last week. His windows are always attractive. He is cutting some first-class carnations and chrysanthemums, but not enough to supply the demand. F. J. M.

I THANK The Review for good results. —Charles Taynor, New Carlisle, O.

The Market.

Trade has been quite satisfactory for the last two weeks. Mums are becoming more plentiful and are finding a good market. Roses are meeting with a good call and some first-class stock is available. Carnations are plentiful and of good quality. Beauties have been a little short and only of fair quality, but are improving. Orchids and valley have been finding a fair demand.

Various Notes.

S. S. Skidelsky spent a couple of days with the trade here last week.

Irwin Bertermann is spending a few days at French Lick.

Hartje & Elder cut about the first pompons that appeared in the market this season.

E. A. Nelson has just returned from a fishing trip.

Claude Morrison has taken a position with the Hill Floral Co.

A. Wiegand's Sons Co. has been busy with decorations of late. Trade has been brisk with this firm this month.

The Pahud Floral Co. has discontinued the use of horses and is using autos altogether.

Baur & Steinkamp have been cutting some first-class carnations of late. Some of the blooms of their numerous new seedlings have been finding ready sale over the counter. H. L. W.

A shortage of stock has existed in this vicinity for three weeks. Some fine Chrysolora, Robert Halliday, Virginia Poehlmann, Nakota, Golden and Alice Salomon are to be seen on the market.

Hartje & Elder sent in the first batch of pompons. The consignment sold readily.

The Smith & Young Co. reports a rushing business. The demand for stock has been so great that cut flowers are sold to the highest bidder at auction.

Baur & Steinkamp are sending in their usual high grade carnations, in novelties for counter trade. They have some well-grown Begonia Gloire de Chatelaine also, and dwarf Jerusalem cherries in 5-inch pans.

The Claypool Hotel Florist is kept busy these days with decorations for the numerous conventions held in the hotel by Indiana organizations. They have felt an exceptional demand for roses and orchids of late.

Several Indianapolis florists expect to attend the Chicago and Cleveland shows.

New Nephrolepis Fern

JOHN WANAMAKER

In presenting this fern to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself.

A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzeli, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzeli, and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis.

Strong plants from 2¼-inch pots, $8.00 per doz., $20.00 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

The following ready for delivery:
4-inch pots, $50.00 per 100; 6-inch pots, $1.00 each; 8-inch pots, $2.00 each; specimens in tubs, $5.00 each.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been brisk lately, with a good supply of stock. Roses are excellent and at times there is a surplus to dispose of, owing to the quantity of chrysanthemums, which now cut a large figure in the business. Most of the early mums are disposed of and the midseason ones are making their appearance. Some good mums are seen, including Turner, Roman Gold and Appleton. As a rule they are used up closely and Monday found several of the craft on the hunt for stock.

Carnations are coming in heavily, but are about all used each day. Valley is a little more plentiful and meets with a ready sale. Lilies are more abundant than a while back, but the demand for them is not extra heavy. There is a considerable demand for potted mums, but nothing of extra quality is to be seen. Ferns are moving nicely. There have been a few sweet peas on the market. Snapdragons will be scarce, judging by the looks of the stock now, as most growers have cut them out.

Various Notes.

Mr. Clark, of the Green-Joyce flower department, reports large sales of ferns, in which they have special sales every few days. Other trade also is good.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. reports mums "cut to the minute," but plenty of carnations and roses.

Sam Graff says business is about all that can be expected, with mums slacking up in quantity.

The Livingston Seed Co. has been running short on mums, as not so many were planted as last season. Carnations also are ready sellers and it is difficult to keep enough of them on hand. The members of the firm's auto delivery force now wear uniforms.

Miss Thompson, of the Columbus Floral Co., entertained the Social Club at her home and everyone reports a good time. The next meeting is planned for about November 2, but it is not yet decided who will be the entertainer.

The Columbus Floral Co. is cutting just about enough mums for its own use. The company is cutting some single violets; the first lot came in on Saturday, October 23. J. M.

Topeka, Kan.—James Hayes now delivers his flowers by means of a spick-and-span auto truck.

NEPHROLEPIS VERONA

GERANIUMS

It is the consensus of opinion that the supply of Geraniums is going to be somewhat short this coming season, on account of so many growers being short of stock plants. Our stock was never in better condition than it is now, so that we anticipate no difficulty whatever in filling orders; but at the same time we would suggest that the surest way is to let us book your order at an early date. New catalogue and price list for 1916 is ready for distribution; a request will bring it if accompanied by a business card.

We have a splendid lot of Geraniums in 3-inch pots, ready for shipment, just right for the southern trade or winter blooming, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

Coleus, Moonvines, Heliotropes, Lemon Verbenas, Parlor Ivy, Ageratum, Alyssum, Alternantheras, Salvias, from 2-inch pots, at $2.00 per 100; 3-inch pots, $3.00 per 100.

The Market.

The unusual scarcity of stock that prevailed last week has eased up a little, but the supply of good stock is by no means equal to the demand. Mums are becoming more plentiful, but they readily bring from $2 to $3 per dozen. Yellow mums were in heavy demand October 23, owing to the game at Ann Arbor, and hundreds were disposed of at good prices. Yellow pompons also were in demand.

The many social events—the social calendar is crowded this year—are keeping the market sold out in roses, especially the short-stemmed stock. Carnations are improving daily and retail readily at from 75 cents to $1 per dozen. These prices are for blooms that later could hardly be given away.

Various Notes.

Henry Forster, chief adjutant for E. A. Fetters, will live in the handsome apartments over Mr. Fetters' new store.

Hugo Schroeter, Inc., was the first to display Halloween decorations in the windows this year. In the largest window there was a ghostly barnyard scene, with several ghosts peeking from behind gates and shocks of corn. This window was especially effective at night, when the lights in the ghosts' heads became more marked. In the smaller window was a Halloween table covered with black crepe paper having a fringe of Dennison decorative paper in black and white. On the table were three centerpieces made up in heads of red cabbage, also candlesticks and several young ghosts. Novelty baskets filled with pompons, corn, etc., completed the window.

The E. A. Fetters staff was on the jump October 23 with orders for three wedding decorations. Mr. Fetters appears to have the cream of the wedding orders this October.

Frank Farney, of the M. Rice Co., was in town this week.

Hereafter the meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club will begin at 6:30 p. m., instead of 6. The first annual meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Detroit Florists' Club will be held October 29, in the studio of the Bemb Floral Co.

John Carey was busily engaged October 25 in decorating his window for Halloween. Mr. Carey displayed a fine assortment of yellow mums in baskets, and pot plants trimmed with the colors of the University of Michigan. H. S.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

The Rosendale Greenhouses are in fine shape, full of blooms of all kinds, especially some of the finest mums grown in this vicinity.

The houses of Charles Eger, on State street, never looked so nice, as Mr. Eger is putting out fine stock from his store on Albany street.

J. W. H. Grupe, 252 Broadway, has a fine and large stock, geraniums, coleus, primroses, ferns of all kinds and general bedding stock.

Julius Eger has been remodeling his store and now has as nice a place as can be found in the state.

M. P. Champlin is holding his own so far as trade is concerned.

M. H. Morrell, 4 Cornelius avenue, has his house as full as can be and still grow good stock. He has a fine lot of Erfordii and Prima Donna begonias, also plumosus, and expects to have a fine stock of S. A. Nutt geraniums and other varieties. He has planted a large stock of bulbs for Easter.

E. V. B. Felthousen is prepared for fall with any amount of stock, and especially a grand display of mums. He is strong on carnations and bedding plants.

Gilbert Elliott's houses of mums are fine and coming right along. His general line of plants all look fine. He is busy putting bulbs in pots for Easter.

Matthews & Varney report excellent business and have their houses full to the brim. M. M.

A Garland "Little Wonder" Spraying Nozzle

DAVIS & STEINER
OTTAWA, ILL.

October 15th, 1915.

Garland Manufacturing Co.,
Des Plaines, Ill.

Gentlemen:—

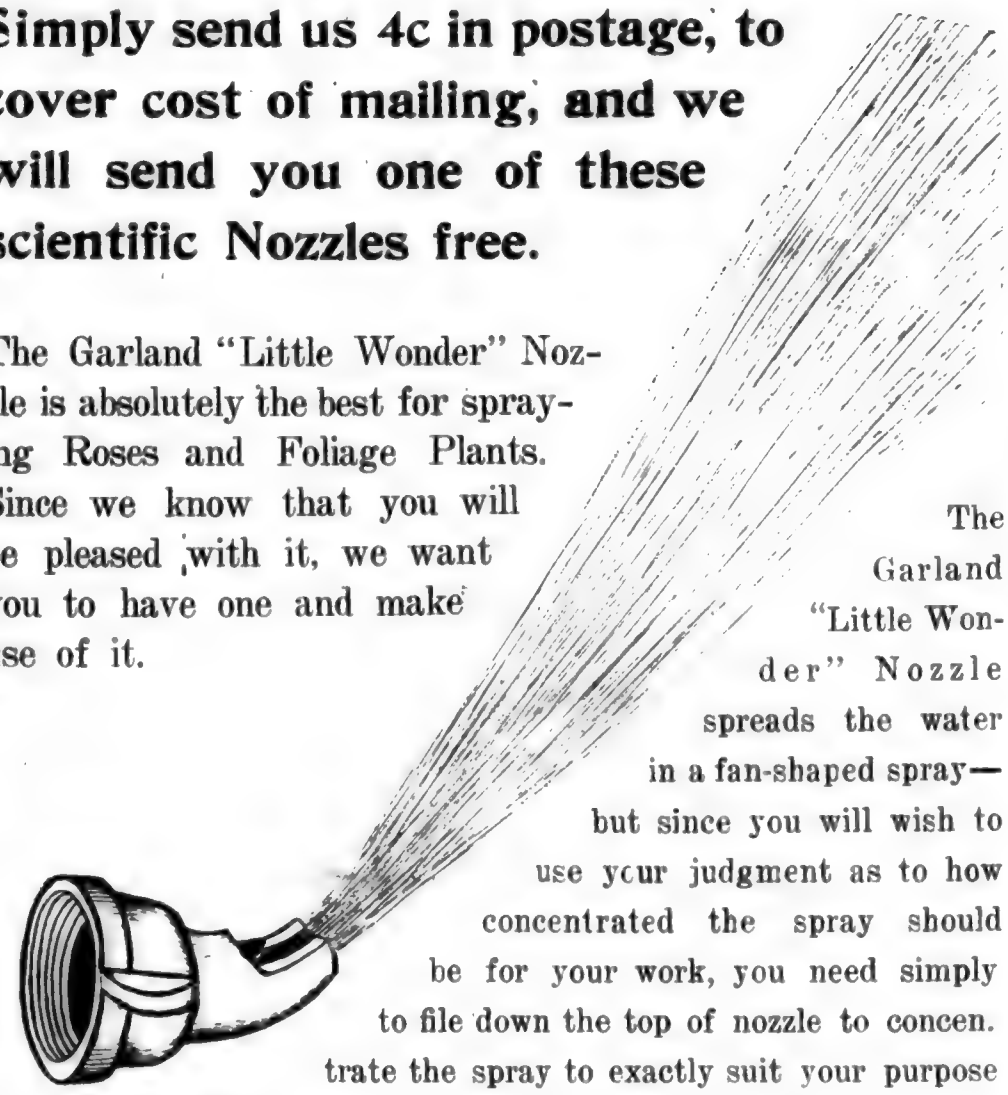
We are so pleased with our new house at Ottawa that we must tell you about it.

All of our houses built previous to this one are of wood frame, some with wood and some with iron gutters. We were not satisfied with this class of house, so investigated carefully the different types of construction. We were favorably impressed with your steel frame construction, and after giving the important factors of light, strength, durability and cost due consideration we decided that you have the best on the market.

We are more pleased than ever, now that the house is a reality. To comprehend the advantages of this construction one must really see this wonderful house. The interior is as light as outside; the air is perfect, and the construction is as strong as a bridge. Each of these are vital factors in greenhouse construction.

Your method of supporting heating pipes on castings imbedded in cement walks is the best we ever saw.

We had fear that owing to the bad weather all summer you would be unable to have the house completed on time, but we are glad this was all borrowed trouble, and that all was completed ahead of the time specified. Mr. Winandy deserves much credit for this, as it proves him a very thorough and careful builder.



We want to thank you for the courtesies shown us, and hope you will be able to make other greenhouse men as happy as we are.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) DAVIS & STEINER.

Simply send us 4c in postage, to cover cost of mailing, and we will send you one of these scientific Nozzles free.

The Garland "Little Wonder" Nozzle is absolutely the best for spraying Roses and Foliage Plants. Since we know that you will be pleased with it, we want you to have one and make use of it.

The Garland "Little Wonder" Nozzle spreads the water in a fan-shaped spray—but since you will wish to use your judgment as to how concentrated the spray should be for your work, you need simply to file down the top of nozzle to concentrate the spray to exactly suit your purpose

Sometime you, or someone you know, will wish to build a new greenhouse. Since we are growers as well as builders, we will know exactly what you need. Read what Messrs. Davis & Steiner, of Ottawa, Ill., say in the letter above about the 900x76 ft. Garland New Type Steel Frame House which we have just completed for them. When you are ready to build we can do just as well for you, so don't fail to let us know. Be sure and send for the "Little Wonder" Nozzle today.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

CAPACITY OF STEAM BOILER.

Will you please inform me how many square feet of glass a 3-horsepower boiler will heat by steam?

W. G. B. S.—Ohio.

It is customary to figure that 100 square feet of steam radiation can be handled for each horsepower in a boiler. This would be sufficient for 600 square feet of glass, if a temperature of 60 degrees is desired in sections where the mercury does not drop much below zero. However, it is advisable to shade this estimate somewhat, except in the case of large boilers, and with one as small as 3-horsepower I would not expect to heat more than 800 or 900 square feet of glass. Even with this amount, frequent firing will be necessary.

With a 20-inch grate about 900 square feet of glass can be heated to 60 degrees with 150 square feet of radiation, or 1,200 square feet can be heated to 50 degrees. The same grate and boiler will heat the foregoing amount of glass more economically when piped for hot water, but nearly twice as much radiation should be provided. The attention required will also be greatly reduced.

WISHES TO USE 3-INCH PIPE.

I have a range of six houses, which I wish to heat with hot water. Five of the houses run east and west and all of these are 10x110, except the violet house at the south side, which is 7x110. The north wall of the range is six feet high; the lower two and one-half feet are concrete and the rest of the wall is glass. The south wall of the violet house is three feet high, and consists of one and one-half feet of wood and one and one-half feet of glass. At the east end of the 10-foot houses is a lean-to, 18x40 feet, with 6-foot walls. I wish to know whether two 3-inch runs of pipe in each house will maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather, and whether a 14-horsepower upright boiler will provide heat enough for the six houses. The boiler is set ten feet below the floor of the greenhouses. S. H. B.—Ky.

For a temperature of 60 degrees, in a house ten feet wide, three 3-inch pipes will be required and an additional pipe should be used in the outer house, which has three and one-half feet additional glass. It would be preferable, however, to run a 2½-inch flow pipe on each wall and connect each of them with a coil of two 2-inch returns, using three returns on the north wall. To heat the 7-foot violet house, two 2-inch returns would suffice. These may be connected with one of the flows in the south house.

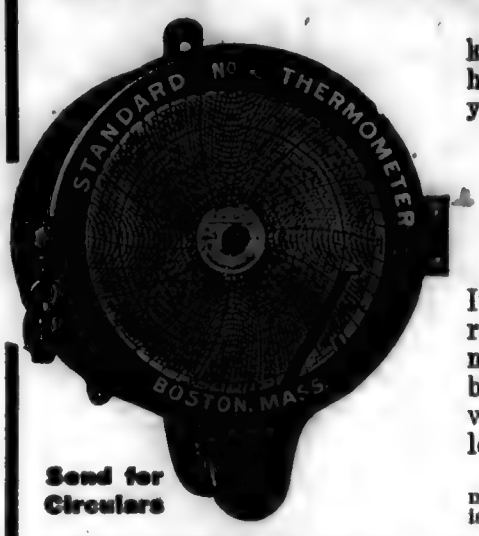
While a 14-horsepower boiler might answer for heating the houses, I would prefer a boiler rated for at least twenty horsepower.

CONNECT DIRECTLY TO BOILER.

Please tell us how many runs of 2-inch pipe will be needed to heat our greenhouse, which is 20x50. Also state where to locate the pipes to get the best results. We want a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees in zero weather. The house runs east and west. One side wall is fifty-four inches high; the other is thirty-five inches high. Both these walls are concrete, except that there are sixteen inches of glass on the south side. One end of the house is glass above the eaves; the other end adjoins our residence. The height from floor to gable is twelve feet.

We have another greenhouse, and both it and the residence are heated with hot water. The hot water boiler is in the basement, under the dwelling. Can we connect the new piping to the pipes that heat the other greenhouse, or shall we connect at the boiler? The boiler has only two more connections for flows and two for returns. It is a 5-section hot water boiler.

E. E. K. & S.—Kan.



For heating a greenhouse 20x50 to 60 degrees, I would use three 2-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns. It does not seem to be clear whether one or two boilers will be used, but if both greenhouses and the dwelling are to be heated from one boiler, I would certainly connect the flow and return pipes in the house 20x50 directly with the boiler. The size of the boiler ports is not given, but if they are smaller than 2½-inch, I would still use that size of pipe for the main flow and return pipes and reduce them at the boiler to 2-inch.

Place one of the flow pipes upon each side wall plate and the other under the ridge, with four of the returns on the walls underneath, or under the side benches, and the others under the middle bench.

PIPING ONE DETACHED HOUSE.

I should like to have you figure the heating on house No. 1, as shown on the enclosed sketch. You will notice that the house to be heated is separated from the other house by an open space of twelve feet. Please state the right number and size of flows and returns and describe the most efficient arrangement. Should all the returns be placed on the wall posts? Which system would give best satisfaction, uphill, downhill or level? The temperature required is

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

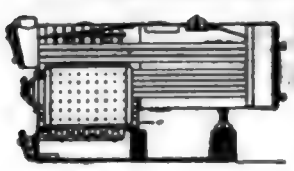
required to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees in zero weather.

I would run two 3-inch pipes to the house and carry one of them as a flow pipe on the south wall. With the other 3-inch pipe, supply two 2½-inch flows, one to be carried on the north wall and the other about three feet under the ridge, to the west end of the house. On the south wall place a coil of five 2-inch returns, which should be carried across the east end and back to where the flow pipes enter the house, unless there is a door in the end of the house, in which case the coil would stop at the door and a 3-inch pipe would connect it with the boiler. On the north wall place a coil of four 2-inch returns and supply the same number of returns from the middle flow pipe. The flow pipes should run downhill, at least after they enter the greenhouse.

PIPING TWO 15-FOOT HOUSES.



Please give me suggestions for the piping of the following houses for hot water heat: House No. 1 is 15x50 and ten feet high to the ridge, with two feet of concrete and three feet of glass in the side walls. House No. 2 is 15x50 and nine feet to the ridge, with 3-foot concrete side walls and no side glass. I wish to place the return pipes under the benches. How far below the returns must the bottom of the boiler be? I want a temperature of about 60 degrees. C. R.—Ohio.

While it is preferable to have the top of the boiler below the level of the returns, this is not absolutely necessary, especially if the flows are on the wall plates.

To heat house No. 1 to 60 degrees, I would run a 2½-inch flow pipe on each of the plates and connect each of them with a coil of five 2-inch returns. Give the flows as well as the returns a slight fall. In house No. 2, which is of the same size as No. 1, but has no glass in the side walls, the use of two 2½-inch flow pipes and two coils containing three 2-inch pipes, as returns, should give the desired temperature.

Mr. Allen says:
"I used Dixon's Silica-Graphite Paint on hot water pipes 16 years ago. The pipes are still free from rust. It is by far the most serviceable paint for the purpose."—C. H. Allen, Florist, Floral Park, N. Y.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

The somewhat earlier arrival of a killing frost this year has helped to make October sales run heavier than those for the same month of a number of years. Business, locally, in all lines, seems to be on the upgrade. The florists anticipate a good year.

The frost created a lively demand for outdoor flowers. This activity and the large amount of funeral work has made October a banner month.

There is a large supply of fine mums and just about enough carnations and roses are cut to go the rounds. Lilies are scarce. Some fine violets are coming in from both field and bench, but in another week all will be under glass. A recent cloudy spell brought mildew to some of the roses, but with the return of sunshine the mildew is being cleared out.

The Holland bulbs are on display in all the department stores, but the stores are not having it all their own way this year, for some of the florists are meeting the competition with low prices and lots of printers' ink.

Various Notes.

Henry Smith reports October business as being good and says he expects to attend the Cleveland show.

The Eli Cross store force has been busy with several large funeral orders.

Fine orchids are being shown by the Alfred Hannah Floral Co.

James Schols is picking some extra fine violets. His violets are not all benched, but will be next week.

A. F. C.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business was livelier last week. There are plenty of chrysanthemums and a good demand for them. Carnations are better than they have been and are selling well. Several large weddings during the week stimulated trade to a great extent.

Various Notes.

At a meeting of the executive and entertainment committees of the New Bedford Horticultural Society, held recently at the home of Frank H. Tripp, it was decided to hold the annual chrysanthemum show November 9 and 10. An additional silver cup was offered by Mr. Benson, of Boston, for the best six vases, three blooms to a vase, of six distinct varieties.

James Gaethley, of Fairhaven, has finished moving his range and reports business as rapidly improving.

An excellent week of business is reported by Julius the Florist, proprietor of the Flower Mart.

William Pierce is to be complimented on the window displays he has made recently. He is at some disadvantage, having a rather small window, but the taste used is excellent.

Post & Gray report their usual call for palms and ferns. They are cutting some excellent mums, which find a ready market.

Among the local florists who will exhibit at the coming mum show are Peter Murray, the Peckham Floral Co. and James Gaethley, all of Fairhaven, and S. E. Shaw and Post & Gray, of this city.

The Market.

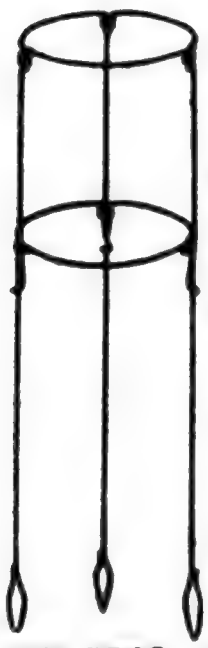
Business seems to have decreased since the last report, but not enough to cause any complaint. Stock of all kinds has become more plentiful. Chrysanthemums and roses are in heavier supply and carnations are gradually improving in quality and increasing in quantity. Lilies and valley, which have been scarce, now appear to be more plentiful and of better quality. Yellow pompon chrysanthemums are good. Orchids are plentiful and the demand for them is heavy. Violets are arriving, but they are nothing extra. They meet an indifferent demand. As a whole, business is much better than last year.

Various Notes.

The McCallum Co. has sold its Cleveland store to W. Q. Potter. George Marshall has been elected vice-president of the company.

A. E. Grass, stockman for the A. W. Smith Co., is feeling rather proud these days and has been quite liberal with his cigars. It's a boy.

John Jones, foreman at Phipps Conservatory, is a busy man at present. He is making preparations for his fall show, which means that all the plants in several large houses must be moved to make room for the chrysanthemum display. The show will open about November 1. The mums are all pot-grown this year and are of exceptional quality.



Nuemberg & Boyle, Turtle Creek, Pa., are the proprietors of one of the new flower stores opened this fall.

Randolph & McClements had a special window display of asters and other flowers, which caused considerable comment among the trade. Every florist's window in the city is attractively trimmed. It is safe to say that in no other trade has there been so great an improvement in window decorations as in the florists' trade.

The death of Henry Baldinger is reported in this week's obituary column.

The retail stores had splendid window displays of dahlias last week. Mrs. E. A. Williams secured a unique color effect by the use of dahlias, ribbons, crotons and ferns. Clarke.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

There was a complete reversal of business conditions in this city last week. Instead of being hard pushed to secure enough stock to fill all orders, the wholesale and commission houses found all sorts of flowers coming into the market in such quantities as to produce a glut. Up to the first part of the week dahlias found a ready sale and were received in safe quantities. Now, regardless of quality, they fail to find a purchaser. Cosmos is overplentiful and, with the market glutted with it and dahlias, considerable difficulty is experienced in marketing chrysanthemums.

The carnation market is similarly hit. It is hard to get even $3 per hundred for carnations. The supply has increased greatly. During the first two weeks in October there were many occasions when the dealers had to refuse orders for valley and the price went to $5 per hundred. Easter lilies were quite scarce and often there were not enough of these to fill all calls. This situation also has changed. Valley has declined to $1 per hundred and Easter lilies go begging. Yellow daisies have again made their appearance in small quantities and meet with occasional sales. Single violets of local production are now in fine shape and are bringing as high as 75 cents per hundred. The supply of roses is not heavy, but there are enough to meet all demands.

There was no great rush of business last week, but the wholesalers were well satisfied with results. A few large funeral orders and wedding decorations produced some activity at the retail stores. Trade is amply up to the standard for this time of the year. In all probability business for October will show an increase over the same month of last year.

Various Notes.

Walter Hawley, of the Gude Bros. Co., visited New York last week, having been placed in charge of several hundred dollars' worth of funeral designs representing tributes from this city to the late Robert B. Ward. While in New York, Mr. Hawley called at a number of the wholesale and commission houses to get a line on market conditions.

Among the visiting florists and traveling men who stopped at Washington last week were William F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.; Henry C. Heilemann, representing William B. Lake, of Philadelphia; S. Nusbaum, of Clarksburg, W. Va., and Joseph J. Goudy, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia.

Frederick H. Kramer is extending the display window of his store at 916 F street, northwest, an additional eleven feet, taking in the entrance to the upper floors of the building. This will give him a large space for display purposes. Mr. Kramer states that other improvements will be commenced when the work now in hand is completed.

Frank Good, formerly manager of the store of Frederick H. Kramer, recently went to New York on a vacation. Apparently he became homesick while there and decided to remain permanently. He has sent his resignation to Mr. Kramer and is reported to have secured a position with a firm by whom he was formerly employed. C. L. L.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

AUTUMN SHOWS HAVE BEGUN

The fall flower shows are on and are showing continued advance in quality of stock and attractiveness of arrangement. The season is one of abundance in cut flower markets, so that commercial growers can well afford to make the most of this best of all opportunities to attract the favorable attention of the flower-buying public.

THE MADISON SHOW.

First of the Autumn Exhibitions.

The twentieth annual flower show of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society opened at Madison, N. J., October 28. The weather was perfect and the attendance fully up to expectations. This society holds a record for its long, uninterrupted series of flower shows and they have now progressed to a point where they are considered the society event of the county; consequently the attendance is notably large and yet exclusive, as Madison, Morristown and the surrounding towns are the country homes of a great many millionaires.

The consensus of opinion seemed to be that the chrysanthemum blooms exhibited were finer than ever before. In these the awards were as follows:

Thirty-six flowers, six varieties, six of each—First, Wm. Duckham, superintendent for Mrs. D. Willis James, Madison, N. J., with Lady Hopetoun, Mrs. G. Lloyd Wigg, Bob Pulling, Mrs. David Syme, Pres. Viger and a beautiful yellow seedling of his own, not yet named.

Eighteen flowers, six varieties, three of each—First, Ernest Wild, superintendent for C. W. Harkness, Madison, N. J., with beautiful specimens of Mrs. Gilbert Drabble, Bob Pulling, Beatrice May, Lady Hopetoun and Mrs. R. C. Pulling; second, Jas. Fraser, superintendent of the O. H. Kahn estate, Morristown, N. J.

Twelve flowers, twelve varieties, in one vase—First, John Downing, superintendent for Dr. McAlpin, Morris Plains, N. J., with wonderful blooms of Jas. Fraser, Lady Hopetoun and Pockett's Crimson; second, Jas. Fraser; third, Peter Duff, superintendent for Mrs. J. Crosby Brown, Orange, N. J. Mr. Fraser showed Elberon and Lord Kitchener among his flowers in this class.

Ten flowers, any yellow variety—First, John Downing, with F. S. Vallis.

Ten flowers, any white variety—First, John Downing, with Antigone.

Ten flowers, any pink variety—First, John Downing, with Reginald Vallis.

Ten flowers, any other color—First, John Downing, with M. Mason.

Twenty-four flowers, twenty-four distinct varieties, stem not to exceed twelve inches, to be shown in single vases—First, Wm. Duckham, his finest varieties being Bob Pulling, J. Purroy Mitchel, F. S. Vallis, Jas. Fraser, Earl Kitchener and some fine seedlings.

Special prizes offered by Pierson U-Bar Co., New York, for twelve flowers, three varieties, four of each, in three vases, stems twenty-four inches—First, Ernest Wild; second, Jas. Fraser. The most notable variety in both exhibits was Jas. Fraser.

The silver cup offered by Hitchings & Co., New York, for twelve flowers, twelve distinct varieties, stems not to exceed twelve inches, in single vases, was won by James Fraser, his most notable flowers being his namesake, Jas. G. Fraser, Mrs. R. C. Pulling and Earl Kitchener; second, John Downing, with Pockett's Crimson, B. May, F. S. Vallis and Earl Kitchener; third, Robt. Tyson, superintendent for Mrs. H. McK. Twombley, Convent, N. J.

Six flowers, six distinct varieties; stems not to exceed twelve inches, in single vases—First, Peter Duff, his best blooms being Loiseau Rousseau, Mrs. Gilbert Drabble and Lady Hopetoun; second, W. G. Carter, superintendent at the J. W. Harriman estate, Bernardsville, N. J.; third, Fred Huyler, superintendent at Hamilton Farms, Gladstone, N. J.

Six flowers, six varieties, 1914 introduction, 12-inch stems, single vases—First, Ernest Wild, with Mrs. R. C. Pulling, Mrs. Ernest Wild, Bob Pulling, Mrs. H. J. Jones and Meudon.

Six flowers, any pink variety—First, Ernest Wild.

Six flowers, any white variety—First, Jas. Fraser, with Mrs. Syme; second, A. Sailer, superintendent for J. Gordon Douglas, Morristown, N. J.

Six flowers, any yellow variety—This witnessed the return of Col. Appleton to the exhibition stage; it was shown in wonderful shape by Geo. Fisher, superintendent for Morris Kinney, Butler, N. J., who was awarded first; second, Jas. Fraser, with his namesake, Jas. Fraser.

Six flowers, any crimson variety—First, John Downing; second, Jas. Fraser.

Six flowers, any other color—First, Jas. Fraser; second, Geo. Fisher, who featured Chrysanthemum C. H. Totty in his exhibit.

One vase of flowers with other foliage, arranged for effect—First, Wm. Duckham, with a beautiful exhibit composed largely of his own seedlings, forming one of the spectacular features of the show; second, Robert Tyson.

Singles and pompon classes—C. H. Totty scored first for ten vases pompons, ten varieties, six sprays to a vase; also for ten vases singles, ten varieties, six sprays to a vase, and for six vases singles, six varieties, six sprays to a vase.

Largest flower in the show—First, Ernest Wild, for a bloom of Bob Pulling.

Special prize, offered by Vaughan's Seed Store, New York, for six blooms Wm. Turner—First, Jas. Fraser; second, John Downing. Wm. Turner does not flower naturally until the end of the first week in November, but Mr. Fraser cleverly utilized an electric light in his greenhouse at night directly over the blooms of Wm. Turner, and in this way had them sufficiently developed to win this prize.

One vase of five flowers, any variety not previously exhibited—First, C. H. Totty, with Yellow Drabble; this prize was a silver medal.

THE SAN FRANCISCO SHOW.

Largest Yet Held on Coast.

The fall flower show at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, the opening of which was reported in last week's issue of the Review, closed October 26, and unquestionably was the most successful exhibition that has ever been held on the Pacific coast. It was well advertised locally and, with the added attraction of the exposition, which had several other special events during the period, the attendance was remarkably heavy, the large space devoted to the show being fairly crowded almost constantly throughout the six days. The attendance included practically everybody interested in flowers in the vicinity of San Francisco, and a good number of growers and florists from up and down the coast. Without indulging in superlatives, it may safely be said that, in extent, variety and merit of exhibits, and in the manner in which most of them were staged, the show compared well with any similar event ever held in the west. Several of the entries were exhibited here for the first time and many of them were of remarkably high quality. The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society and the Chrysanthemum Society of America coöperated to add interest to the affair.

General Arrangement.

Chrysanthemums, now at their best, were naturally the central feature and were suitably located around the palms under the central dome of the Palace of Horticulture, where they had plenty of space. These exhibits included some magnificent flowers, probably never surpassed anywhere. The large room at the entrance to the building was used for dahlias, begonias, annuals, etc. While the dahlias were past their prime, some fine flowers were shown, including many seedlings of great interest. Also the seedling tuberous begonias were exceptionally fine. Another large room opening off the central rotunda was used for the exhibits of orchids, cyclamens, palms, ferns, etc.

Awards on Mums.

Of the special prizes for cut chrysanthemums, the highest honors rested with the Lynch Nursery Co., of Menlo Park, which took the silver cup of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, for the ten blooms of one variety on long stems; also the gold medal in the Wells-Totty contest for three blooms of Earl Kitchener; the Dreer prize for six blooms, any one white variety on long stem; the first Elmer D. Smith prize for six blooms, two white, two yellow and two pink, staged in separate vases, and the H. F. Michell gold medal for twelve mums, one flower of each variety. P. Dahlias and Begonias.

The dahlia exhibits, though perhaps not so fine on the average as those shown in September, were highly creditable for this time of year. Among the most notable entries were those of Miss Ruth C. Gleadell, of 6151 Geary street, San Francisco, the Bessie Boston Dahlia Farm, of San Mateo, and the productions of Wm. Kettlewell, entered under the name of George A. Pope. In addition to the prizes scheduled in this division, the Bessie Boston Dahlia Farm received a special award on its excellent exhibit of collarette dahlias, of which a great number were shown. Another special prize, for a large collection of seedling dahlias, was awarded to Fenton's Dahlia Farm, of 771 Buena Vista avenue.

The exhibits of tuberous begonias, though few in number of entries, were large and varied, and received fully as much attention as any other feature of the show. Henry E. Bothin, a private grower of Ross, had probably the best and most interesting begonia exhibit ever shown in San Francisco, all his own seedlings. The Vallance Nursery Co., taking second prize, also had a nice exhibit.

While almost the only exhibitor of orchids was J. A. Carbone, of Berkeley, it can hardly be said that the show was deficient in orchids. He brought out the largest collection ever staged in this city, and the display received high commendation, both for the flowers and the arrangement. Mr. Carbone received all the first prizes.

PROLONGING A FEVERFEW CROP.

Will you tell us how to have a continuous supply of feverfew? We grow nice feverfew, but it all blooms about June 1 and by August 10 it is all over; yet we see it in the market as late as October 10. We should like to know how to grow it so as to have a late crop. L. M. S. & C.—Del.

Sow the feverfew outdoors, or start it in a coldframe and plant outdoors. A fair proportion will come double, but not all. If you are able, under your present arrangements, to secure a crop until August 10, after that the seedlings, if started in April, would be ready to finish the season. Feverfew, however, is not much in favor through the summer. It has a disagreeable odor, and there are other more desirable flowers in season, such as asters, which are much more salable. C. W.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

PLAIN OR FANCY.

Now Is the Time to Decide.

Thanksgiving is one of the days that give the florist his best chance to use his daily papers—it is a day on which a few flowers might well be purchased by everyone well enough to do to have a holiday dinner; certainly by everyone who has guests to dinner.

Now is the time to get ready. Don't put it off. Plan the advertising now, but first plan something to advertise. No use advertising "Flowers for Sale." Give your readers a definite idea.

You can run a plain or fancy ad, as you elect, but the idea in the ad is more important. For instance, of the two advertisements reproduced herewith, the less elaborate got its message across just as surely as the fancy one. (Each is reproduced one-fourth its original size.) Here are the words of Johnston Bros., Providence:

"We are enclosing sample of one of the advertisements that we used last Thanksgiving, from which we got good results. We thought that it might help some of the other florists in pushing the business for Thanksgiving. We also found that by pushing baskets we doubly increased our sales in that line alone and got rid of quite a few."

Plan something now. Push baskets of flowers, if you so elect, but in any case do something besides keeping the store open to increase your sales.

MR. BATTLE'S LATEST.

The Art Vase Shop.

Last April the Art Vase Shop was opened in Philadelphia by H. H. Battles. The enterprise is unique, for nowhere in the country is there a shop like it. Mr. Battles owns and operates three shops on Twelfth street, below Chestnut street—his own flower shop, where the finest flowers are offered and appropriately arranged; the Century Flower Shop, where the stock is chosen with the aim of offering good value and where everything displayed is priced; the Art Vase Shop.

The handsome show window of the Art Vase Shop usually contains one or two styles of vases or distinct makes of pottery, selected with thought as to their size, form, color and general effect. In its way, this window is more striking than a well arranged florists' window because of the unusual opportunity it affords for attracting the attention of those passing on the street. The interior of the Art Vase Shop is large and commodious; the ceilings are high, the light unusually good, and every natural advantage has been utilized. The first glance over the store is suggestive of beauty and brightness, a kaleidoscope of soft color carefully prepared to feast the eye. Closer inspection reveals a wonderful selection of artistic treasures. Vases, every one of them. Vases from the Orient, vases from sunny Italy, vases from England, from France and from Germany—vases from all parts of our own great country. No effort has been spared, no time grudged and no money stinted in gathering these vases. You feel instinctively that the work of a master hand is here before you. For could any ordinary, everyday mind imagine the possibilities of vases? Could any ordinary, everyday energy have gathered this collection?

Vases Like Pictures.

But what are the possibilities in vases? Perhaps some idea of them may be gleaned from the progress already made. A beautiful floral gift is selected for a debutante's tea, a gift expressive of simplicity and beauty in flowers. This floral offering is as incomplete without a suitable vase as a picture without a frame. The simile of the picture without a frame applies exactly to such a floral gift. The flowers may be lost without a vase of daintiness, form and color to set them off. Then, too, the vase is valued for its own sake and for its memories long after the occasion.

The study of vases is as complex and as full of refinement and taste as the study of pictures. The variety is as great. It seems, as the eye wanders over the shop, as though the old adage of as many minds as men might have here read as many vases. For originality is the aim of the Art Vase Shop. It is not desired to have twelve of a kind, or six vases alike, but rather that each gift, each purchase should be as original as possible. Suppose, for instance, that the iridescent glass vase now so popular happens to occur to several persons for the same teas. They all go to the Art Vase Shop to select their gift, and are all pleased, each and every one of them, that their own particular selection displays originality, instead of being so much like someone else's that no one could possibly tell them apart.

The arrangement of the Art Vase Shop is extremely interesting. Certain potteries are here and are given places to themselves. Harmony and form, contrast in color and their opposites appear with sufficient frequency to rivet attention. Occasionally a plant or flower shows the purpose of the vase and varies the effect. The center of the shop is occupied by a tall glass vase filled with snapdragons. This vase is set in a glass, water-filled bowl, so broad and low as to resemble a miniature lake, with a few sprays of foliage and flowers floating on its surface. It is interesting to know that these miniature lakes furnish sufficient moisture to the air to prolong the life of the flowers in the water-filled vase above.

Objects of Virtu.

Last summer a mezzanine floor was added to the Art Vase Shop. This floor contains many interesting objects, including a collection of Indian vases and another from a far western pottery. The effect from the top of the stairway looking down on the shop below is even more striking than the one from the doorway.

Many vases are selected expressly for their color, color that is either beautiful in itself or beautiful in its perfect harmony with some flower. Its fitness for this particular flower also depends on form and depth. The possibilities of decorative art in pottery may be faintly imagined from a comparison of the work on different vases of the same style. One was so perfect in its delicate tracery, not a single line blurred or overdone, as to seem worthy of highest praise. Yet it sank into second place when compared with another that was a work of genius. The comparative values of these two vases, while lost on the uninitiated, are quickly seen by the connoisseur.

The values of the vases on display ran from trifling to large amounts. Nearly all were intended for utility as well as for beauty, though some were only ornamental. Their makes ran through every known material and combination of materials susceptible to fine artistic finish. Some, such as copper-colored glass, are so cunningly devised that they trap the unwary into thinking them metal. The practical lesson that one learns in vases is that no pottery of plain earthenware is waterproof without shellac or some kindred preparation inside.

THE BEST PEONIES.

Will you please give us the name of the best peony in each color for cut flower purposes for our home trade? We had intended using P. festiva for white. Also, is it permitted to use nursery stock for local delivery without first having it inspected by the state? S. & S.—Ohio.

While it is difficult to name the "best" peony, if I were restricted to one in each color I would say the four best commercial peony varieties would be Mme. de Verneville, white; delicatissima, light pink; Modeste Guerin, deep pink; Felix Crousse, clear red.

No one is allowed, in any of our states, to sell nursery stock which has not been favorably passed upon by the state examiner. W. A. Peterson.

PLANTING IRISES AND PEONIES.

I am going to plant 100,000 irises this fall and should like to know how deep to set them, and how far apart. What fertilizer should be used, and how much? I should also like to get the same information about peonies.

E. M. D.—Va.

You do not state what variety of iris you have. If it is I. Germanica, cover the stools three inches. The plants can go in nursery rows twenty-four inches apart, allowing twelve inches between the plants, or, if you are to use horse cultivation, run the rows three to three and one-half feet apart if you can spare the ground. Or you can plant four rows a foot apart, and then leave a path of twenty-four or thirty inches for hand cultivation. Allow I. Kæmpferi, the Japanese iris, twenty-four inches between the plants and thirty-six inches between the rows. Bulbous irises, such as Hispanica and Anglica, can go six inches apart in the rows. If in beds three feet wide, you can plant seven rows. Cover these four inches deep.

Cover the eyes of the peonies four inches deep. Allow twenty-four inches between the plants and a yard between the rows. For both irises and peonies well decayed cow or horse manure is the best fertilizer. If this is unprocurable, use a good potato fertilizer, with some bone added for the irises, German and Japanese, and the peonies. The bulbous irises will do better if you can use pulverized sheep manure. Use twelve cords of manure per acre if you can spare it. If you use commercial fertilizer, apply 1,500 pounds per acre, of a high-grade article. Apply part now and work the balance into the soil in the spring. C. W.

PEONIES IN TEXAS.

Are the Texas summers too hot and too dry for growing peonies successfully? Would I have to irrigate the land? I wish to plant an acre of peonies if they can be grown profitably, but I have not seen any in my vicinity.

C. L. B.—Tex.

In my opinion the Texas summers are too dry and too hot for growing peonies successfully. I have had good peonies, but not enough of them to be profitable. The land would have to be irrigated, especially in the vicinity of Austin.

It would seem that peonies would grow more successfully in the coast country than in central Texas. I would not advise any Texas florist to try to grow peonies for profit. There are some varieties better than others, but none are successful in Texas.

T. J. Wolfe.

SOWING IRIS AND PEONY SEEDS.

Will you kindly let me know through The Review when to sow German iris and peony seed? R. M.—Wis.

Sow the German iris seeds when ripe, in pans or flats of sandy loam in a coldframe or cold greenhouse. The seeds germinate irregularly. Peony seeds can be sown in a prepared bed outside before freezing weather. Do not let the seeds become too dry before sowing. If you have only a small number of seeds, pans or flats would be preferable. The seeds usually do not germinate until the second year. It takes three or four years after that before any flowers appear. C. W.

WILL THESE SUIT HER?

A customer wishes us to get her a peony of the following description: American Beauty in color and of rose type, with wide petals, and as double as possible. Can you tell us what one to order for her? P. G.—Ia.

Try Pæonia rubra superba, or Louis Van Houtte. C. W.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

MORE ABOUT BLUE HYDRANGEAS.

The discussion on how to make hydrangeas blue, begun in The Review of October 14, page 68, and continued in the issue for October 21, page 16, has greatly interested me and has led me to investigate the matter just a little on my own account. I have consulted such horticultural literature, ancient and modern, as I have at command, in the hope of finding some hints on the subject. As a result I discovered the following paragraph in an old number of the Cottage Gardener, dated August 8, 1850:

"Alum has been employed also, with some success, to change the color of the hydrangea's flowers from pink to blue. About seven years ago some experiments on this subject were tried in the Chiswick Garden, and the plants submitted to the trial were exhibited in the rooms on Regent street. One plant, cultivated as usual; was the most healthy, and bore its pink flowers. Another, to which half an ounce of phosphate of iron had been administered, was unhealthy, its leaves yellow and its flowers small but pink. A third plant, treated with half an ounce of caustic potash, had a similar appearance. But a fourth hydrangea, to which half an ounce of alum had been given, produced blue flowers. The quantity, however, was excessive, for the plant was weakly and the flowers small. Mr. Beaton finds that the best mode of obtaining blue hydrangeas is by rooting cuttings of them in February, and potting them in loam with which iron filings have been mixed."

Harold E. Murray.

SUSTAINING MR. CORFIELD.

Noting the article by H. J. Corfield on page 16 of The Review of October 21, we wish to corroborate his statement as to the use of muck or rotted peat for making hydrangea flowers blue. Here, in Florida, we have chiefly a mucky soil for pot plants, or, at least, a soil full of humus from rotted leaves and grasses. Our hydrangeas of Otaksa type are always intensely blue, never pink. However, if the plants are left in the soil for several years and merely given chemical fertilizers on the surface, without any fresh soil, the flowers gradually turn pink, for the humus substance has become exhausted. This is a fact of long experience with us, and may be of some benefit to those growing hydrangeas in the north.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Shading.

The season is now sufficiently advanced so that much of the shading of a removable nature can be washed from the cattleya house. Of course we shall still have days when the sun will be quite hot and it would be a great mistake to remove everything at once. This would be harmful unless the plants were in houses glazed with ground glass, which for some months will now break the sun's rays sufficiently. Be careful, however, not to expose any plants in flower to the direct sun, or they will become badly scorched. These latter should be stood at one end of the house, where they can be shaded and kept somewhat cooler.

Cypripediums will still need shade; in fact, it is a mistake to ever clean the glass entirely where these are growing, if foliage of a good dark green color is needed.

Watering.

The idea that cattleyas needed a long period of drying up each season in order to grow and flower them successfully has been pretty well exploded. They are better kept a little drier after the flowering season has passed, and after repotting, but more harm than good is done by allowing them to go long periods without water. It may be true that in their native habitats they have long spells of drought annually, but these are always modified by heavy night dews, which prevent excessive shriveling. As a matter of fact, cattleyas do better under glass if grown on almost continually. This is specially true of hybrids, many of which produce two sets of growths and give two crops of flowers a year, and which need no resting at all.

All watering should now be done in the morning and also any syringing, so that the plants will be free from moisture at nightfall. On dull days little or no watering should be needed and, of course, daily waterings are no longer necessary. Twice a week should suffice for cattleyas in ordinary weather. Later in the year this may be still further reduced. In sunless weather little watering is needed.

Ventilation.

Cattleyas, above all orchids, are impatient of tightly closed ventilators. They love and must have air. There are but few days in the year when either bottom or top ventilation cannot be given. Avoid high temperatures; 60 degrees at 7 a. m. is better than 65 degrees. Never mind if the minimum falls to 55 degrees, while in midwinter even lower than this will do no harm. The results of a too high and close atmosphere for cattleyas are soon seen in roots hanging outside the receptacles, rather than penetrating the compost. The unthinking applaud these aerial roots, but they are a sign of distress in cattleyas. It will always be noticed that bulbs on such plants have a more or less shriveled appearance and bloom unsatisfactorily compared with others.

CATTLEYA LABIATA.

Cattleya labiata is invaluable in the fall, and what a gap there would be at our autumn shows without it! It flowers with wonderful freedom from even small bulbs. It brings the most satisfactory prices early and late in the season. A few manage to hold some until Christmas, when the highest prices of the year are always obtainable. It is unfortunate that this cattleya becomes more expensive each year, the plants also becoming smaller. If some enterprising specialist would start in cross fertilizing extra good Cattleya labiata, save the seed and go into the raising of seedlings by the thousands, he would undoubtedly get a good dividend on his outlay. These, like other seedlings, would need practically no resting. They would not improbably produce two crops of flowers annually and would possess far greater vigor than the collected stock, but cattleya seedlings take an average of five to six years to flower. Of course, some bloom earlier, but only a minority, and it seems a long time to wait for returns.

For exhibition purposes it is nice to have plants of good size, but for commercial purposes it is better to grow plants in 5-inch or 6-inch pots, with two or three leads, than in those of larger size.

COLD STORAGE GIGANTEUMS.

I should like to know of the best and most successful way of treating cold storage giganteum bulbs. Should they be potted and put in a cellar in the dark for a root growth, as are other bulbs? How long a period must elapse from potting time until they bloom? What temperature is required for them?

M. E. H.—Tenn.

It takes from ten to sixteen weeks to flower the cold storage giganteum lilies, according to the season. They like a good heat all the time, not less than 60 degrees at night. While they can be stood below benches or in a cellar to start, this is not necessary and they will start just as well on a greenhouse bench. These cold storage bulbs start to grow quickly compared with fresh stock.

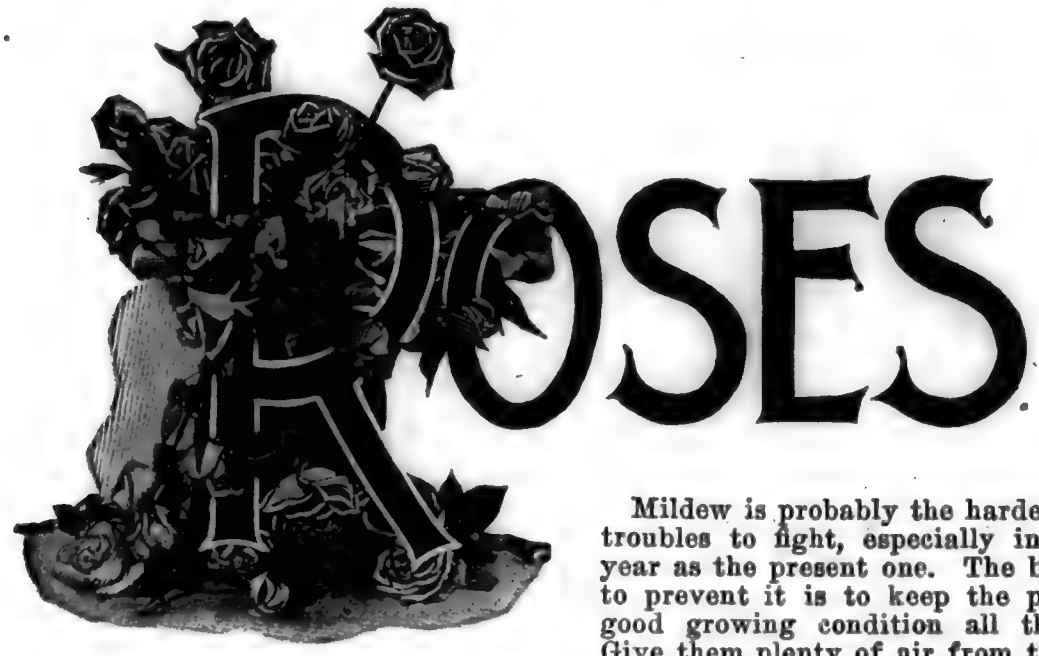
DAMPING OF CARNATION BUDS.

We are sending you some samples of diseased carnations. Please tell us what is the matter and what to do for it.

J. H. C.—Mich.

The damping of your carnation buds was most likely caused by the unusually wet weather experienced this summer and fall. Perhaps, also, you have sprayed overhead more than was necessary. There might also be present some of the carnation mite, which you will be able to exterminate by the use of nicotine, used as directed on the containers. I would suggest, further, that you paint a steam pipe in each house with lime and sulphur mixed with water. Give all the ventilation possible and the trouble should disappear in due time.

A. F. J. B.



IMPERFECT BUDS AND FOLIAGE.

I am sending you some of my carnations for examination. The buds seem to be empty, although the stems continue growing and look healthy. Some time ago I noticed that the leaves of the new growth seemed to stick together and did not unfold properly. I sprayed with nicotine and have nearly overcome that trouble, but some of the foliage is light-colored and spotted.

A. E. P.—Pa.

I can see nothing seriously wrong with your carnations. The blasting of those buds, earlier in the season, might have been caused by the check in transplanting, coupled with the summer heat. The fact that it is disappearing indicates that it was probably of a temporary nature and was caused in the manner suggested. I notice that only a portion of the buds submitted are hollow, about half of them seeming to be normal. Those few light spots are caused by the disease called stigmonose, which is especially prevalent among the Enchantress varieties. Selection of the cuttings is the only sure remedy for this. Moderate, common-sense culture will help, of course, to curb it. Do not overfeed or overwater while the weather is dark and cloudy, during the winter months. A. F. J. B.

STORING ROSE PLANTS.

We read with interest, in The Review of September 16, page 18, C. W.'s reply to an inquiry with reference to the storing of rose plants, and we noticed there the statement that "field-grown hybrid perpetuals and hybrid teas should be lifted and packed in damp soil, not in sand." In our storage house we have a fine sand that is used by molders, and in this we heel roses. Will C. W. inform us whether it would be advisable to take this sand out and replace it with soil?

W. J. G. S.—Ont.

While the roses would keep fairly well in this sand, I would prefer soil. Molders' sand, if damp, would keep the roots of roses and other plants in much better condition than sand of a coarser nature. You could use this sand in which to pack many partially tender perennials, such as Anemone Japonica, tritomas, montbretias, incarvilleas, rehmannias, etc. It would also be good for the packing of lily bulbs. In a dry condition, tuberous begonias and gloxinias would keep well in it. C. W.

BEING RUINED BY MILDEW.

Please tell me how to keep mildew off Killarney and Richmond roses, here in northern Tennessee. When the temperature in the houses is 75 degrees at night, would you turn steam on, and how much? How should the ventilators be arranged? Please state just how to run the houses at night. Our roses were formerly in fine condition, but the mildew is now ruining them. We have a great deal of this sort of trouble each spring and fall. J. S.—Tenn.

It is not advisable to turn steam into the rose houses when the temperature is 75 degrees at night, unless the air in the houses is too damp. The ventilators under such conditions should be wide open, unless it is raining, and even in that case they should be as far open as possible.

Mildew is probably the hardest of all troubles to fight, especially in such a year as the present one. The best way to prevent it is to keep the plants in good growing condition all the time. Give them plenty of air from the ridge of the house. If there are side ventilators on the house, use them only in hot days. Keep the temperature as near 60 degrees as possible at night and have some sulphur on the heating pipes at all times. In clear weather, dust some dry sulphur on the foliage while the sun is shining; this will help to dry up the mildew. W. J. K.

THRIPS ON BEAUTY ROSES.

Under separate cover we are mailing you a number of blighted American Beauty rose buds. Please tell us what is the matter with them and the remedy. Our Sunbursts are affected the same way, but no other varieties grown in the same field. Many blooms are perfect and come on at the same time as those that are affected. Could it be possible that our bushes are trying to produce too many blooms at one time? We have not been disbudding.

T. S. C.—Ariz.

The rose buds were badly withered by the time they reached me, but I feel confident in stating that the trouble was caused by thrips. If you will take one of the buds and submit it to a microscopical examination, you will find it contains several tiny white thrips. These thrips seem to prefer Beauties to almost any other kind of rose. The best remedy is a light mixture of Paris green and sugar, with water, sprayed on the plants every evening. The idea of the sugar is to attract the insects by its sweetness and the Paris green will poison them. These tiny thrips can be observed outside by the million on such plants as daisies and rudbeckias, and from these plants they are carried into the greenhouse by the wind.

HOOSIERS HOLD OUTING.

Meet at Richmond.

Of all the visits around the commonwealth, there is perhaps none that is looked forward to with greater anticipation than the annual outing of the State Florists' Association of Indiana at Richmond. There is always so much of interest and there is always waiting such a whole-souled welcome, that one always feels repaid in large measure. The visit November 2 was no exception and the largest crowd that has been seen on one of these excursions made a full day of it. They came from all directions by train, trolley and automobile. Everybody arrived in good time and practically everyone stayed the full day.

The crowd assembled at the establishment of the E. G. Hill Co., our Indianapolis party of some twenty-five alighting at the station just alongside the place. Quite a time was spent inspecting the many houses of roses, carnations and mums, with the mums in the ascendency just at this time. Notebooks were in evidence everywhere and I imagine there will be a lively call in the spring for some of the varieties. Most of the exhibition blooms were cut and in cold storage, being held for the Cleveland and Chicago shows. Judging by those still left on the plants, there will be some tall competition going on at these places next week.

Hills' Mums.

We noticed fine specimens of Odessa, Mrs. J. C. Neill, H. E. Converse, Meudon, Mrs. G. Drabble, Wm. Turner and Glenview in exhibition varieties, besides bench after bench of Nagoya, Bonnaffon, Chieftain, Eaton and Yellow Eaton. There are few growers who do the Eatons as well as they are done here, so it is no wonder they grow them in such quantity, some 10,000 being benched. White Chieftain, which is proclaimed a worthy successor to Mrs. Rager, also is grown in immense quantity and fine quality. There is a yellow seedling which is being touted to displace Bonnaffon, a deep golden yellow flower the size of a good Bonnaffon and a true incurved.

There is a fine array of pompon varieties, such as Golden Climax, Souv. de Melaine, Helen Newberry, Fairy Queen, Pink Beauty, Crœsus and Golden Plume. Here again a white seedling is in evidence, a pure white, round bloom, borne in great profusion. The name on the label was Mary Anna. In singles we noticed Dorothy Duggan, which is an early and improved Mensa. Mensa and Golden Mensa, Buckingham and other singles are grown in quantity. We note a tendency toward selecting a few of the best varieties, to be grown in quantity, rather than a long list of varieties in small blocks. This is a step in the right direction, as many of the varieties offered to the trade have been entirely too flimsy to be of commercial value.

The Roses and Carnations.

In the rose houses we noticed many beds of Hoosier Beauty, of which some 10,000 plants are benched. So firm is the confidence in this sort that all other red roses have been practically discarded. One needs only to look over these beds to cease wondering why. Ophelia, which was distributed two years ago, is doing as well as ever and received only praise from every side. Tipperary is a new yellow of clear color. The flower is medium in size and produced in great profusion. Baby Doll is a most beautiful and unique combination of colors. It reminds one of Mme. Watteville, and still it is brighter, more like Mme. Cusin or Mrs. Pierpont Morgan. I predict for this rose a great demand for corsage work. Lady Alice Stanley is proving a fine forcing rose, of a beautiful, clear pink shade. Of great interest to many were the outdoor cutting frames, sash after sash full of cuttings, rooting and rooted. The Killarneys and Ward are of course being grown as usual, except that the quantity has been reduced to make way for the newer sorts.

In carnations there are the standard sorts, such as White Wonder, Pink Delight, Enchantress, Enchantress Supreme, Mrs. Ward, Beacon, Champion, Gloriosa, Pocahontas and Matchless, also Alice, Good Cheer and Pink Sensation. Alice Coombs, which will be disseminated to the trade this season, occupies two full benches and is beginning to throw some fine blooms. I noticed a scarlet seedling with that fiery glow every breeder delights to see. The cut-back section is full of cuttings ready to go into the sand.

At Other Places.

From here we went to the establishment of the Chas. Knopf Floral Co., where Wm. Weaver is in charge. Only cut flowers are grown here, of roses and carnations. A house of Beacon is about as fine as I have ever seen this variety this early. White Enchantress is their favorite white and Pink Delight and Enchantress Supreme divide the space allotted to the pinks. Both are doing finely. Some trouble has been experienced with the rose soil, but Mr. Weaver is getting it remedied, as is shown by the plants that have been benched in the new soil.

At Geo. R. Gause's a general retail business is being carried on and a more varied line of plants is grown. More carnations than usual have been benched and all are doing well. Only one house of roses is being grown, as it is easy to get all the roses needed. I noted some excellent sweet peas.

At Fred Lemon's place we saw two fine houses of roses, mostly the Killarneys and Ophelia, also a nice bench of Mrs. Ward. The carnations are especially good, though only a few varieties are being grown. A general line of retail stock is grown, to supply the uptown store. A house of geranium stock is in prime condition.

Edward Ruch is another retailer who has been coming along the last few years, until now he uses more than he can grow in his 10,000 feet of glass. Mr. Ruch is known as an especially successful violet grower.

Fulle Bros. were the last visited, but not the least interesting. There are geraniums and more geraniums, these being their specialty. They certainly grow lots of them and grow them well. One order of 180,000 is claiming their attention just now.

The John A. Evans Co. plant was visited and many saw for the first time where the ventilating machines in their houses were manufactured. The aluminum salt sprayer was much in evidence.

The Advance Co., right across the way, which manufactures a similar line of apparatus, also was visited and showed many interesting things in column brackets, fittings, etc.

Dinner and Meeting.

We always are treated to a good dinner at Richmond and this one was no exception. Eighty-eight sat down and were fed until they cried for mercy. The meeting which followed dinner was interesting and some important action was taken. Several new members were added to the roll, bringing it up to over 150. A resolution was offered providing for associate membership, for anyone outside the borders of the state who wishes to become attached to the association. Final action is to be taken at the December meeting. A committee was appointed to represent the association in the arrangements for the Indiana centennial, which is to be celebrated in 1916. The secretary was instructed to renew the invitation which was extended the American Carnation Society, to hold its 1917 convention in Indianapolis.

The next meeting of the State Society is to be held in Fort Wayne, December 7. A. F. J. Baur.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The Market.

The demand is unusually good and stock is scarce. Chrysanthemums, roses and carnations are the main sellers, and they are moving along freely. Pompons are becoming more plentiful, owing to the bright weather of the last few days. Roses are bringing from $4 to $8 per hundred, according to quality. Carnations are decidedly scarce and are selling from $3 to $4 per hundred. A few violets are coming into the market and are quoted at $1 per hundred.

Plants are selling well, especially chrysanthemums and Boston ferns. The Christmas stock of several of the prominent concerns, such as poinsettias, cyclamens and begonias, is exceptionally fine and, as the azaleas from Belgium have arrived, they have every assurance of having plenty of stock for the fall and Christmas trade. Everyone is looking forward to a brisk fall trade, as business in general has been picking up considerably for the last three weeks.

Various Notes.

Under the auspices of the Minneapolis Florists' Club, an evening school for the young men of the trade seeking knowledge in all the different branches was organized October 28 and will meet hereafter at the Central high school. There will be lectures and papers by the older men in the trade. The first lecture of the series will be given November 4 by C. G. Anderson, the subject being "Chrysanthemums, from the Time of the Cutting Until They Reach the Packing Box."

The State Florists' Society, in connection with the Minneapolis Florists' Club and the St. Paul Florists' Club, will hold a fall flower show at the West hotel for two days, starting December 3. A great amount of advertising is expected from this show, as every one has a chance to display his Christmas goods. Liberal prizes will be awarded.

O. C. Swanson had a large and elaborate decoration at the Hotel Radisson this week.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. has had a fine increase in business and stock is selling closely every day. Manager C. G. Anderson is looking forward to a busy season.

The next regular meeting of the Minneapolis Florists' Club is to be held December 2, at the Park Board greenhouses, by the special invitation of Theodore Wirth, superintendent.

Oscar Amundson is enjoying a rushing business and reports it to be the best fall trade for many years.

The Whitted Floral Co. was kept busy this week making up funeral pieces for the late Mrs. Thomas Lowry. For the Tenth street store Miss Whitted has purchased a rare and beautiful Chinese vase, for decorative purposes, and it is causing a great amount of comment. The vase was purchased from a Chinese merchant here, for the sum of $1,500. G. W. A.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Market.

There is plenty of stock in nearly all lines and a good demand for it. The supply of roses is large and all grades are finding a ready sale. Beauties are scarce at present. Good carnations are now to be had and the cut of them is steadily increasing. The supply of pink mums is greater than the demand, but the white and yellow mums are not plentiful enough. Pompons are moving well. The supply of cattleyas and gardenias is ample for all demands.

Various Notes.

The roses at the John Coombs place are fine and there is a large cut of high grade stock.

The Connecticut Horticultural Society will hold a chrysanthemum show November 11. It is the aim of the society to make it the best show ever held by the association.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, will exhibit at the Stamford, Oyster Bay, Tuxedo Park, New York, Cleveland and Chicago shows. This concern is building another house, 60x440. H. Neubrand is on a business trip as far west as Denver. He will stop at Chicago for the show.

W. Schwartz, of Gallivan Bros., Holyoke, Mass., was a recent visitor to Cromwell, spending an entire day among his old friends. R. C. S.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade has been only fair during the last week. The weather has been unusually good and funeral work has been light. Flowers have been more than equal to the demand. Roses are of good quality and carnations also are plentiful, with some first-class stock available. Mums are coming in larger quantities, with a fair demand. Orchids, valley, violets and small roses for corsages have had a good call.

Various Notes.

Martin Brandlein is the latest florist to add a car for delivery purposes.

Martin Reukauf, with Bayersdorfer & Co.; J. J. Karins, with H. A. Dreer, Inc., and G. Reburn, of Henderson & Co., called on the trade last week.

Clarence Thomas, with the Hill Floral Co., reports business brisk. He has been showing some tastefully decorated windows lately.

The South Park Floral Co. has been sending quantities of first-class roses into this market.

The Smith & Young Co. has been handling a great deal of stock lately. The report is that business is good.

E. A. Nelson has returned from a fishing trip.

August Grande has been bringing some first-class pot mums to the market.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Large quantities of stock are arriving. The warm weather last week brought the chrysanthemums in large supply and the same may be said of roses and carnations. Mums are the leaders in the market now, but the demand is well up to the supply. Roses were in full blast last week. Large, fine stock, with 2-foot stems, sold at $4 per hundred. Carnations also were sold at low figures. The stock coming into this market is of good quality, with the exception of mums, which seem to have deteriorated. Carnations are more plentiful than they have been in any previous year. Greens continue to move and a big improvement in quality has been noted.

Pot plants were in good demand last week, especially chrysanthemum plants. Cyclamens are in bloom and bring a good price.

Various Notes.

E. H. Frandsen & Co. have their greenhouses in fine shape. The roses and carnations are in an excellent condition. This firm has about 30,000 square feet of glass, a good part of which is devoted to potted plants.

The department stores had large sales of flowers October 30. Carnations were sold for 1 cent, roses 3 cents and chrysanthemums 10 cents.

Halloween window displays were numerous. Most of the displays consisted of autumn leaves, etc.

W. J Barnes has removed his flower pots from the sheds to a large space behind the boilers. The sheds will be used as a storage place for fertilizers, moss and other greenhouse necessities.

A. F. Barbe has a new icebox in his store. It is ten feet wide, four feet deep and seven feet high. It is made of oak and of the latest pattern. He has good storage facilities in his basement, where stock will keep for a long time.

The Costello-Moore Floral Co. had a heavy run on corsage bouquets last week. There also was a good demand for orchids, valley and violets.

Wm. Foith is sending a large supply of carnations of unusually fine quality to this market. His roses and mums also are good. He has made many improvements on his greenhouses and intends to do more next summer.

A. Newell reports that Halloween trade was especially good in decorating and corsage work.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. had a heavy out-of-town business last week. The roses sent in from the greenhouses are excellent. Fred Fromhold, of the store force, went to Beam lake to look out for the ducks.

T. J. Noll & Co. report a good run of business last week. Out-of-town trade was good. A large consignment of violets from California, the first of the season, arrived in fine shape.

Henry Kusik & Co. are receiving large quantities of carnations, roses and mums. They report an increase in business.

Visitors last week were Mr. Kaupp, of Nevada, Mo., and R. L. Isherwood, of Chillicothe, Mo.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business still is on the increase and everyone is getting a share of it. Mums, of course, are the most popular flowers at this time of the year. There has been no severe frost as yet and outdoor violets are plentiful, but there is no great call for them. Carnations and roses are plentiful and of good quality.

Various Notes.

Ernest Chamberlain is doing his usual good business, but is anxious to obtain a stand nearer the center of the city.

The New Bedford Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting November 1, President Roy presiding. Plans for the coming show were discussed. After the business meeting an interesting talk was given by Joseph Forbes, who recently returned from a trip to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, where he won several prizes for dahlias.

The greenhouses on the estate of H. E. Converse, of Marion, Mass., were open to the public October 30 and 31. There was an unusual showing of mums, probably the best in this part of the state.

W. M. P.

WORCESTER, MASS.

Demand was fair last week and the indications are for a winter of good business. Chrysanthemums are plentiful now and violets have been on the market for two weeks. Bulbs have been in great demand.

H. F. A. Lange reports business good and the outlook encouraging. His sale of bulbs has greatly exceeded that of last year and most of the stock has been sold. Mr. Lange has had many orders for wedding decorations.

Harry Randall had distinctive window displays last week. Mr. Randall's business has been good and he anticipates a highly profitable winter.

The Quarrey Floral Co. has opened a small branch store on Main street.

H. L.

Pueblo, Colo.—To obtain another outlet for his surplus stocks, G. Fleischer has opened what he calls the Majestic Flower Palace, next door to the Majestic theater. Mr. Fleischer has another store on Main street and is a large shipper of cut flowers to Colorado Springs, Colo., and Wichita, Kan.

NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS

Quedlinburg, Germany.—Word has gone out of the death from wounds in the war of the eldest son of the senior partner in the widely known horticultural firm of Gebruder Dippe.

Marseilles, France.—United States Consul General Gaulin reports that the production of flowers in southern France is about sixty per cent of the usual yield and is an enormous loss to the district. Prices have also fallen, owing partly to the closing of several important foreign markets.

Haarlem, Holland.—It is the general report that hyacinths have been moving slowly, and it is likely a good many will be left on the hands of the growers, but tulips may be said to have been cleared out. Narcissi have all been sold at comparatively better prices than any other bulb, and there will be no surplus of any except the high-priced fancy sorts.

London, England.—Em. Draps-Boudry, widely known nurseryman at Oostdunkerke, Belgium, now residing at Dulwich, with the special permission of the army authorities, was able to visit Oostdunkerke a few weeks ago. He states there is nothing left of his nurseries. The greenhouses were bombarded months ago, and all the bricks have been carted away for the purpose of making roads. Mr. Draps-Boudry is employed at the British war office in London.

Paris, France.—Le Jardin, which, in common with other European horticultural journals, found the first year of war one of many difficulties, now is issued regularly as a monthly. The October issue gives an interesting biographical sketch of Captain Bernet, the first grower in Europe to raise the chrysanthemum from seed.

London, England.—The Horticultural Trades' Association has done a unique thing in raising a fund by subscription among the trade, used for a strong advertisement appearing in many publications of general circulation, warning the British public against patronizing Holland firms that have been advertising extensively in England. The trades' advertisement says in part: "With regard to the allegation that Dutch growers are 'suffering awfully,' it is interesting to note that the wholesale prices for Dutch bulbs are, generally speaking, quite normal, and some varieties are actually dearer than in ordinary years. Moreover, the Dutch growers are by no means solely dependent on English customers; in addition to the American market, which is open to all, they are still dealing largely with Germany and Austria, as they are of course fully entitled to do. The growers in Holland are comparatively well off, as, living in a neutral country, they are not called upon to bear the heavy financial strain which is being cheerfully shouldered by British traders."

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Stock is much more plentiful than a week ago, but the demand has kept pace with the increase in supply. Growers of early chrysanthemums have had the best season in years. Midseason sorts now are coming in and are being marketed while only half developed. The quality of the roses is excellent and carnations are increasing rapidly. Both valley and lilies are in good demand.

Bowling.

The Cleveland bowlers are counting on a big tournament during the flower show next week. November 11 is the date. Several teams of five men, representing various cities, are expected to enter the tournament. After the team contest there will be bowling by individuals. Then the five high individuals and the high man on each team will compete for a life membership in the S. A. F. offered by H. P. Knoble. Local trade firms have donated a fine line of prizes to be distributed as is customary among bowlers. After the regular tournament a special match game will be played between teams representing Buffalo and Rochester, to decide the championship between them. In the morning there will be a tournament for visiting ladies, with a fine list of prizes.

The afternoon and evening will be spent at the Coliseum. No special entertainment features scheduled for this day.

The Ohio Gladiolus Society will hold an adjournment meeting for the election of officers in the Hollenden, at 11 a. m. At 8 p. m. the Cleveland Florists' Club will entertain all exhibitors and visitors at a banquet in the ballroom at the Hollenden. All visitors are requested to register and receive their badges before 3 p. m., so the entertainment committee will know the number of plates to provide for.

Saturday, November 13.—A smoker will be given at Hotel Statler for the exhibitors and visiting florists at 8 p. m.

There will be other entertainment features announced in the detailed program that will be handed to each visitor as he registers. A large attendance is looked for.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

Last week business ended in a lively manner. The supply of stock about equaled the demand, with the exception of roses, which were beginning to accumulate. First-class roses, however, sold on sight. Mums are selling readily at a good price. White mums are scarcer than the pinks and yellows. The carnation supply was about equal to that of the week previous. Dahlias are beginning to decrease in quantity and they are of inferior quality. White bouvardias are in evidence and find sales without any trouble. Greens of all kind are moving satisfactorily.

Various Notes.

A good batch of poinsettias is to be seen at the Robert Scott greenhouses. These will be ready for market at Christmas.

L. H. Neubeck, the optimistic florist, has a fine batch of Chatelaine begonias ready for the market.

William Ehmann, of Corfu, N. Y., was in town October 30. He said he experienced no difficulty in marketing his chrysanthemums.

The Russell rose appears to be the favorite among the roses. Whenever a shipment of Russells is expected, there is sure to be a scramble on the part of the florists to visit the consignee good and early.

S. A. Anderson had a realistic Halloween window last week.

A. J. Reichert, who recently moved to Main and Leroy streets, says that the new location leaves nothing to be desired, for business has been humming from the start.

The Bert Olney Greenhouses are specializing in Key and Ophelia roses.

Leo Neubeck, formerly with his father, will manage the Galley Bros. flower shop on Genesee street.

John Preisach, of Corfu, N. Y., is proud of his carnation stock. He has some extra quality Enchantress Supreme carnations. A. E.

Jacobs & Sons, Brooklyn, were the builders of the roof conservatory, 75x200, a fine structure now filled with a large assortment of plants. Mr. Trepel invested over $20,000 on this venture and is spending $2,000 more on electric signs. An elevator connects the greenhouse with the cut flower department. There are thirty-two employees in this branch and Mrs. C. C. Trepel is herself the attractive manager of the enterprise. Mr. Trepel now has in his chain of stores over 200 employees.

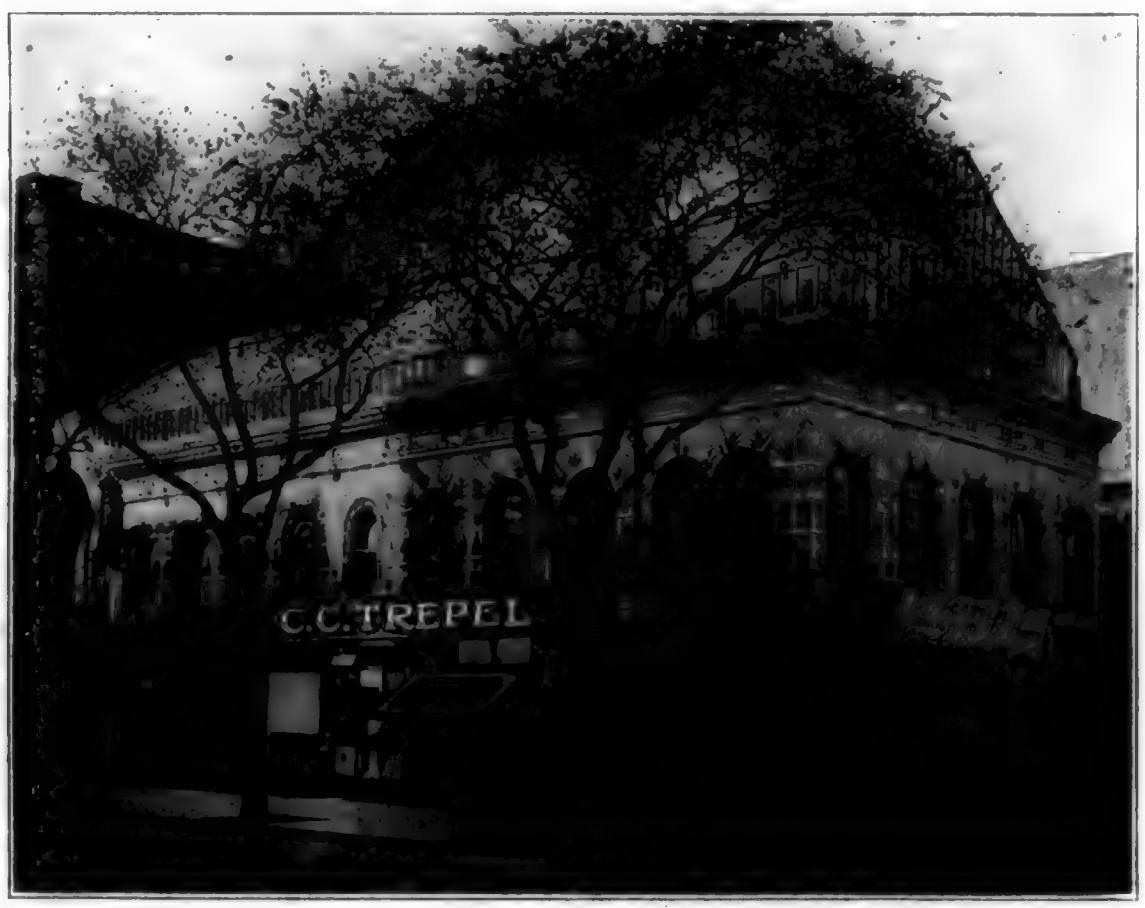
NEW YORK.

The Market.

A cool wave arrived October 30, in the nick of time. That is, it found the accumulation of roses and chrysanthemums excessive, the result of large shipments and Indian summer temperature during the week. However, the week end was favorable for the retailers and the purchases Saturday were large, with bargains numerous, especially in roses, carnations and chrysanthemums.



The number of high grade flowers of the autumn queen exceeds the shipments of other years to date, but of the medium and smaller arrivals there is no surplus. Flowers that were $4 and $5 per dozen in the old days now are sold at $2 to $3, and of the yellow varieties few last week commanded over $1 per dozen. Therefore every retail florist had his windows golden. Some of the best exhibition mums touched $5 per dozen, but the fall shows are not over, and these will not reach the New York cut flower market in large numbers until after November 7. There are anemones and pompons and plants without number.

Carnations feel the competition severely and prices have dropped, notwithstanding continuous improvement in quality. Even the best of them were sold at $2 per hundred October 30.

Roses of every kind are abundant and prices are barely steady at last week's quotations. The demand for American Beauties grows with the increase in the number of dinners and debutantes. All the new roses are growing in popularity, but the low grades of many of the standard varieties fell to $5 per thousand last week, although for the most of these $1 per hundred was asked. Orchids are abundant and prices stationary. Cattleyas find their top at 35 cents and cypripediums at 10 cents to 12 cents. Lilies do not go above $6 per hundred and valley must be good to realize half this quotation. Callas are arriving, but only in limited numbers. Dahlias have felt the chilling hand of frost and few are left. Now come the sweet peas and the violets, the latter improving rapidly in quality and seemingly in popularity. Autumn foliage is in wide demand.

The Country Life Show.

The first of the series of flower shows to be held in connection with the Country Life Permanent Exposition at the Grand Central Terminal building, held November 1 and 2, went far beyond expectations. C. H. Totty's lecture on hardy chrysanthemums was largely attended, by society ladies, members of garden clubs, gardeners and florists. The exhibitors all were private gardeners. There were twelve competitors for the two prizes offered for table decorations of chrysanthemums. First went to David Francis, gardener to Mrs. Charles Bradley, Convent Station, N. J.; second to Rudolph Heidkamp, gardener to Mrs. Pauline Boellger, Riverdale, N. Y., and a special was awarded to S. Golding, gardener to Mrs. Ridley Watts, Morristown, N. J. The others who decorated tables were A. Bauer, Deal Beach, N. J.; J. P. Sorenson, Essex Falls, N. Y.; Samuel Spencer, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.; P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Frederick Hitchman, Manhasset, N. Y.; J. W. Smith, Ridgefield, Conn.; J. W. Everitt, Glen Cove, N. Y.; J. F. Johnson, Glen Cove, N. Y., and O. E. Plaisted, Yonkers, N. Y. These also were the principal exhibitors of mums, but other prize-winners included Ernest Robinson, of the Plant estate, Groton, Conn.; A. Paterson, Saugatuck, Conn.; Thomas Ryan, Port Chester, N. Y., and W. J. Sealey, Port Chester.

Plant Growers' Outing.

The regular fall inspection tour of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers took place October 29. The members assembled at the office of William H. Siebrecht, Jr., their secretary, and visited the establishments of Anton Schultheis, at College Point; Louis Dupuy, Dreyer Bros., J. M. Keller Co. and Knight & Struck Co., at Whitestone; Louis Enne, in Flushing; John Miesem, in Elmhurst; Peter Wagner, Estate of John Scott, Louis Schmutz and Alfred L. Zeller, in Brooklyn. Dinner was served at Middle Village. The party traveled in automobiles furnished and driven by Julius Roehrs, William H. Siebrecht, Jr., A. L. Miller and Henry Baumann.

The inspection tour in Jersey will take place next, November 5.

Various Notes.

This will be the banner exhibition week in the east and especially in New York, where, at the Engineers' building and at the Museum of Natural History, the chrysanthemum shows are on from November 3 to 7. The early indications are for excellent exhibitions.

The sympathy of the trade is extended Charles H. Allen and family, of Floral Park, in the loss of their son, Harry H. Allen, who died October 30. Harry Allen was 26 years of age and a young man of great promise, a universal favorite and held in high esteem by all who knew him. He was a grandson of the late C. L. Allen. Funeral was held at the home of his parents November 2 and the floral tokens were many and beautiful.

Monday, November 8, is the date of the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club. This will be chrysanthemum night and a fine exhibit is expected. The club's bowling sessions will begin at Thumm's alleys, November 4. Captain Fenrich and his family have moved to the city, from their summer home at the seashore.

Guttman & Raynor will show the new rose, Prima Donna, at the Florists' Club's meeting, Monday evening; also at the Cleveland flower show. The new pink chrysanthemum which received a certificate of merit at the last club meeting has been named Alex. Guttman.

The sympathy of the trade is extended Victor Dorval in the death of his mother, at Woodside, L. I.

C. W. Scott has been entertaining his friends, the "Two Johns," Donaldson and Miesem, at his country estate, at Montrose, on the Hudson.

new flower shops opened on Madison avenue since October 1.

The Retail Florists' Association held an important meeting last week and will meet regularly twice a month during the season. The membership has increased rapidly. Following the special meeting, every wholesaler in the city received a registered letter from the secretary, setting forth the society's view concerning the selling of flowers at retail.

The engagement is announced of Miss Violet McEleney, bookkeeper and stenographer for Phillips, of Brooklyn, during the last four years, and Harry Gogarty, of New York. Will Phillips will have charge of the wedding decoration.

The Brooklyn Wholesale Cut Flower Market will open its new store at 408 Fulton street early this month and will have elevator facilities, an abundance of room and up-to-date appointments. Mrs. Joseph Levy will manage it. It is at one of the busiest corners in the City of Churches.

Cunio's is the title of a new retail store soon to be opened on Fifty-ninth street, near Fifth avenue.

Max Schling has invented a process by which autumn leaves may be preserved and used all winter. He has 10,000 sprays already stored.

Pitol & Constant have opened a retail store at Sixty-sixth street and Columbus avenue.

Henry Siebrecht, Jr., is on his way to California and has been engaged by the state commissioner to sell the palms, evergreens, etc., planted around the New York building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

H. J. Millatt, of Portland, Ore., is in the city.

John Ryan, formerly auditor with the H. & M. R. R., is now bookkeeper for Badgley & Bishop, Inc. Mr. Badgley has been suffering from an injured hand. He was unanimously elected mayor of his home town November 2.

William Rehm, formerly traveling representative of L. Daehnfeldt, Odense, Denmark, is engaged in litigation against a financial corporation involving a claim of $25,000. The case will be heard before the Supreme court in November.

TRAENDLY GIVEN TIME.

The annual banquet of the New York Wholesale Florists' Protective Association was held at the Hotel Breslin October 28 and was a great success. To the committee in charge, A. H. Langjahr, P. J. Smith and William P. Ford, credit is due for the able manner in which all details were arranged. The banquet room was tastefully decorated with autumn leaves and yellow chrysanthemums and on the large table was a centerpiece of Hoosier Beauty roses. Each member wore a gardenia boutonniere. A fine musical program added to the enjoyment of the repast.

Coffee and cigars being served, P. J. Smith introduced Walter F. Sheridan as master of ceremonies, who ably officiated, as might be expected of him. He first called upon Frank H. Traendly, president of the association, and to the great surprise of that gentleman, proceeded to pass sentence upon him for all the good he had done for the association during the eight years he has been at its head. After compelling his attention until everything in the way of nice things had been said of him, he presented him, on behalf of the association, with a beautiful gold clock and candelabra to match, as a token of the appreciation in which he was held by his fellow-members, and of his faithful service as their presiding officer.

Mr. Traendly, who for once in his life was taken completely unawares, upon recovering his composure, first assured himself that the clock was running on time and was in good working order, then feelingly expressed his thanks, and those of Mrs. Traendly, for the testimonial, promising to use his best endeavors to still further advance the interests of the association and to continue its efficiency.

Each member present added a few words of appreciation to those of the toastmaster, and, it might be said, increased the discomfiture of the gentleman under sentence.

After these proceedings, a special meeting of the association was held, at which much enthusiasm over the success of the organization was evinced and many suggestions were made looking to a further extension of its work. The impression prevailed that there could be no better organized body of business men today than that found in the New York Wholesale Florists' Protective Association, whose only aim is to improve, if possible, the wholesale market conditions in New York, and to advance and protect the interests of its members in every way. The secretary-manager, Ward W. Smith, was also warmly commended for the able manner in which he had fulfilled the duties of his office. At the close, announcement was made that Mr. Traendly had that day been appointed a member of the Society of American Florists' committee on national credits and collections bureau.

THE INTERNATIONAL SHOW.

Five months may seem a long period to those of us who are not engaged in preparations for the next International Flower Show, to be held at New York, April 5 to 12, but to the men who are working like beavers to make the 1916 show overshadow all previous shows, this time seems to be all too short. With monthly meetings and a division of the general committee into subcommittees, the work of preparation is well advanced; but with the idea, with which the workers are imbued, that the next show must present new features, new ideas, and, above all, show progress from an expositional point of view, five months for further preparation is a period all too small.

The idea of the rose garden, so well carried out at the show last spring, bids fair to become a most important feature of the next show, for the reason that the premiums offered are on a most liberal basis and sufficiently attractive to insure six or more exhibits in the class set apart for displays of this kind. Just think of it—six rose gardens!

The rock garden, a much cherished institution on the other side of the water and an object of curiosity to many of our budding horticulturists, is new flower shops opened on Madison avenue since October 1.

The Retail Florists' Association held an important meeting last week and will meet regularly twice a month during the season. The membership has increased rapidly. Following the special meeting, every wholesaler in the city received a registered letter from the secretary, setting forth the society's view concerning the selling of flowers at retail.

The engagement is announced of Miss Violet McEleney, bookkeeper and stenographer for Phillips, of Brooklyn, during the last four years, and Harry Gogarty, of New York. Will Phillips will have charge of the wedding decoration.

The Brooklyn Wholesale Cut Flower Market will open its new store at 408 Fulton street early this month and will have elevator facilities, an abundance of room and up-to-date appointments. Mrs. Joseph Levy will manage it. It is at one of the busiest corners in the City of Churches.

Cunio's is the title of a new retail store soon to be opened on Fifty-ninth street, near Fifth avenue.

Max Schling has invented a process by which autumn leaves may be preserved and used all winter. He has 10,000 sprays already stored.

Pitol & Constant have opened a retail store at Sixty-sixth street and Columbus avenue.

Henry Siebrecht, Jr., is on his way to California and has been engaged by the state commissioner to sell the palms, evergreens, etc., planted around the New York building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

H. J. Millatt, of Portland, Ore., is in the city.

John Ryan, formerly auditor with the H. & M. R. R., is now bookkeeper for Badgley & Bishop, Inc. Mr. Badgley has been suffering from an injured hand. He was unanimously elected mayor of his home town November 2.

William Rehm, formerly traveling representative of L. Daehnfeldt, Odense, Denmark, is engaged in litigation against a financial corporation involving a claim of $25,000. The case will be heard before the Supreme court in November. J. Austin Shaw.

TRAENDLY GIVEN TIME.

The annual banquet of the New York Wholesale Florists' Protective Association was held at the Hotel Breslin October 28 and was a great success. To the committee in charge, A. H. Langjahr, P. J. Smith and William P. Ford, credit is due for the able manner in which all details were arranged. The banquet room was tastefully decorated with autumn leaves and yellow chrysanthemums and on the large table was a centerpiece of Hoosier Beauty roses. Each member wore a gardenia boutonniere. A fine musical program added to the enjoyment of the repast.

Coffee and cigars being served, P. J. Smith introduced Walter F. Sheridan as master of ceremonies, who ably officiated, as might be expected of him. He first called upon Frank H. Traendly, president of the association, and to the great surprise of that gentleman, proceeded to pass sentence upon him for all the good he had done for the association during the eight years he has been at its head. After compelling his attention until everything in the way of nice things had been said of him, he presented him, on behalf of the association, with a beautiful gold clock and candelabra to match, as a token of the appreciation in which he was held by his fellow-members, and of his faithful service as their presiding officer.

Mr. Traendly, who for once in his life was taken completely unawares, upon recovering his composure, first assured himself that the clock was running on time and was in good working order, then feelingly expressed his thanks, and those of Mrs. Traendly, for the testimonial, promising to use his best endeavors to still further advance the interests of the association and to continue its efficiency.

Each member present added a few words of appreciation to those of the toastmaster, and, it might be said, increased the discomfiture of the gentleman under sentence.

After these proceedings, a special meeting of the association was held, at which much enthusiasm over the success of the organization was evinced and many suggestions were made looking to a further extension of its work. The impression prevailed that there could be no better organized body of business men today than that found in the New York Wholesale Florists' Protective Association, whose only aim is to improve, if possible, the wholesale market conditions in New York, and to advance and protect the interests of its members in every way. The secretary-manager, Ward W. Smith, was also warmly commended for the able manner in which he had fulfilled the duties of his office. At the close, announcement was made that Mr. Traendly had that day been appointed a member of the Society of American Florists' committee on national credits and collections bureau.

THE INTERNATIONAL SHOW.

Five months may seem a long period to those of us who are not engaged in preparations for the next International Flower Show, to be held at New York, April 5 to 12, but to the men who are working like beavers to make the 1916 show overshadow all previous shows, this time seems to be all too short. With monthly meetings and a division of the general committee into subcommittees, the work of preparation is well advanced; but with the idea, with which the workers are imbued, that the next show must present new features, new ideas, and, above all, show progress from an expositional point of view, five months for further preparation is a period all too small.

The idea of the rose garden, so well carried out at the show last spring, bids fair to become a most important feature of the next show, for the reason that the premiums offered are on a most liberal basis and sufficiently attractive to insure six or more exhibits in the class set apart for displays of this kind. Just think of it—six rose gardens!

The rock garden, a much cherished institution on the other side of the water and an object of curiosity to many of our budding horticulturists, is to be featured strongly at the April show, and those who are able to compete for the $250 and $150 prizes offered would do well to get busy with their exhibits.

The charts showing the space available for trade exhibits are already well marked with reservations and proposed reservations of exhibitors, and any firms desirous of securing choice locations should lose no time in communicating with the secretary.

The committee is a little embarrassed just now over the problem of housing all the large exhibits promised, and it seems quite probable that three floors of the big Grand Central Palace may have to be utilized for the exhibition instead of the two, as heretofore.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Last week business was satisfactory, but it would have been better if all outdoor stock had been dead. Killing frosts are late in arriving this year. There still are many dahlias, cosmos, etc., to be had. Roses and carnations are improving in quality each week. Mums are good and plentiful.

The Birth of the Florists' Club.

The call meeting of October 27, held for the purpose of organizing a florists' club, was attended by nearly all the florists of Evansville. The meeting was held at the greenhouses of Niednagel & Sons, and was a big success in every way.

After an inspection of the Niednagel stock by electric light, there being electric bulbs in every house, the meeting was called to order by Emil Niednagel. He gave a stirring talk, which was followed by short talks by everyone present. Each speaker thought that a club would be a good thing, socially and educationally. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, William Halbrooks; vice-president, Karl Zeidler; secretary, E. L. Fenton; treasurer, Emil Niednagel.

Emil Niednagel, Carl Elspermann and John Tait were appointed a committee by the president to draw the rules and regulations of the newly formed club. After the meeting there was a fine spread of many good things.

Those who joined the club were:

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Elspermann,
Miss Mary Elspermann,
Carl Elspermann,
Theo. Elspermann,
John Tait,
Henry Seymour,
H. O. Halbrooks,
Miss Pauline Fritsch,
Louis Fritsch,
Ludwig Weis,
William Halbrooks,
C. L. Niednagel,
Julius Niednagel,
Emil Niednagel,
Waldemar Niednagel,
Edgar L. Fenton,
Oliver Marker,
Fred A. Chapman,
Theo. D. Kuebler,
Arthur A. Kuebler.

Various Notes.

The William Blackman Floral Co. is cutting first-class roses, carnations, mums, snapdragons and lilies. This company pays special attention to its window displays. Frank Woelz, rose grower, has severed his connection with this concern. John Tait now has charge of the roses and carnations. The stock is in splendid condition.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are receiving a large number of decorative orders. Large loads of decorative plants are often seen on the way to some decoration. They are having nice cuts of roses and carnations.

J. C. Elspermann and his force have been on the jump filling orders for decorations. His mums are good and the carnations are in excellent shape. Last week Mr. Elspermann received his shipment of azaleas.

Karl Zeidler is cutting a large number of mums, for which the demand is heavy. In a week or two Mr. Zeidler will again visit Mississippi as chief guide of a hunting party which makes the trip every year.

Louis Fritsch says that business is increasing. He anticipates a big season in all lines.

Miss Nellie Goodge is cutting high-grade mums. She is recovering from severe bruises sustained in a bad fall some time ago.

Mrs. A. J. Wallace has been shipping smilax to George Angermueller, of St. Louis.

Henry Seymour is well satisfied with present business conditions and looks for a steady increase in sales as soon as killing frosts arrive.

Royston & Fenton are cutting good roses and mums. The demand for them is excellent. They have a special lot of coleus and geranium cuttings for the wholesale trade.

What Oscar Kuehn Caught with His Camera at Windler's, St. Louis.

Theodore Kuebler is bringing in a large quantity of mums. He looks for a big demand for cut stock this season.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The market has loosened up considerably since last week's report. Mums are arriving in much larger quantities and this has eased up on other stock. The demand for yellow mums has been heavier than the supply, this being due to the many yellow blooms used for the games at Ann Arbor and their popularity for all purposes. A large wedding October 30 cleaned up every yellow bloom on the market.

Roses are of fine quality and selling readily, among the best sellers being varieties in salmon and yellow shades. Ophelia is popular with the flower buyers and promises to be one of the leaders this season. Carnations are about the same as last reported. The weather has been rather mild and carnations are nothing extra so far.

Southern smilax and prepared oak were used in immense quantities last week for decorating.

Various Notes.

Breitmeyer's had the decorations for the Dodge-Gray wedding October 30. It was a church affair and one of the season's most talked-of functions. The whole decorative scheme was carried out in autumn colors, even to the dresses of the bridal party. Yellow mums were used in immense quantities. The background was a mass of cibotiums, autumn foliage and mums. Wreaths of bittersweet were carried by the bridesmaids.

In the beginning automobiles were sold in any place that afforded a window on the main street. Then came the specially built showrooms, and now no salesroom, in this city at least, is complete unless there are numerous palms, ferns, etc., to complete the interior decorations, with Bostons in nicely painted boxes. Recently there have been several openings of new salesrooms and in every instance florists received large orders for baskets of flowers and plants. To the Bemb Floral Co. should be given credit for the extensive use of flowers, plants and other decorative material, as no effort has been spared to get in a wedge wherever possible.

CAUGHT BY KUEHN.

The other day Oscar Kuehn, the well known St. Louis florist-photographer, poked the nose of his camera into the new office of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., in his town. Then he pressed the button. It remained for The Review to do the rest. The picture shows Frank Windler in the foreground, looking over the mail, and Frederick Back, the young stenographer, taking dictation from Vice-president Gumz.

Salem, O.—Announcement has been made by William Mundy that he has sold his greenhouses, two dwellings, business and property to Harry E. Cooper, of West Grove, Pa., who will move to his new home about November 15. Mr. Cooper will conduct the business, specializing in vegetables.

OBITUARY

Frederick W. Timme.

Again, in the death of F. W. Timme, which occurred October 27, Chicago has lost its oldest florist.

Frederick W. Timme was born in Magdeburg, Germany, January 14, 1843, and came to America in 1857. He enlisted in the Civil war, in the Mississippi squadron, serving on board Admiral Lee's flagship, Blackhawk, in 1863 and 1864. The vessel was destroyed during the siege of Natchez, Mr. Timme receiving injuries which confined him to the hospital for eight months and which were the indirect cause of his last years of suffering. After receiving his honorable discharge from the navy, he spent five years in and around La Salle, Ill., laying out many places, among them that of Mathewson, the zinc magnate. He removed to Chicago in 1870 and entered the employ of Allan Pinkerton, the detective, as private gardener, where he met and married Isabella Johnston, of Crystal Lake, Ill. He left the employ of Mr. Pinkerton to enter that of Capt. Parker, of Oconomowoc, Wis., where he laid out the grounds at a large summer home on the shore of Oconomowoc lake. He also laid out large places in Lakeside and Oak Park. He was one of the men who helped lay out Lincoln park, Chicago, turning an old cemetery into a park. He then entered the employ of Potter Palmer, as private gardener, starting with the conservatories on the roof of the Palmer House hotel. He moved them to Forty-seventh street and Grand boulevard, where it is said he grew the first carnations ever grown in or around Chicago, getting them from Peter Henderson, who imported them from France. The Palmer conservatories were then moved to their present location at Bank street and the Lake Shore drive.

Mr. Timme was in the employ of Peter Palmer sixteen years, part of which he was cashier at the Palmer House hotel. During these years he bought the property and started his own business as wholesale and retail florist at 4016 North Tripp avenue, Irving Park, Chicago, where he resided and carried on his business for thirty years. In the early years of his business he grew carnations, and made a specialty of raising new varieties, preferring to sell to other growers for introduction to the trade rather than disseminate them himself. In 1892 he disseminated Carnation Lucia, a profitable scarlet variety, taking many prizes with it at the flower shows. Later he made a specialty of asters and other novelties for the Chicago markets. In the last few years he devoted his entire time to pot plants.

In 1906 Mr. Timme made his first visit to his old home in Germany after forty-nine years in this country. He enjoyed the trip so much that he went again the following year, taking his wife and daughter with him. This time he made a more extensive trip, visiting Scotland, England, Holland, Switzerland and Germany, also a large part of the eastern states. For many years he was a regular contributor to trade papers, writing many articles of interest and also translating foreign papers. In 1908 he suffered a severe stroke of paralysis, followed by a slight one eight months later. He recovered sufficiently to enable him to attend to his business and enjoy life until the latter part of August, when complications set in, causing a breakdown, resulting in his death. Funeral services were held October 30, burial being at Crystal Lake, Ill. He leaves his wife, one son, William F., of Chicago, and a daughter, Mrs. Harry Blewitt, of Des Plaines, and one grandson. William F. Timme will carry on the business, at least for a time.

Edward G. Eggeling.

Following a short illness from throat trouble, Edward G. Eggeling died at his home Saturday, October 30. He was born in St. Louis 43 years ago. He is survived by his wife and one daughter, Lillian Eggeling.

The flower store at Grand and Lafayette avenues was one of the oldest in the city, having been founded by his father at the close of the war. Mr. Eggeling was a member of the St. Louis Florists' Club and was prominent in many other societies.

Frederick W. Timme.

The funeral was held Monday, November 1, from his late residence, 3612 Lafayette avenue. Interment was at Bellefontaine cemetery. J. J. B.

Folkert A. Vander Meulen.

Folkert Andries Vander Meulen, of Dunkirk, N. Y., died October 21, at the home of his son, T. F. Vander Meulen, 635 Eagle street. He was born at Makkum, Holland, April 18, 1831, and for many years conducted a gardening and flower business in his native country. He came to Dunkirk in 1892 and for a number of years was in charge of the park system there.

Mr. Vander Meulen was a strong exponent of temperance and the rights of the laboring man and made many public addresses in the interest of those causes. He was the author of numerous essays and books in the Dutch and Friesian languages.

The deceased was twice married, his first wife dying in 1874 and his second wife in 1907. He is survived by two sons, T. F. Vander Meulen, of Dunkirk, and Peter Vander Meulen, of Portland, Ore., and one daughter, Mrs. A. Van Beek, of Portland.

Horace J. Harvey.

The death of Horace J. Harvey, one of the founders of the Harvey Seed Co., of Buffalo, occurred October 31. Heart disease was the cause of his death. Mr. Harvey was in a rowboat in the Niagara river in the afternoon of October 30 when he was stricken. He was removed to his home, where he died soon after midnight. He was United States consul at Fort Erie, Ont., a Canadian point near Buffalo. He was 78 years old.

Born in Granville, Mr. Harvey located at Buffalo when a young man. In partnership with his brother, the Harvey Seed Co. was established. From 1858 until his appointment as consul at Fort Erie by President Roosevelt, Mr. Harvey was an active Buffalo business man and a member of the Chamber of Commerce. Selling his interests in the Harvey Seed Co. thirty years ago, Mr. Harvey became connected with other enterprises, with which he was associated until 1898, when he removed to Fort Erie. He recently was replaced by an appointee of President Wilson. Miss Annabel Harvey, of Fort Erie, is the only surviving child.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

October was one of the most delightful months in the experience of many here and business was quite satisfactory. The weather continues fine. The outdoor chrysanthemums are much in evidence, as the market is full of them. Geraniums in sheltered places still are blooming.

The wholesalers have their hands full with chrysanthemums. Wm. Turner, Chieftain, White Chieftain and Bonnaffon are the finest, but there is any amount of rubbishy stock. Lilies and valley are again plentiful. Beauties, fine roses, orchids, yellow daisies and carnations make up a list of stock offered in quantities. Violets do not seem to attract much attention.

The retailers, while fairly busy, are not rushed. The chrysanthemums help them to keep up beautiful displays.

Various Notes.

The John Bader Co. last week received two carloads of palms from Belgium, the finest ever received and all in excellent condition.

The Karl Koenig Co. has received a large consignment of Japanese bulbs.

A. W. Smith, Jr., has made an automobile tour among the Ohio nurseries, looking up stock for next spring.

Allen Langhans, who quit the florists' business to go into the oil business, is visiting his old friends in the trade here.

Again there is talk of another wholesale house in this city.

Earl Tipton, buyer for the A. W. Smith Co., is back at his post after spending the summer at the Canfield greenhouses.

Wm. Turner reports his business as showing a steady improvement and increase since he has taken charge of the store and given up the greenhouse end.

The burning of a box factory, in which thirteen girls and one man lost their lives, October 29, gave the north side florists all the work they could do for several days. Clarke.

Detroit, Mich.—Albert F. T. D. Pochelon has found birds and bird homes a sufficiently attractive side line so that the L. Bemb Floral Co. has issued a handsome special catalogue under the title, "Bring Back the Birds."

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

"SAFETY first" is a good motto, but a good many florists wait until it is too late to be careful.

THERE are many inquiries for schools of design making and, curiously, nearly all come from women.

IT is worth a long, hard effort to get to a place in the trade where one is known as paying his bills in full every month.

"THE path of success in business—even the florists' business—invariably is the path of common sense."—Samuel Smiles.

NOT THE MRS. GALT.

As a means to a little hoped-for publicity the management of the Cleveland flower show obtained from Elmer D. Smith & Co. the privilege of naming one of their seedling chrysanthemums, and passed the privilege on to the President of the United States. Under date of October 28 Mr. Wilson wrote: "The flower is certainly very beautiful. May I not suggest the name for it, Tiger?" Not quite what the committee hoped!

WHY FLORISTS ARE BUSY.

Business forecasts and predictions are now speaking of general industry as increasingly "normal." Manufacturing is improving, demand is growing stronger in nearly all lines, retailing seems to be steadier and prices better. Employment is good in most parts of the country. Even those who were pessimistic some time ago and ascribed most of the advance in activity to "war orders" are now disposed to concede the existence of real improvement due to big crops and war orders. The outlook for the winter is promising. It is an encouraging showing the nation over.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

SIX YEARS.

Adachi Bros., San Francisco, Cal.

THREE YEARS.

Whiting, John I., Auburn, N. Y.
Loveridge, C., Peoria, Ill.

TWO YEARS.

Merkel & Son, Mentor, O.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

CREDITS GET ATTENTION.

It is doubtful if there is any other line of business in which credits and collections have had so little thought and attention as has been the case in the florists' trade. But there are many evidences that the times are changing, the latest being a circular letter sent to all their customers by the five wholesale houses at St. Louis. It is as follows:

Owing to the unsatisfactory credit system now in vogue by the wholesale florists of St. Louis, it has become necessary to make some changes for the betterment of both the wholesaler and the legitimate retailer.

In the future all statements rendered on the first of the month must be paid on or before the fifteenth of the month. There are no exceptions to this rule. In all cases where accounts are not settled on or before that date, goods purchased the next day and thereafter will be sent C. O. D. until the account is put in good standing.

"NO SMOKING."

Rule 21 of the code for the National Flower Show to be held at Philadelphia next spring is as follows:

No smoking will be permitted in any part of the building, except in such places as are set apart for that purpose, during the hours of exhibition. Exhibitors are particularly requested to aid the management in the enforcement of this rule, in deference to the large number of ladies who attend the exhibition.

So large a percentage of florists smoke almost incessantly that to do so in an exhibition hall is an involuntary act—no disrespect is intended, but a high class exhibition is impossible where smoking is permitted. It must be stopped if we are to secure the attendance of the better class of people.

NECESSARY IN TEXAS.

You may be sure that if you do not take yourself and your business seriously, nobody else will. But The Review never has taken itself so seriously as some of its readers do when they write, as did this Texan:

In sending 75 cents for a copy of the Album of Designs we include $1 for The Review for another year. We would have to quit the florists' business if we could not get The Review.—Baxter Setzler, Mgr. City Greenhouses, Bonham, Tex., October 27, 1915.

What our Texan friend means to imply doubtless is that it would be difficult to run a florists' business without The Review—difficult to do so without its cultural articles and trade news and difficult without the opportunity to consult its advertising columns, from which he probably buys most of his stock.

IS YOUR CITY THERE?

Consult the list of towns on page 59 of this issue. Is your city there? If it isn't, there is a splendid opportunity for you to get the telegraph orders of florists who are asked to deliver flowers in your vicinity. If your city is represented, but not by you, an inspection of the list (page 59) will show why so many telegraph boys go to the other flower store.

WHO CAN ANSWER?

Could you kindly tell me if there is in the United States a commercial grower of new and high-class named hybrid delphiniums, an expert who in knowledge of the plants and in number and excellence of varieties can compare favorably with the great English firms who make a specialty of the delphinium?

It seems to me this grand perennial deserves some man's earnest work on this side of the water. Any information will be gratefully received.

Arthur Ryerse.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Following a succession of rapid fluctuations, the Chicago market settled down the end of last week to a condition of easy supply and lower prices. The change, though clearly defined, was radical only by contrast with the preceding few weeks of extreme scarcity. The present week opened with supply in most lines generous and demand rather backward. It is a fact worthy of comment that the shipping trade gives practically no evidence of a decline, the cessation of activity being confined almost exclusively to the city business.

Beauties continue to cling to the short side of the market, in contradistinction to other lines of stock, and with the added advantage of unusually excellent quality, enjoy a healthy demand. Other roses are more nearly normal in supply and are of most satisfactory quality. Demand, though not so urgent as it has been for some time, is still strong enough to take care of the receipts. The newer varieties continue to receive the first call, which has, perhaps, been strengthened by the publicity recently given them in the daily papers.

Carnations are plentiful in every color and length of stem, and, being satisfactory as to quality, move fairly well. Violets, double and single, are available in any quantity. The supply of valley is not large, but it is sufficient to fill all wants. Receipts of sweet peas are daily growing larger, and they are moving nicely. Cattleyas are plentiful.

Chrysanthemums fill the display windows and the salesrooms, and yet they come in all colors and sizes. Demand, however, seems to gather strength, for the yellow varieties first and the white ones next, leaving the pinks as a last choice. As a result there is somewhat of a plethora in the pink varieties. Among the varieties of chrysanthe-

What does it mean to you?

That constant repetition of the Randall slogan, "Prompt Shipments—Properly Packed," is your guarantee of dependable cut flower service, the foundation of a successful florists' business. We do not ask you to believe this statement—we want to prove it by our service on your next order. May we? A royal lot of flowers we offer this week—Beauties and all varieties of Roses (including the new Sweet Marie); plenty of gorgeous Mums in all colors—white, pink, lavender, yellow and maroon; an abundance of Pompons, as well as Lilies, Violets, Valley and the staple Carnations.

mums recently received are Marigold, Crystal Gem, Golden Queen, Chieftain, Bonnaffon and White Chieftain. Pompons are to be had in a wide range of colors. Anemones, too, are in ample supply.

Eastern lilies and rubrums are moving well considering the condition of the market. Mignonettes, pansies and daisies may be had if desired.

Greens are selling remarkably well when the full condition of the market is taken into account.

The market is full of silverware these days. When solicited to contribute prizes for the show, most of the wholesalers elected to give silver cups, as having most enduring advertising value. For the last few days the mugs have been in conspicuous places around the stores, to arouse the retailers' covetousness.

October Business.

When the wholesalers cast up the footing of sales November 1 they found October had broken all records for the month. Proverbially an erratic month, sometimes extremely good and sometimes only good by contrast with the summer, October of 1915 eclipsed even the best high record of the past. Indeed, in some houses October even beat last December, an unheard of record. In the middle of the month the supply was too short for best results, it being difficult for one wholesaler to buy of another, but toward the end of the month there was stock enough to permit meeting every buyer's reasonable ideas and sales ran to splendid totals, in some houses nearly doubling last year's poor record.

October Weather.

October was a beautiful month, just a little too fine for the retailers, but excellent for the production of stock. After a wet summer, October had only a sixth of the normal rainfall and sixty-five per cent of the possible sunshine,

Get into the Originality Contest

Every time anyone thinks of a new way to use Flowers that means an additional possibility, one more chance to sell Flowers. That is why we hope that every retailer in the vicinity will come in on our originality contest.

In order to promote the use of Flowers for personal adornment we have donated a special premium, listed on page sixteen, No. 146, "Most originality shown in the use of Flowers for personal adornment, novelty to predominate." To be contested for Wednesday, November 10th, the second day of the show.

Schiller Comes Downtown.

Schiller's Floral Gift Shop will in the future be the name of the store heretofore operated by William Lubliner, at 41 South Wabash avenue. November 1 the store was turned over to its new owners in accordance with a contract of sale consummated October 30. The store is held under a lease that has three years to run, with an option of renewal for a period of five years. As the new name indicates, the store will feature floral novelties appropriate for gifts on all occasions. This will necessitate the introduction of various art wares. According to George Asmus and R. E. Schiller, the move was rendered necessary by the urgent demands of the many Schiller patrons, who demurred at being compelled to go either to the north or west sides. Miss Bertha Schiller will operate the loop store, R. E. Schiller the west side store, H. D. Schiller the north side store and George Asmus will distribute his time between them.

Mr. McKee's New Deal.

Philip L. McKee, formerly second vice-president and general manager of the John C. Moninger Co., has organized the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., of which he becomes president and treasurer. November 1 the new concern opened an office at 1503 Masonic Temple, where estimates already are being made. The necessary legal steps to organize a corporation with $25,000 authorized capital stock will be taken at the same time that factory facilities are being developed.

Mr. McKee is well known in the trade. Entering the employ of the Moninger company eleven years ago as a general assistant, his natural aptitude for the business and the energy he put into his work soon carried him to managing position. He invented and developed many new ideas in greenhouse construction and has associated himself, among others in his new company, with J. E. Jones, of the Advance Co., Richmond, Ind., who also has years of experience in greenhouse structural work.

the Hotel Morrison, October 28, the members in attendance including A. Henderson, W. N. Rudd, W. J. Keimel, August Poehlmann, N. J. Wietor, George Asmus, Guy W. French, E. F. Kurowski, N. P. Miller, Payne Jennings, Robert Brenton, H. B. Howard, K. M. Patterson, James Morton and M. Barker. Reports of the various subcommittees were presented, showing well matured plans for the big exhibition, to be held at the Coliseum, November 9 to 14. Widespread interest in the event is evident from the correspondence coming to the officials from all sections of the country, and the distribution of large quantities of posters and posterettes with liberal notices in the newspapers have awakened unusual enthusiasm locally. The competitive exhibits from leading growers will be well worth the attention of the trade in themselves and it is certain there will be a good array of new plants and flowers in the various sections. Many novel features are promised by the management, including elaborate floral dances and fashions, ancient and modern, in the use of flowers for personal adornment. shape than ever before, as the result of a year of forced economy.

A. Henderson & Co. will move to a new location on State street just north of Lake street, November 15.

O. W. Frese reports that Poehlmann Bros. Co. sent 5,000 large yellow mums to Urbana October 30 for the football game. The five-piece silver service offered for best arranged basket of roses at next week's show has been on display in the store for several days.

"Grandpa" was added to E. C. Amling's titles October 30, when Anna Margaret arrived at the Oak Park home of Rev. and Mrs. Bailey. Mrs. Bailey is well known in the trade, as for some years she presided at the cashier's window of the E. C. Amling Co.

October sales of florists' supplies broke all previous records of the A. L. Randall Co., according to F. M. Johnson, who says he expects to see a marked shortage of merchandise before the Christmas demand has been satisfied.

Increasing business has resulted in Ernest Farley being added to the staff of A. T. Pyfer & Co.

H. C. Rowe has opened his new retail store at 123 North Wabash avenue, opposite Field's.

In the Criminal court John Then did jury service last week, and Charles H. Zapfe has taken his place for the current fortnight.

Philadelphia carnation has made a steady gain in popularity, according to N. J. Wietor, who says the retailers call for it by name more frequently than for any other variety. But Mr. Wietor's own favorite is Rosette. He says the Wietor establishment never was in better shape than now, practically every house being good.

A flower shop has been opened by Mrs. J. R. Foster, at 4736 South State street.

A new greenhouse 24x200 feet, of Foley construction, has been added to the range of Fred Greager, 6952 Cottage Grove avenue.

The J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, will run a special train for those who wish to see Aviator in its home during the flower show. The train will leave the Rock Island station at 11:45 a. m.; returning leave Joliet at 5:30 p. m. Luncheon will be served at the greenhouses.

A lease for a term of five years from May 1, 1916, has been secured by Joseph L. Raske for the store he now occupies at 170 West Jackson boulevard.

The new rose, Champ Weiland, grown by Weiland & Risch, has received considerable comment in the daily papers during the week.

The wholesale and retail branches of the florists' trade were well represented at the funeral services of George Economopoulos, which were held in the Greek Orthodox church, La Salle and Oak streets, at 1 p. m. October 31. The floral offerings were numerous and of a most elaborate character, orchids, valley, violets, chrysanthemums and roses figuring prominently in their make-up. Interment was in Elmwood cemetery.

A most excellent quality of Balfour chrysanthemums is being cut by Theodore Wolniewicz, of Forest Glen, who is sending them to the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

sett & Washburn, said that taking it by and large, the business of last month was the best ever experienced by the florists' trade in October. The early freezing of the outdoor flowers, he believes, contributed much to this desirable condition.

As a result of her extended tour through the west last summer, M. C. Gunterberg has a most interesting collection of kodak views, and finds it no small task to classify and list them.

An exceptionally good season for the sale of carnation plants is reported at Peter Reinberg's. Starting with the largest stock ever, conditions permitted sales down to almost the last plant, according to the Reichling brothers.

The topic of greatest interest in the store of Sullivan Bros., 863 East Sixty-third street, is the new arrival in the home of William Sullivan. His little daughter was born October 27.

Something unique in the way of a sign will soon appear in the windows of the new quarters of J. A. Budlong, at the southwest corner of Lake street and Wabash avenue.

A splendid bit of landscape work is being done in Homewood, Ill., by Daniel D. P. Roy.

It is said A. C. Spencer is doing an excellent business in his quiet way. He buys large quantities of stock and wastes extremely little.

The Chicago Feed & Fertilizer Co. states that H. E. Humiston, of Omaha, Neb., has been appointed to succeed J. E. Pollworth, who is no longer with the concern.

The death of F. W. Timme, oldest of Chicago florists, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

Visitors.

Among the visitors on the Chicago market this week was C. W. Scott, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., New York. While here Mr. Scott bought a pedigreed Airedale terrier, for which he paid a fancy price.

Among the week's visitors was Charles C. Case, of Prairie du Chien, Wis.

Members of the trade were visited last week by C. W. Crum, of Des Moines, Ia.

Mrs. Gullett, wife of Ed Gullett, of Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill., was a visitor in Chicago last week while en route to the east on a visit to home folks.

The Market.

Business in general shows a steady improvement and has assumed quite healthy proportions. The weather was exceptionally fine last week and this brought stock to the market in much larger quantities. The market, therefore, shows a change from conditions that existed a week ago.

The chrysanthemum crop is arriving almost too fast and some cold, cloudy weather is necessary to hold back the cut. If the mild weather continues there will soon be an overabundant supply and prices will drop greatly. The rose crop, which has been extremely short for some time, has increased to a great extent and all orders are being taken care of without any trouble. The stock is in excellent shape and prices are lower than they have been during the last few weeks. Carnations are coming in heavily each day and, while the cut is not abnormal, the large supply of mums makes it difficult to sell all of them. Prices, consequently, have taken quite a drop and probably will go lower if the mum supply is not soon shortened by cloudy weather.

Violets showed a marked improvement last week. The quality is much better and the supply has increased to such an extent that shipments are being made daily. Valley and lilies are not overabundant and are selling well. Rubrum lilies were quite plentiful for a few days, but the surplus was disposed of without affecting the market for other stock to any extent.

Various Notes.

The Baumgarten Floral Co. has taken the store east of its present location and will combine the two places into one large shop, which will have excellent facilities for displaying the stock. Mrs. Baumgarten left October 30 for an eastern trip. As her trip is partly for pleasure, her stay is somewhat indefinite, but it is expected that she will return within a few weeks.

One of the most elaborate and fashionable weddings that Milwaukee has ever had took place at St. James church, where Miss Elsbeth Pabst and Douglas Parmentier were married October 28. The decorations were wonderful and favorable comments on them were printed in the newspapers. J. M. Fox & Son had charge of the affair and they surely showed what they could do when given carte blanche. The church was decorated with Easter lilies, palms, ferns and greens. Over 700 lilies were used and the sight was entrancing. The residence was decorated extensively with a great number of American Beauties, chrysanthemums and roses. There were banks of callas that had the appearance of growing. The bride's table was decorated with three immense centerpieces in white, composed of White Killarney, swainsona, valley and adiantum. The buffet table had a piece composed of Ward roses, croton foliage and valley, and ribbons to match the colors of the flowers. This piece was out of the ordinary and exceedingly attractive. Other tables were decorated artistically with roses and valley. The maid of honor and the six bridesmaids wore orchid-colored gowns, in four shades, and carried bouquets composed of orchids and George Elger roses. The bride carried a bouquet of white orchids and valley. Miss Sommers, who handled a large part of the work on the decorations, was seriously handicapped, for she badly burned her arm and hand only two days before the wedding. She was game, however, and worked a large part of the night in order to have the decorations out on time. H. J. S.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Ideal fall weather has prevailed in this section for the last three weeks, with the nights just cool enough for a little heat. It is bringing stock along in grand shape for the winter trade. Flowers of all kinds at present are plentiful enough to fill the demand, although the call runs principally to mums, which are beginning to show up in larger quantities, the demand being for the medium grades, fancy ones not being called for to any great extent. All Souls' day cleaned up all in sight at prices ranging from $1.50 to $3 per dozen. A good many outdoor mums are grown in this section by the farmers and gardeners and there has been no cold weather to affect them this fall. Consequently the market was glutted with that grade of stock, which sold for "any old" price. The trade as a whole was satisfied with the business done.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Halloween and All Saints' day slightly accelerated business. Election day retarded it. Speaking broadly, the market is in fair shape for most of the flowers, but not for roses. The best midseason chrysanthemums are now in full swing. With them are some fine pompons and semidouble varieties. For these there is demand at moderate prices. Carnations have improved in popular favor as the dahlias have disappeared. The price of carnations is low, about half of that of one month ago, but considering the quality of flowers on the market, more for them could hardly be expected. Valley has receded to $4 per hundred, which is now a high price. Easter lilies have fallen to one-half the high-water mark in October, competition with white chrysanthemums being the cause. Orchids are shortening in supply and the best of them bring high prices. The low figures quoted on others is explained by their poor quality. Gardenias are exceedingly scarce; only two growers are sending flowers into town and many orders were hard to fill. Nobody seems to care for the modest violet, which requires much pushing to attract attention. Callas, snapdragons and bouvardias are of excellent quality and more numerous. Cypripediums have come. The demand for greens is a shade stronger.

Current Events.

The most progressive growers, realizing the importance of reducing operating expenses in these times of overproduction, are searching diligently for improved methods. Myers & Samtman have installed an apparatus for handling coal on their place at Chestnut Hill, which is proving most successful in reducing expense. It consists of two distinct devices. The first is a portable endless chain and buckets for emptying coal cars. This machine is placed between the coal car and the coal wagon. The trap of the coal car is opened, letting the coal to the ground. The electric current that furnishes power for the machine is then turned on and the machine starts. Each of the twenty-five buckets scoops up a shovelful of coal and runs up the inclined plane to the top, where it drops the coal into the wagon beneath, and so on until the wagon is filled. The second device is similar to the first, except that the buckets are replaced by scoops that carry the coal on a track from the concrete box where the wagons dump, to the top of the coal pile. This link-belt apparatus also is run by electricity.

With these two machines, Myers & Samtman have been able to load, haul and pile 125 tons of coal in ten hours, with two double and one single teams. The distance from the siding to the coal pile is about a quarter of a mile. The cost when the coal was shoveled from car to wagon and then thrown on the pile was about 36 cents per ton. With the new machinery the cost has been reduced one-half. In addition to this, the work is much lighter, as all the hard shoveling is done by the machine. The concrete box, where the wagons dump, is covered with a heavy iron grating, through which the coal

Club Meeting.

The November meeting of the Florists' Club was held election day, November 2, in the clubroom at Horticultural hall. The club voted that street sellers of plants and flowers were a benefit to the florists' business. John Westcott spoke in the negative and William P. Craig in the affirmative. Other speakers were Charles H. Grakelow, Harvey S. Betz, Charles E. Meehan and J. F. Zieger. Edward Towill exhibited five rose seedlings and the Florex Gardens displayed Prima Donna.

Mr. Wright feels encouraged over business prospects for the near future, business during the last month having been considerably more than the corresponding month of last year.

yellow. McNiece and Doctor Enguehard are recent arrivals. All this is mum news.

The M. Rice Co. is having a great run on Featherbloom, the novelty. The home-made rustic wreaths and ruscus are superior, Mr. Brunswick says, to the imported stock.

Henry F. Michell calls attention to the fact that the improvement in cosmos enables the growers to produce flowers three times as large as formerly.

Ludwig P. Vollers has completed handsome improvements to his Chestnut street store. Phil.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Trade was brisk last week, despite the oversupply of stock in practically all lines. The market is flooded with chrysanthemums, with increased shipments coming in daily. Chrysolora is more than holding its own. Outdoor pompons are numerous and move slowly. The oversupply of mums has had a tendency to hold down the prices and to retard the sale of other flowers, particularly carnations. Dahlias still are to be had in liberal quantities.

Double violets have made their appearance, but do not sell well, even at 50 to 75 cents per hundred. The cause of the slow movement is assigned to the weather, which is too warm to make violets desirable for street wear. Single violets are improving both in size of flower and length of stem, but, like the double violets, their sale is restricted because of the weather.

Easter lilies and lily of the valley are no longer scarce and the former are to be had at $1.50 per dozen, while the price of valley has declined to $4 per hundred. There has been a reduction in the supply of cattleyas, accompanied by an increased demand. Sweet peas made their appearance during the week, but not in sufficient quantities to amount to anything.

Many of the stores had large wedding decorations during the week. October is said to have averaged far better than October of any previous year. Despite the fact that such improvement is noted, collections are declared to be slow. Funeral work has been exceptionally heavy. The football season is expected to take up a large part of the surplus chrysanthemums and to materially increase their price.

Various Notes.

J. Louis Loose, of the Washington Floral Co., is reported to be confined to his home suffering from an attack of the grip.

A number of attractive Halloween displays were seen at the local stores last week. J. H. Small & Sons had a decoration in one of their windows which depicted Old Mother Goose astride her broom and equipped with the tall, pointed hat so familiar to the children. The sharp-pointed nose, supporting a pair of spectacles, and the cloak which awes the little ones, were not forgotten. The background consisted of large palms and huge standards of cornstalks. These brought into prominence the vases of choice chrysanthemums placed on the sides and in the foreground. A large pile of pumpkins of all sizes and shapes completed the display.

George C. Shaffer, at Fourteenth and I streets, northwest, had a woodland scene with a background showing a rustic fence. In the center were pumpkins, hollowed to serve as receptacles for daisies and chrysanthemums. Vases of chrysanthemums and handsomely colored oak foliage gave color to the scene.

The Washington Floral Co. is receiving, from its houses at Alexandria, some good Double White Killarney roses. Mrs. George Shawyer and Mrs. Russell are exceptionally good. C. L. L.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Business continues to improve and stock is plentiful. We have had no rain for some time and it is warmer than usual at this time of the year, making it harder to handle the stock satisfactorily. This is especially true of chrysanthemums with heavy foliage.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The supply of mums increases daily and, while they cut into the sale of roses and carnations to a large extent, the market has taken up all stock being offered. Prices are rather lower than a week ago, especially on carnations, which have not been moving well. The demand for white mums in medium sizes was heavy November 1, there being not enough for all. Quantities of outdoor spray mums have made their appearance and cut into the sale of indoor stock. Wedding orders have used up quite a bit of valley. Greens are still in good supply, with only a fair demand.

Various Notes.

The Franklin Davis Nursery Co. has gone into the hands of a receiver. The Western National Bank, of this city, a creditor in the sum of $30,000, filed the petition in the U. S. District Court which resulted in the appointment of William F. Stone to carry on the affairs of the company. Samuel A. Burk, of Mitchellville, and Jos. E. White, of the same place, claim to be creditors for $963.14 and $7,358.28 respectively. The estate of Rufus Woods, owner of property occupied by the offices of the concern, also claims promissory notes given for rental remaining unpaid. The receiver's bond was fixed at the nominal sum of $7,500.

The Old Town Floral Co. will remove from its present location, 586 North Gay street, to 2301 East Fayette street, about November 10.

Henry Weber & Sons, of Oakland, Md., are sending some fine cattleyas to the Pennock-Meehan Co.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Wagner are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a son October 28.

Kirkley's Flower Shop is showing a well arranged fall window decoration. Shocks of cornstalks are arranged in the background, while in front oak foliage, yellow mums and pumpkins are used to good advantage.

GET READY Festoon Winding Machines Improved

Third year on the market. Two types. Makes all kinds of Festooning. Type No. 1 will wrap on any size wire used for its center. One turn with handle gives two wraps on Festooning. Center wire is measured while Festooning is wound, which eliminates measuring of Festooning. Type No. 2: Fine wire is used for the center, one turn with handle gives one wrap on Festooning. Does equally as good work as Type No. 1. We furnish machines ready to work, with enough wire to make 500 yards. Three days' trial allowed. Money refunded if machine is not what you want. Prices:

show, to be held in the Fifth Regiment Armory November 16 to 20, are all well in hand. The floral committee, through William Feast, chairman, reports everything in good shape. It is desired by the committee to get the plant entries in as early as possible, so that sufficient space may be allotted. The positions will be given in the order the entries are received, the early ones having the preference. At the next club meeting, November 8, the final arrangements are to be made and a large attendance is hoped for at this meeting.

The Market.

The market last week had its ups and downs. The summer-like weather brought out stock in large quantities. Quite a good demand was reported by all the leading stores. Chrysanthemums are now the leaders in the cut flower market. There was a good demand for stock on All Saints' day, November 1, which kept the wholesalers quite busy. Cut stock was plentiful last week and prices good. Chrysanthemums in all varieties and colors seem to enjoy a good demand. The pompon varieties are arriving in big lots. A glut in carnations and roses is expected, as the warm weather is bringing in large quantities of them. Violets are plentiful, but cooler weather is needed to bring out the quality. Valley and Easter lilies hold their own. Green goods are, as usual, fine.

Various Notes.

The meeting of the officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club, the Carnation Society committee, the flower show committee and the transportation committee was held October 28, at the home of Frank Windler. It was an interesting meeting and much good work was accomplished. The chairmen for the various committees for the Carnation Society convention were appointed. The transportation committee announced that the Big Four route would carry local members to the Cleveland and Chicago flower shows, and the flower show committee prepared a final report to be read at the next club meeting. The officers called a special meeting November 4, which was held at the store of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co. The regular meeting will be postponed for a week, as most of the officers will be out of the city on the regular meeting day. An invitation was extended by W. W. Ohlweiler to hold the meeting at the Missouri Botanical Garden. The invitation was accepted and the meeting will be held November 18, in the lecture room.

Miss Matilda Meinhardt, prominent in trade circles here and especially in the Ladies' Auxiliary of the S. A. F., and William H. Boaz, a real estate man, have announced their engagement. The wedding will take place soon. Mr. Boaz resides in Kirkwood, where he has a large home.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle will meet November 10 at the home of Mrs. George B. Windler, 4059 Delore avenue, at 2 p. m.

The heads of the five wholesale houses held a meeting and revised their credit system, making changes for the betterment of both wholesalers and retailers. A circular was sent to all in the trade asking that all bills in the future be paid by the fifteenth day of each month.

November 6 will be known as flower day. This was announced by the daily press. About 1,000 young society women will sell flowers in all parts of the city, the proceeds going to the Christian Old Folks' Home.

The flower booths at the war relief bazaar, held at the Coliseum under the supervision of Adolph Brix, were a big attraction and a financial success. Mr. Brix was much pleased with the support given him by the florists.

David Geddis reports that the sale of bulbs last week was double that of a year ago. The cut flower department was kept busy, too.

The St. Louis Seed Co. is booking many orders for holly for Christmas delivery. August Hummert, vice-president of the company, says the over-the-counter bulb sales far surpassed those of last year.

Any one in the trade wishing to make the trip to the Cleveland and Chicago flower shows should not fail to notify one of the transportation committee, which consists of Messrs. Geddis, Berning and Pilcher.

The Connon Floral Co., of Webster Groves, has a new auto delivery car of attractive pattern. This firm is supplying a fine lot of white and yellow pompons. The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. handles the output.

Adolph Jaenicke says that his committee will report favorably on the advisability of holding a spring flower show, as it has plans that will surely make the show a great success.

A. Jablonsky and John Steidle, of Olivette, are each having a grand cut of fancy carnations. Mr. Steidle's new carnation, Sunbeam, which made a good impression at the Buffalo convention of the Carnation Society, is showing fine blooms and will be entered at the coming carnation meeting.

J. F. Ammann had a good excuse for not being present at the special meeting of the officers October 28. Mrs. Ammann had a big surprise planned for him, the day being their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

Fred C. Weber's big show house attracted a great deal of attention last week. Some excellent mum plants in full bloom and fancy cut stock were shown.

The advertising of free flowers for October 29 attracted a great crowd of people to the opening of the new store of the Mullanphy Florists, at Eighth and Locust streets.

A report of the death of Edward G. Eggeling will be found in this week's obituary column.

Visitors last week were Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; J. J. Karins, of Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, and Thomas Knight, of Knight & Struck Co., New York. J. J. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are now at their flood tide. In spite of their abundance, they have not yet demoralized the market as in preceding years; in fact, prices show a wonderful improvement when compared with those of a year ago. In addition to the varieties named last week, there are now a good many Ivory mums. This old favorite continues to sell well, as does Bonnaffon. There is an increased supply of pompons, but they clean up well, especially the yellow and bronze. Roses are off crop. Most of the growers are timing the roses for holiday cuts. Prices on roses have receded a little, but not seriously. The abundance of mums, of course, affects the sale of long-stemmed stock, Beauties suffering more, probably, than any other sort. Ophelia, Russell, Hadley, Shawyer and Sunburst are the leading favorites, but all other sorts clean up well. Short-stemmed stock has dropped to $1 per hundred.

The carnation market remains much the same as that of a week ago, which must be considered encouraging. Specially good sorts at present are Matchless, Alice, White Wonder, Benora and Pink Delight. Violets, both single and double, are much more abundant and lower in price. There is a larger supply of Lilium longiflorum and prices are lower. Valley remains about the same. Snapdragon, as yet, is somewhat short-stemmed. There is a good call for pink shades. Cosmos Lady Lenox is good. Until this week some of the cosmos has come from outdoors, as well as dahlias. Cattleyas sell moderately. There is now a good crop of gardenias available. Good flowers of these make $3 per dozen. The call for green stock was weaker last week, but the pot plant trade has improved. Chrysanthemums are now the leaders among flowering plants.

Boston Bowlers' Scores.

The results of the bowling contests of the Boston Florists' Bowling League, held October 28, were as follows, candlepins being used:

Galvin's	1347	McAlpine & McD'd.	1288
Flower Exchange	1233	Robinson's	1252
Zinn's	1340	Coöperative Mkt.	1258
Carbone's	1311	Pansies	1230

Various Notes.

William H. Elliott is this season growing a number of the single Irish roses at his Madbury establishment, Fireflame, Glory and Beauty being all good. Old Gold proves to be quite popular. Pot mums are now being marketed in large numbers. The various forms of Wells' Caprice are good sellers. They are dwarf, bushy and need practically no supports.

At the Mechanics hall country fair, October 28, there was a contest for twelve vases of carnations. A. Roper took first prize with a fine lot; Patten & Co were second.

William T. Walke, of Salem, has an unusually fine lot of poinsettias, cyclamens and Cincinnati begonias for the holidays. All Mr. Walke's plants are well grown and sell on sight.

The Halifax Garden Co. is the largest shipper of pompon mums to the local market at present, yellow being the best selling color. The Sunburst, Hadley, Killarney, Taft and other roses are of fine quality.

A. H. Westhaver, of Malden, has a good cut of White Cloud, Chrysolora, Halliday and other mums. English primroses are grown in quantity and 100,000 bulbs are forced.

At Penn's over thirty designs were made for the funeral of ex-Governor Rollins, of Concord, N. H. A charming little booklet entitled The Blue Flower will be issued by this enterprising concern monthly. The initial number appeared last week and met with instant approval. It contains many beautiful thoughts and sentiments pertaining to flowers, and the advertising on the inside of the back cover page is unobtrusive. Work on the new store on Tremont street proceeds apace, but so much has to be done that the work cannot be completed in less than five weeks.

Harry Quint has purchased a new light delivery car, which he finds a wonderful help in his business.

The fall flower show at Horticultural hall was the leading topic last week. The date, November 4, was a trifle early for pot mums, which are fully a week late this season.

J. A. Nelson, of Framingham, has been in the Framingham hospital for an operation, but is recovering satisfactorily. He is supplying the market with fine pink and white snapdragons. Alice, Matchless, Benora and Pink Delight are the principal varieties included in his carnation shipments.

W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, and H. F. Calder, of Norwood, are sending in excellent Lady Campbell violets.

The Ivory chrysanthemum remains a favorite with Peter Hylen, of Randolph. He grows Halliday well and in quantity.

Mann Bros. are selling Dolly Dimple, a pompon mum of lovely soft pink color. They have a fine variety of other mums, such as G. S. Kalb, Chrysolora, Pacific Supreme, Ivory and Bonnaffon.

Recent awards made at the Panama-Pacific Exposition prove the preëminence of Massachusetts as a dahlia-growing state. The grand prize was won by Forbes & Keith, of New Bedford, who also took two silver medals for seedlings. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. were awarded the medal of honor and Geo. H. Walker, of Dighton, Mass., captured a gold medal. B. Hammond Tracy, of Wenham, and William Sim, of Cliftondale, captured gold medals for gladioli. The Bay State Nurseries and New England Nurseries each received silver medals for hardy perennials.

The annual election of officers of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will occur November 13.

J. T. Butterworth has only a small number of Cattleya labiata open as yet. He usually has a big crop when other growers' crops are cut and when prices are much higher. He has not yet started cutting Cypripedium insigne.

William Downs, of the E. S. Webster estate, Chestnut Hill, has some magnificent plants of the brilliant begonia, Mrs. Heal. The plants are a yard across and a mass of flowers. He also has fine batches of Optimo, Winter Cheer and other sorts.

Herman Waldecker, of Braintree, has a grand crop of Halliday mums. His single violets are good.

October proved a delightful month climatically, the temperature being above the average, precipitation below normal and skies generally clear. November 1 there still were quantities of outdoor flowers, such as salvias, cosmos, pompon mums, Japanese anemones, geraniums, petunias and buddleias. Hybrid tea roses still carry some excellent flowers.

Patten & Co., of Tewksbury, have some fine Pink Sensation carnations. Peerless Pink, Matchless, Jove, a light pink seedling, Benora and Pink Delight are some of their leaders.

W. F. Turner, of Woburn, and Cahill & Beasley, of East Milton, are large shippers of high-grade pansies.

M. Leibman is receiving an excellent lot of Ivory and Halliday mums from Peter Hylen, of Randolph. Oswald Ralph, of South Weymouth, has finished sending him a fine crop of Glory of the Pacific mums.

At the annual election of directors of the Boston Coöperative Flower Market, held October 30, Perry E. Green, J. Streiferd and Norris F. Comley were elected in place of John Barr, L. E. Small and Thomas Capers. The remaining directors are the same as a year ago. The market has had a successful year, and prospects for the ensuing year are excellent. The directors decided not to have a banquet this year.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

I am glad to say that business conditions are much better than those reported for last week. Probably on account of Halloween parties and social affairs, business has taken another spurt. There is plenty of stock on the market and most of it is arriving in first-class condition. A heavy frost has spoiled all outdoor flowers, which, even so late in the season, were quite plentiful. Dahlias, which were in the best of condition before the frost, are all gone. Most of the growers were picking flowers all day Sunday, thereby saving many dollars. The stock is confined to a smaller variety and cheap flowers are out of the question. Carnations are slow this season and that makes it still more difficult. However, the carnations are larger and more fragrant and bring a good figure. Chrysanthemums are the popular flowers now and many varieties are seen, all of which are fine. Chrysolora, Touset, Chadwick and Chieftain are good sellers and bring a fair price. In pompons, the yellow and pink sell well. Minta and Garza are favorites. Roses are good and are selling well. Wards and Sunbursts have exceptionally good color. Shawyer and Wm. Randolph Hearst sell nicely. Fine bouvardias in pink, red and white meet with ready buyers. Violets are not selling so readily as they should. Valley is extra good but high-priced. Easter lilies are good and sell briskly, but callas are scarce. Orchids are particularly fine. Tuberoses are letting up now. Some extra fine cosmos, sheltered from the frost, is exceptionally welcome at the present time. Good cyclamens and primulas sell rapidly, as do the good mum plants received daily.

Various Notes.

Greenhouse reports show that men are busy drawing sod and planting bulbs. Bulbs are fine indeed this year. The park department has planted over 250,000 bulbs so far and many remain to be planted. Many new and choice shrubs have been added to the park collections.

Lars Granson, of The Flower Shop, who has been somewhat indisposed for a week or more, is improving and is back at the store.

William Ehmann, of Corfu, N. Y., is shipping in some wonderfully fine Chieftain mums, which are well liked and sell rapidly. David Scott, of Corfu, is sending in several varieties of mums.

Among the visitors last week were Edward K. Sithens, of the Bowen-Dungan Co., Philadelphia; Henry C. Heilemann, representing W. B. Lake, Philadelphia; John R. Fridlington, of the Wright & Graham Co., New York; Harry Meyer, of Louis Meyer & Bro., New York; H. Neubrand, of A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; the representative of the Fajimi Co., of New York, and Max A. Fierstein, of the Moore Seed Co., Philadelphia.

Another rehearsal previous to the Cleveland trip was held at the Elks' Bowling Club by the members of the Rochester Florists' Bowling Club, October 29, who will bowl in the Cleveland show tournament.

A number of Halloween windows were used by the florists last week, and all attracted much attention. J. B. Keller Sons had an artistic arrangement in which cats and flowers predominated. H. E. Wilson displayed a large horn of plenty which was covered with yellow crepe paper. The mouth of the cornucopia was filled with all kinds of vegetables. Large yellow and white chrysanthemums were on display. The Rochester Floral Co. showed much taste in its arrangement. Large pumpkins filled with flowers, as well as pretty flower baskets, made a fine showing. E. C. Armbrust had a good window of cornstalks and baskets. A. W. Gillman had two mammoth pumpkins, which were grown from his own seed.

F. C. Schlegel's Sons report good business during the last few weeks. Their greenhouses are filled with good Thanksgiving stock.

J. B. Keller Sons are handling bulbs this year at their store. The sale of bulbs has been unusually lively and business on the whole is good.

Several beautiful decorations were supplied by florists for the celebration attending the opening of the Baker theater.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

IN the big onion set district south of Chicago there are thousands upon thousands of empty trays stacked around the fields.

A WELL appointed seed store has been opened by the Planters Seed Co., of Americus, Ga. W. C. Gardner is manager of the store, which has as a motto, "We Sell Seeds That Grow."

EARLY in December Interstate Commerce Commission Examiner Waters will take testimony at Lincoln, Neb., in the complaint of the Griswold Seed Co. vs. the C. & S. R. R., involving rates on seeds.

AS from forty to fifty per cent of the bean crop was destroyed by frost the latter part of August, and what remained was further damaged by the wet weather, many seedsmen believe that not even the seed for the crop will be recovered.

LESTER L. MORSE, San Francisco, expresident of the American Seed Trade Association, and his wife were guests at the Blackstone hotel, Chicago, last week while en route to the Atlantic coast. They were accompanied by O. L. Coulter, of C. C. Morse & Co.

AS the result of a romance that had its beginning in St. Luke's hospital, Chicago, about a year ago, A. D. Heffron, a department manager in the Albert Dickinson Co., and Miss Lina E. Brown, who nursed him back to life and health, will be married November 6.

W. A. DAVIS, head of the W. A. Davis Seed Co., of Bozeman, Mont., which has contracted for a large acreage of seed peas this year, says that the general average yield per acre is high. In one variety, Perfection, Mr. Davis says no yield fell below forty bushels per acre. He has contracted for 200 acres of that variety.

THE cable brings brief word from Berlin via London that "the parcel post service to America has been discontinued until further notice. No official reason for the discontinuance is given." But it means a great deal to seedsmen, in Germany and America, as the mail has been bringing large quantities of the smaller and more valuable seeds, especially flower seeds.

THE yearly meeting of the Western Packers' Association at Hotel Sherman, Chicago, October 27 and 28, was, from the standpoint of the sweet corn canners in particular, a complete success. The sweet corn conditions are improving and the business outlook is favorable. Among the visitors were Charles P. Guelph, of the J. B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; C. B. Coe, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., and Mr. Mather, of the Evergreen Park Seed Co.

A. H. SMITH, treasurer of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, has been east attending to the prosecution of a suit for damages filed against Isaac Seerata & Son, Bridgeton, N. J., for non-acceptance of a car of onion sets sold under contract. The contract price was from $1.30 to $1.50 per bushel. Judgment was recov-

THE MATTER OF PRICE

There is an old saying that the best is the cheapest. It is so common that much of its effect is lost. Nevertheless it is a true saying. The best is the cheapest. A man who buys a $2.50 pair of shoes and wears them three months is paying twice what a man pays who buys a pair at $5.00 and wears them a year. The florist who rents a store on a back street for $20.00 per month—if he wants results—is paying a tremendously higher price than the man who rents one on the main thoroughfare at $200.00 a month. The same rule applies to lily bulbs—the best is the cheapest. This is a fundamental fact. It is a scientific truth. You can buck against it, just as you can against any fundamental fact, but you cannot change the fact one iota. First, last, and all the time, get the best lily bulbs, if you want the maximum results at the minimum of expenditure to accomplish these results. The best lily bulbs in the world are without a doubt Horseshoe Brand Giganteum. This is a fact backed by ten years' proof—more profit has been made with this brand than any brand ever sold. Prices are as follows:

$16.00 per case of 400 bulbs, 6x 8
15.00 " " " 300 " 7x 9
19.00 " " " 200 " 9x10

NOW IS THE TIME TO ORDER.

Not how cheap but how good.

WASHINGTON ATLEE BURPEE

Mr. Burpee was born April 5, 1858, at Sheffield, New Brunswick. When a child he was brought to Philadelphia by his parents. He was educated at the Friends' School and the University of Pennsylvania. In 1876 he entered the seed industry. The firm of W. Atlee Burpee & Company is now the largest mail order seed business in the world. He is a director of the Market Street National Bank, the Northern Trust Company. He has held high offices in the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, the American Seed Trade Association, National Sweet Pea Association of America, and National Sweet Pea Association of Great Britain. His clubs are the Union League, Art, University, City, Racquet, Bachelors' Barge and Poor Richard, of Philadelphia; the Lansdowne Country, Merion Cricket, and National Arts and City Clubs of New York.

ered by the Leonard Seed Co., for $225, the difference between the contract price and the amount actually sold for, and costs. On his return, Mr. Smith visited Philadelphia. S. F. Leonard, president of the company, has returned from a trip through Iowa and Nebraska, where he has been looking over crops of corn and vine seeds.

It looks like a year when sweet corn for seed will be a decidedly undependable article.

Wax beans are reported as bringing $14 a bushel, but are practically out of the market.

The Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, sold 1,000 bushels of their Leonard's Narrow Grain Evergreen sweet corn on the floor during the session of the Western Packers' Association.

While the imports of Dutch bulbs through the port of New York this season have run a little heavier than a year ago, the Canadian imports are passing through the United States this year, because of the interruption of the usual transportation facilities, and should be reckoned off in computing the quantities consumed in our markets.

NORTHRUP-KING TO BUILD.

Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, having closed a deal with the heirs of the John S. Pillsbury estate for a tract of eight acres in northeast Minneapolis, plan to erect a large central warehouse. The tract fronts on Central avenue and lies within Fourteenth and Eighteenth avenues, N. E. The building of the central plant, according to C. C. Massie, president of Northrup, King & Co., will commence next spring with the erection of two units of a group of buildings, to be finished through the following two or three years, to house all the wholesale activities of the company and be in every way a complete and modern seeds plant.

The buildings to be erected in the spring will take over the business now done in the large St. Louis Park warehouse, will house the stocks of onion sets, thirty-one carloads of which are now in the Green & De Laittre building on Third street, N., will take in several hundred carloads of seed now in the Security warehouse, and will care for the cleaning, packing and milling of the company's seeds. The general offices will be continued for a year or two at First street and Hennepin avenue. G. W. A.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

William P. Stubbs, of Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky., commenting on the vagaries of the seed business, especially at this time, quoted from what purported to be the latest bulletin, previous to shipment, from a foreign shipper: "One-fourth crop of beets, carrots and onions; radishes and turnips considerably less; some kinds of turnips almost nil." Among home growers salsify is a short crop. In red and black Valentine beans, of which Mr. Stubbs' contract called for 1,000 bushels of each, and for 3,000 bushels of Kentucky Wonder, a yield of sixty per cent is reported. These are leaders in the south. In grasses, orchard grass, redtop and Kentucky blue, a good harvest is reported, with prices steady just now, but with a tendency to advance, although redtop recently dropped in price. A scarcity of onion seed, especially white, is expected for some time. Good deliveries of sweet peas, including one popular sort which has never been delivered in full quota, have arrived, and as the quantity was almost quadrupled in the contract, there will be plenty for customers. Mr. Stubbs mentioned this, showing the chances taken in estimating receipts and the endeavor of the grower to fill his part of the contract. The hardy plant department is proving to be a valuable adjunct to the retail branch of the business.

The Ohio Valley Seed Co., of Evansville, Ind., reports one of the best seasons in its experience. Cereals and grasses are retailing well. There is a bright future.

The Heldt Co., of Evansville, says the sale of sprayers was poor last season. This is a general record, owing to the moist summer. Sales of field seeds and implements were fully up to the average, said Manager W. Munro.

The Yopp Seed Co., of Paducah, Ky., attributes the increase in its business largely to the monthly bulletin mailed to the country patrons, especially during the dull months. Seasonable literature is appreciated. W. M.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

DECORATION BY A. O. STEIN.

Members of the S. A. F. who attended the convention in San Francisco may recognize, in the photograph reproduced herewith, the teakwood paneling of the Italian room of the St. Francis hotel. Although the hotel was built shortly after the fire of 1906, the first wedding to be held in the Italian room took place only recently. A large order for decorations came with it. Garlands of white asters and masses of tiger lilies, arranged against a background of ferns and oak leaves, were the flowers used. The garlands were strung so as to form an aisle leading up to the wedding canopy. The method of lighting should be noticed. Candle-shaped electric light globes, in keeping with the candelabra on the altar, were placed in the upturned bowls of the supports upon which the floral ropes were strung. The occasion was the Patek-Newman wedding. A. O. Stein gets the credit for the decoration.

Wedding Decoration by A. O. Stein, in a San Francisco Hotel.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

A few hot days last week brought stock to the market rapidly and for a time there was more or less of a glut, consisting chiefly of chrysanthemums and roses. A saving factor was the automobile show, which used a large quantity of flowers and thereby greatly helped to relieve the pressure. Business varies considerably from day to day and, while there are some orders for social affairs, funeral work is the mainstay of the trade. Among the new arrivals last week were a few early ranunculus blooms, which are unusually attractive at this time of the year.

Pasadena Society Show.

The eighth annual flower show of the Pasadena Horticultural Society was held at Central park, Pasadena, October 28 to 30. In the matter of exhibits the show was the largest and most successful ever held by the society. The two large tents housing the exhibits were filled long before all the displays were staged.

In the competitive classes, the large plants were well grown, but some of them were a trifle thin. The pompons were splendid and the cut flowers were large and had been cut at the proper time. The trade groups were fine, probably the best of all coming from Edward Rust, of South Pasadena. This entry consisted of nursery stock, assorted as to color and fitness for certain outdoor positions.

The Clemence nursery had handsome groups of small flowering and foliage plants. Paul Howard showed a miniature mansion, the lawn and grounds of which were planted with specimen plants of many kinds. The Germain Seed & Plant Co., of Los Angeles, showed a group of palms, ferns and foliage plants, interspersed with blooms of dahlias and cosmos. The material of this entry was good, but it was crowded because of a sudden change in the position at the last minute. George Smith, of Los Angeles, showed specimen stock and the Morris & Snow Seed Co., of Los Angeles, had a good collection of Dutch, French and other bulbs, surrounded by plants.

The Campbell Seed Store and the Patton Seed Co., both of Pasadena, had exhibits of seeds and bulbs. H. W. Turner, of Montebello, staged a dozen large vases of the newer roses. Mrs. W. S. Laurie, of Pasadena, had a distinctive display of dahlias in many varieties.

The opening day of the show was extremely hot and some of the flowers were badly wilted early in the day. Unfortunately, there was not sufficient room in the tent to permit good stagings. The exhibits were so crowded that it was impossible to view all of them with comfort. A larger show place could have been obtained, but President Shields said no one expected such large entries in the plant classes.

The judges were William Donald, of Santa Barbara; Alec Urquhart, William Hertrich, E. H. Rust and William Farrell, of Pasadena, and H. W. Turner and Frank Shearer, of Los Angeles.

Various Notes.

T. D. Robertson, of Fullerton, has built three greenhouses on Commonwealth avenue, where he intends to move all his stock shortly. Two of the houses are 20x66 and one 12x66. These houses are to take care of the flowers and plants to be grown for the retail trade. A lath house of about one acre has been added to the range, which shows that Mr. Robertson is going after the business at Fullerton in earnest. He has always grown fine stock and, now that he is to locate on a good business street, Mr. Robertson should build up a big business.

C. E. Morton has sold his flower store at Phoenix, Ariz., to J. Brazee and, according to latest reports, will return to Los Angeles, where all will be glad to see him in improved health.

The automobile and flower show was a great success, according to the promoters. There certainly was a fine lot of automobiles.

Some of the finest chrysanthemums ever seen in this city, either at private or commercial places, were the mums noted at the Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson store last week. The immense blooms of William Turner, which would have taken a high rating at any exhibition, were superb in every way.

W. Wern, manager of Wright's Flower Shop, reports business as improving nicely. The stock on display in the windows is proof that this store is out for the business. Mr. Wright sticks to the old Mme. Chatenay rose.

Daniel MacRorie, of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., of San Francisco, passed through the city en route to San Diego, but promised President Shields, of the Pasadena Horticultural Society, that he would be back in time for the show at the Crown City.

Congratulations on the condition of its stock are coming to the L. A. Floral Co. in the form of repeat orders from distant points like New Orleans and Texas cities.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The local market situation is hardly as satisfactory as for some time past. Retail business, though good, is not rushing, and flowers of several kinds are a little overplentiful. The daily offerings include an appreciable quantity of gladioli, as well as a lot of cosmos, gaillardias, marigolds and other small summer stock. Dahlias, though far past their prime, are plentiful, while seasonable stock of all kinds is coming in more freely. Indeed, the market is almost overloaded with chrysanthemums, which are in almost infinite variety of size and color and clean up rather slowly at easy prices. Among the best are Wm. Turner and Maud Jeffries, Clara Wells, Bonnaffon, Chrysolora, Hunter and Chieftain. Several varieties are even finer than last year. Of course great quantities are now being shipped. The eastern shipments, with the new express service, probably aggregate several carloads a week of mums alone, but there are still more than enough. Pompons and Chinese outdoor mums are also offered in large quantity and variety.

Violets are in ample supply and the quality is first-class, though a little rain will improve them. They are now figuring largely in the shipping trade. A good shipping demand is also noted for asparagus, adiantum and Mexican ivy, which are plentiful, and for Cecile Brunner roses, which are a little scarce, but of nice quality. There is a fine cut of roses. Ophelia is excellent and moves well everywhere. Russell, Shawyer and White Killarney are doing well, but supplies do not clean up closely. Beauties are being held back. Lilies are scarce. A few callas are in and sell readily. There are plenty of orchids, Cattleya labiata being most plentiful.

In potted stock, some fine cyclamens, full of bloom, are coming in and chrysanthemum plants look nice and find a good demand. Mixed ferns in small pots are also popular.

Fall Flower Show.

Because of lack of space in this department, the illustrated report of the exposition flower show is printed under the general show heading in this issue.

During the show Mrs. R. E. Darbee sent a box of her finest chrysanthemums to President Wilson at Washington, and had since had word from the PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business for the month of October was quite satisfactory, there being a marked increase over that of October of last year. The volume of local sales was greater and the demand from out-of-town points was more than doubled. There has been no stock wasted, for the stronger demand and the decreased supply of stock have brought the market to an even balance. Both growers and retailers have made more money, and the public has been as well served.

A few varieties of locally grown mums, such as Alice Byron, were added to the list last week. Cattleya labiata is the principal variety of orchid and the supply of it meets the requirements. Sufficient rain has fallen to enable the nurserymen to begin lifting stock, which is said to be in an excellent condition. Carnations are coming in more freely, but at times are scarce, especially the white varieties. There are enough roses in all colors. Several of the stores had Halloween displays last week.

Growers Discuss Credits.

Answering the call of the growers' committee of the Portland Floral Society, a number of growers met October 26. The question of introducing a credit system, whereby the responsibility of retailers could be ascertained, was discussed in detail and many of those present were in favor of it.

It was decided to establish a coöperative buying plan. James Forbes, A. Rahn and J. G. Bacher were named as a buying committee. All growers, whether members of the Portland Floral Society or not, have the privilege of buying through this committee, and will find it to their advantage to do so.

Letters were ordered sent to all the growers in this vicinity, asking them to attend the growers' meeting to be held in the Masonic Temple November 16, at 7 p. m. The Portland Floral Society holds its meeting at 8 o'clock the same evening.

If any grower has been overlooked in making up the mailing list, let him consider this notice an invitation to attend the meeting.

Various Notes.

Karl Bestel, landscape worker, grows violets as a side line to his business. He specializes on the Czar, the small double variety.

L. Doring, of the Max Smith store force, has returned from a hunting trip to the Pea Vine range of the Siskiyou mountains. His party brought home three deer and had splendid fishing.

The Van Kirk Floral Co. reports that its cut of carnations is increasing, but still is short of the demand. To avoid a possible glut during October, the plants in two of the houses were cut back.

Clark's Flower Shop, at 430 Washington street, reports a steady increase in business.

D. M. Cookingham has set perennials on the grounds surrounding his greenhouses on East Sixty-second street.

For several years he has grown tomatoes on a portion of the grounds, but the prices for them have been so low during the last two seasons that the crop did not pay. Mr. Cookingham's greenhouses are filled with young bedding stock, which he intends to wholesale.

The Portland branch of the Woolworth stores has opened a department in which plants are sold for 5 cents, 10 cents and 15 cents each, including the pots. These small plants are furnished by local growers and the effect of their sale on the general trade will be watched with interest.

The greenhouses of the Wilson-Crout Co. are well filled with good-looking stock. The benches of Pacific Supreme mums have all been cut, and a bench of Roman Gold and one of Old Gold are just coming into crop. The blooms on a lot of potted mums are beginning to open. Considerable space is given to Sprengeri. One house is filled with poinsettias, three with carnations, two with benched mums, and the rest with miscellaneous stock. J. A. Wilson, manager of the company, says business prospects are more encouraging than they were last year.

C. C. Ruenitz is now assisted by his daughter at the upper Washington street store.

At the Manufacturers' and Land Products show, which opened October 25 at the Armory, two small exhibits of dahlias constituted the floral display. A few of the exhibits were decorated with palms and ferns. The show lasts three weeks and conditions in the building are not favorable for keeping plants and flowers.

Mr. Koch, of the People's Flower Shop, at Second and Alder streets, said the favorable weather for continuing the supply of outdoor flowers had affected his business. He is hoping for a spell of cold rain or frost.

Kokomo, Ind.—The Aaron Deardorff greenhouses have been acquired by Leroy Shauman, of 600 West Walnut street, who intends to grow lettuce and bedding plants.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 22 to 24, 1916.

AN amendment to its charter has been filed by the El Paso Nursery Co., of El Paso, Tex., decreasing its capital stock from $20,000 to $15,000.

A RECEIVER was appointed October 20 for the Franklin Davis Nursery Co., of Baltimore, Md. Details will be found under "Business Embarrassments."

THE Interstate Commerce Commission has upheld the complaint of Coe, Converse & Edwards, of Fort Atkinson, Wis., that the rate of 30½ cents per hundred pounds on nursery stock from Vincennes, Ind., to Fort Atkinson is unreasonable, because it is in excess of the aggregate of the intermediate rates. A refund has been ordered paid to the complaining nurserymen.

USE OF ARSENATE OF CALCIUM.

In its investigations of insecticides and possible additions to the present list of insecticidal and fungicidal materials, the U. S. Department of Agriculture obtained encouraging results with arsenate of calcium. In these experiments the effects of arsenate of calcium, both alone and combined with lime-sulphur solution, were tested in comparison with arsenate of lead alone and in combination with lime-sulphur. The arsenate of calcium, as was the arsenate of lead, was used at the rate of two ponnds of each fifty gallons of water. In all the experiments the arsenate of calcium gave satisfactory results in killing the larvæ of the codling moth, tent caterpillar, tussock moth, etc., without burning the foliage. In a number of cases its killing action was somewhat slower than, but compared favorably with, the arsenate of lead. Since it can be produced more cheaply than the lead arsenate, it would appear to have distinct value, although it has not been sufficiently tested to permit recommending it unreservedly for general use. Where arsenate of calcium was combined with lime-sulphur it was, as a rule, even more effective as a poisoning agent than when used alone and did not lessen the value of the latter as a fungicide. When these compounds are combined, the amount of foliage consumed by the larvæ is less than where the arsenate of calcium is used alone.

In tests in 1914 a commercial arsenate of calcium (paste), arsenic oxide 18.82 per cent, with lime-sulphur solution, gave excellent control of the codling moth in comparison with arsenate of lead and with unsprayed plats. Where arsenate of calcium was used, 98.79 per cent of the apples were sound; arsenate of lead showed 99.44 per cent of sound apples; while in the unsprayed test plats only 58.71 per cent of the apples were free from damage.

The following will be found to be a convenient way of making arsenate of calcium:

Stone lime (90 per cent CaO), 55 pounds.
Sodium arsenate, fused (dry powdered), 65% As_2O_5, 100 pounds.
Water, 26 gallons.

Place the stone lime in a wooden container and add a small amount of water, just enough to start slaking. When slaking is well under way, pour in the sodium arsenate, which should first have been dissolved in hot water. Keep stirring until the lime has thoroughly slaked. Sufficient water should be added from time to time to prevent burning.

The resulting arsenate of calcium should contain about eighteen per cent of arsenic oxide. In making this compound it will of course be necessary to know approximately the calcium oxide and arsenic oxide content of the materials employed and to vary the formula accordingly. The by-product is largely sodium hydroxide, which should be decanted if the insecticide is to be used on tender foliage.

INSPECTION IN MONTANA.

Montana having joined the list of western states that have established places for the terminal inspection of plants and plant products, the Post-office Department has issued orders to the postal service that packages containing plants addressed to places in that state may be accepted for mailing only when plainly marked so that the contents may be readily ascertained by inspecting the exterior. The law makes the failure so to mark such packages an offense punishable by a fine of not more than $100.

The plants and plant products subject to terminal inspection in the state of Montana are described as follows:

All florists' stock, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, grafts, scions, buds, fruit pits and other seeds of fruit and ornamental trees or shrubs, and other plants and plant products in the raw or unmanufactured state, except vegetable and flower seeds.

The place to which a postmaster in Montana shall send for inspection, after receiving the required postage therefor, under the provisions of Section 478¼, Postal Laws and Regulations, a pack-

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Wilbur A. Christy, Warren, O.—"List of Mapleshade Gladioli," a neat, businesslike, 6-page folder. Seed of "choicest selected sorts" also is offered.

Knight & Struck Co., New York, N. Y.—"Flower Talks," a bound volume of the monthly 4-page bulletins that were prepared during 1914 by Maurice Fuld. Strictly speaking, this is not a catalogue, since it neither contains any prices nor any systematic, complete lists of stock, but it is undoubtedly a most effective supplement to the firm's catalogue. It is the more serviceable to the firm for the simple reason that it embodies a sincere and successful effort to be serviceable also to the firm's patrons, by furnishing much useful cultural information. Two styles of cover are used—one of them a cloth-backed magazine "binder," in which the bulletins are inserted as received, the other a neat blue paper cover, such as is used for the catalogue itself.

Otto Katzenstein & Co., Atlanta, Ga.—A 16-page catalogue of seeds of trees and shrubs, including conifers. Seeds and roots of herbaceous plants also are listed. At the end are "A Few Suggestions on Sowing Tree Seeds."

E. Turbat & Co., Orleans, France.—"Wholesale List of General Nursery Stock and Roses." That roses are treated as a specialty is not only indicated by the title of the catalogue, but is also proved by the fact that thirty-seven of the total 136 pages are devoted to these plants. The lists of newer roses, originated by this firm and by other raisers, are carefully arranged according to the dates of their introduction. In the general stock of fruit trees, ornamental trees, shrubs and herbaceous plants, many of the newer and rarer sorts are included.

Hammond's Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y.—Thirty-third edition of "Hammond's Slug Shot Pamphlet," an illustrated, 28-page catalogue of Slug Shot, Copper Solution, Grape Dust, Horicum, Cattle Comfort, and other preparations for the prevention or extermination of pests on both plants and animals, with instructions for the use of the remedies.

McCray Refrigerator Co., Kendallville, Ind.—"McCray Refrigerators for Florists, Catalogue No. 74," a 24-page book, freely and finely illustrated in colors and bound in a tasteful green and gold cover. The illustrations are both pleasing and instructive, as some of them show the interiors of well arranged stores where McCray refrigerators are installed.

M. Leenders & Co., Steil-Tegelen, Holland.—A 56-page, illustrated catalogue of roses, printed in the Holland language. The varieties are carefully classified; the paper is of good quality and the type is large and clear. Enclosed are two supplementary lists of the newer roses.

AVIATOR

WE INVITE all carnation growers who are attending the Chicago Floral Festival to join the excursion to our greenhouses at Joliet. We want you to see AVIATOR growing. When looking over the plants you will agree with us that it is the freest-blooming carnation ever produced. There are larger-flowering varieties, but there is none that can compare with AVIATOR for productiveness. Its intense scarlet coloring is incomparable.

A special train will leave Chicago the day of the banquet, at 11:45, via Rock Island, and return to Chicago about 5:30, in plenty of time for all to attend the banquet.

HYDRANGEAS

Our Hydrangeas are all grown in the open ground during the summer, where they make a very luxurious growth, producing heavy heads. They are potted up in August and are thoroughly rootbound in October. They are extra heavy this season and will not only produce flowers from the shoots but also from the dormant buds at the base. They cannot be better and will satisfy the most critical.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

The Market.

Business last week was good, considering the time of the year. With cooler weather coming on, trade has brightened up. The calls for corsages and flowers for dances and fall festivals come as harbingers of good business. Halloween decorations greatly aided the sales. Chrysanthemums are scarce as yet and the stores are practically void of these every night. Carnations are improving wonderfully. Roses, too, in all grades and varieties, are in good supply.

Business, taken as a whole, is better than at this same period a year ago.

First Fall Show.

With but a few days intervening until Toledo's first flower show, the arrangements are nearing completion, and both wholesale and retail florists are sanguine as to the effective staging and skillful management of the exhibits. The Art Museum is already handsomely trimmed with wild smilax, and the tables and platforms for individual exhibits are completed.

Extensive advertising throughout the city, and folders that are being sent out in all parcels, have given the show extensive publicity. The committees in charge of displays, publicity, entertainment and social matters have been doing their utmost to make this first annual show for the public a grand success.

The Toledo Florists' Club wishes to extend to all members of the trade a cordial invitation to be present on one of the three days, November 7, 8 and 9.

Various Notes.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman was exceedingly busy last week with funeral work.

William Feniger added a new delivery car to his equipment last week.

Julius Blauman, who recently purchased the greenhouses of the late John F. Gratopp, is devoting his time to growing carnations and has some fine flowers.

The Lindley Floral Co., a newly organized firm, on St. Clair street, reports business excellent. A great advantage for this enterprising young firm is the fact that they are right in the theater row, and the handsomely trimmed windows at all times are a great advertisement for them.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

With almost ideal weather, trade is increasing rapidly and everyone is busy. Parties and dances are creating a demand for bouquets and decorations, and weddings are numerous. Funeral work also has been heavy, a good part of it coming from agents in near-by towns.

Stock is good and generally there is plenty of it. So far none has been thrown away and at times there is a scarcity. The chrysanthemum season is really on and the quality of the stock never was better. There is a large cut of short and medium-stemmed roses, which are practically all used by the local trade. Carnations are getting better as the weather becomes cooler. Though the stems are rather short, the blooms are fairly good and the cut is increasing each day.

Various Notes.

C. W. Crouch is cutting some of the finest chrysanthemums ever grown in Knoxville, and although the crop is the largest he ever had, they sell out every day and sometimes have to be cut a little green to fill orders. A light may be seen in his store almost any night, which is good evidence that he is busy.

Mrs. W. R. Ryno is exceedingly busy with wedding work; before she gets one job completed there is another waiting for her. At times she finds it is a hard matter to obtain enough valley for her bouquets. She makes a specialty of growing maidenhair ferns, which she uses to good advantage in wedding work.

With three stores in operation, A. H. Dailey is doing a fine business. His new store, recently opened on North Gay street, is proving a success.

Chas. L. Baum is having the best fall season in the history of his business. Both retail and wholesale trade are as good as the supply of stock will permit. He had one of the most attractive Halloween windows in the city, in which he displayed some of the latest Japanese novelties in ferns.

A. J. McNutt, commonly referred to as the "Big Florist in the Market House," is handling a heavy trade and is having a goodly cut of everything in season. R. E. M.

Huntsville, Ala.—John Scott has returned to the city after an absence of several weeks.

The Market.

Business last week was better than that of any previous week since the beginning of the autumn season. The social activities, weddings and funerals have resulted in so many orders that business for October was better than that of October of 1913 and 1914. The market is considered better than that of last spring.

Stock of all kinds is in fine condition. Chrysanthemums are taking the lead for all social functions and for funeral sprays. Wells' Late Pink, Chrysolora, Major Bonnaffon, Robinson and October Frost are the best varieties. Among the roses Shawyer is showing up unusually well and is a great favorite. Russell is a good seller and Radiance, Sunburst and Milady have shown great improvement during the last two weeks. Carnations are not so plentiful, but their quality is steadily improving. There are fine valley and cattleyas to be had. American Beauties are plentiful.

Various Notes.

A. J. Lanternier & Sons are cutting fine yellow mums. Their chrysanthemum plants are good sellers. This concern's special sale on Whitmani and Boston ferns last week was unusually successful.

The Bradley Flower Shop reports a good sale on bulbs. Mrs. Bradley furnished about fifty corsages for the banquet of the Retail Merchants' Association last week.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey had an order for several hundred chrysanthemums for a football game at Ann Arbor, Mich. They also furnished 5,000 roses and carnations for the opening day of a new school. The Vesey greenhouses are cutting large quantities of Shawyer and Russell roses; also valley and splendid Cattleya labiata.

Larry Holland, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor last week.

The chrysanthemums at the Flick Floral Co. greenhouses are making a fine showing. Chrysolora, Wells' Late Pink and Robinson are the best varieties. Aaron Shive, superintendent of the greenhouses, reports a fine cut of Shawyer and Sunburst roses. Lady Hillingdon, Ward and the Killarneys are showing up well. The carnation stock is in an excellent condition. Decorations for thirty tables, consisting of Chinese bowls filled with Shawyer and Russell roses, and unique nosegays for 120 guests recently were executed by Miss Flick. Miss Flick leaves November 6 to attend the Toledo and Cleveland flower shows. R. F.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

SMOKE ANNOYS THE NEIGHBORS.

Is there a smoke consumer in existence which has given entire satisfaction? I have a 90-horsepower, horizontal steam boiler, in which I burn soft coal slack. My neighbors are complaining about the smoke and soot. What can I do to prevent it?

G. F.—Colo.

I do not know of any smoke consumer that can be recommended for a small range. Smoke is unconsumed particles of carbon, and the way to prevent it is to secure more perfect combustion. The use of rather high and large chimneys, so as to provide a better draft, is helpful. Care in firing also has much to do with the amount of smoke. If the coal is spread evenly in a thin layer over a bed of live coals, the amount of smoke will be greatly reduced.

A BOOM IN THE COAL TRADE.

The degree of activity or inactivity in the coal trade is undoubtedly one of the most reliable symptoms of the condition of the entire business world. There are few industries that can be carried on without the use of fuel. In a general way, though not in each separate instance, the consumption of coal must increase or decrease in proportion to the enlargement or shrinkage of the volume of trade in other commodities. Business is a huge monster that eats coal, carloads and trainloads of coal, and never desists from the feeding process except when somnolent.

As such a symptom or sign of the times, the coal trade is especially distinct in its manifestations this week. Students of the coal market state that the trade has entered upon such a boom as it has not previously experienced in the last four years. Not only is the existence of the trade revival spoken of as an unquestioned fact, but the cause of the revival is also declared to be clearly apparent. Nearly all authorities agree in saying that the present

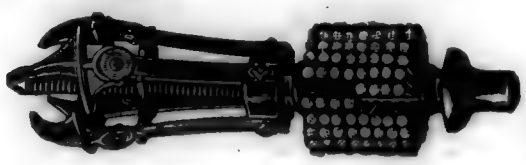
St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 21, 1915



Replying to your letter of the 16th, wish to state that we have completed the installing of our Heating System, and have given same a thorough trial and we are very well pleased with the results. Quite a number of Florists of our city have visited our Greenhouses, and are very much impressed with our Heating Plant.

Thanking you very much for the promptness that you have given our order, and rest assured should we need anything in the heating line in the future, that we certainly shall not forget "Kroeschell Bros.," we are,

By simply turning the rod or handle, the ends contract until it will readily pass into the flue. Then by turning the handle in an opposite direction the cleaner is gradually expanded until it fits the tube perfectly; the brush following leaves the tube absolutely clean.

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

Put Your Heating Problems Up to Us.
We've Been at it for 44 Years.

prosperity in the coal business is a direct result of the prosperity in other lines of business. If the country is embarking on a period of great business activity, as it seems to be, there is not the least possibility of the coal man failing to get his share of the profits. He cannot escape from the operation of cause and effect, and in this case he is not trying to escape.

Florists may be able to derive some benefit from the fact that smokeless coal appears to be the exception that is necessary to prove the rule. The florists' favorite kind of fuel is about the only kind that is not yet included in the sweep of the newly enlarged demand. For the time, perhaps only a short time, this sort of coal seems to be overlooked and neglected and is not even firmly maintaining circular prices. Says the Black Diamond: "The spot demand for smokeless coal is light. The operators have made a few sales occasionally of mine-run in Chicago at $1.40, but most of the business is in so-called smokeless coal, which is off-grade, at a lower price. Some of this off-grade coal moves at $1.20 and prices range from there up to circular. Lump and egg are a trifle easy because of the weather, prices ranging from $2 up to an occasional car sold at circular of $2.25."

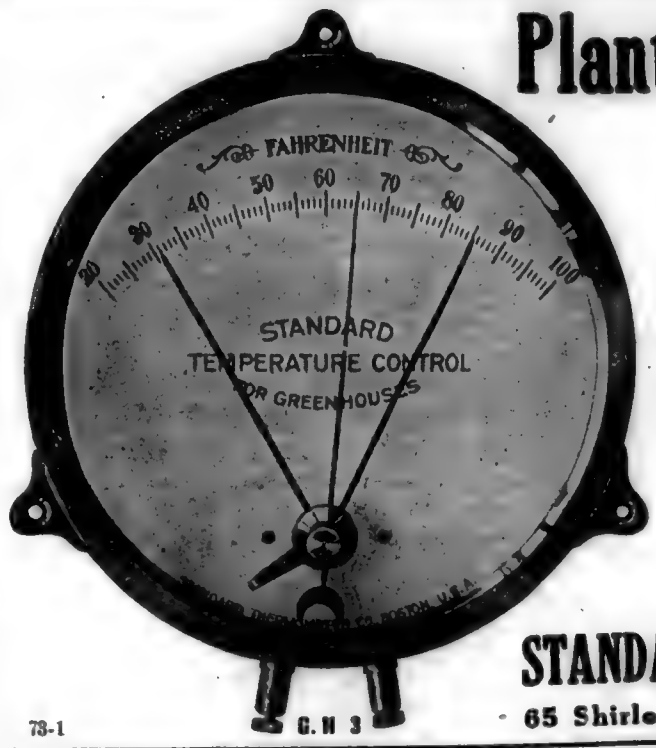
HOUSES ON DIFFERENT LEVELS.

I am enclosing a rough sketch, which will enable you, I hope, to give me some advice on the piping of my two houses for hot water. The houses, as you see, are of the same size, 12x36, eight feet high to the ridge and four and one-half feet high to the eaves. They are connected and stand end to end, but one of them is on the surface of the ground, while the other is three feet below the ground level. The floor of the boiler pit, which is at the outer end of the lower greenhouse, is only two feet below the floor of that house and cannot be sunk any deeper. The houses have glass ends and sides, down to ten inches above the benches. The side door and the partition between the houses are glass.

I wish to heat the lower house to a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees, and the upper house to a temperature of 45 to 55 degrees. I should like to use only 2-inch pipe if possible, as I have several thousand feet of that size on hand. I shall purchase a gas-burning boiler. There is pressure in the water mains, but I prefer to use an expansion tank if possible. The outside temperature seldom drops below zero in this climate. R. E. E.—Okla.

The two facts, that the houses are on different levels and that there is a door in the side wall of one house, complicate matters somewhat.

Run three 2-inch flow pipes from the boiler to the farther end of the upper house. Place one near each plate and the other about eighteen inches below the ridge, giving them a slight rise. At the farther end of the house connect each flow pipe with two 2-inch returns, to be carried under the benches. In case there are only two benches, place the returns from the middle flow pipe on the walls, carrying one return on each wall back to the boiler. The flow on the east side can be carried over the door, while the returns can be dropped so low that they will be below the door.



The fact that one of the houses is lower than the top of the boiler makes a difference as to the location of the expansion tank. It should be attached to the highest part of the flow pipe and all of the other flow pipes should be connected with it.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

The weather last week was unusually warm and the dahlias and cosmos that were not killed by the early frosts were flourishing. This means a drop in sales, for many people will not buy flowers when they can have them in their own gardens. However, weather sufficiently cold to kill the outdoor stock cannot be long delayed. Chrysanthemums are now arriving in much larger quantities and in more varieties. The larger blooms are more abundant. With the larger quantity of mums there has been a reduction in price, though good flowers still bring fair prices. Carnations also are more abundant and the prices for them are slightly lower than those of two weeks ago. The quality of carnations is better than that of the earlier blooms. Roses are of good quality and not overabundant. Violets are arriving in small lots. Cosmos is abundant and in good demand for bouquets. There are a few dahlias to be had. Orchids are fairly abundant and bring good prices. Gardenias have appeared.

Large quantities of bulbs are being sold in flower stores. Some of the florists say that business is excellent, others that it is good but still too quiet to please them.

Various Notes.

O. Kemp reports better business at his store. Mr. Kemp's store is located near a Catholic cemetery and, therefore, had a large sale of flowers November 1, which was observed by Catholics and Episcopalians as All Saints' day.

Kimmerle & Minder find business brisk and expect a banner season. They had a large quantity of funeral and wedding work during the last few weeks.

The Ivy Flower Shop reports sales as being numerous during the last two weeks. A nearby church recently observed Rose Sunday, everyone attending the service being expected to wear a rose. A large number of roses were sold.

Davis & Davis, who recently started in business as growers and wholesale florists, at Central avenue and Grove street, East Orange, have made an excellent start, business developing more quickly than was expected.

W. Fiers has moved from 4 North Nineteenth street to 3 Greenwood avenue, East Orange.

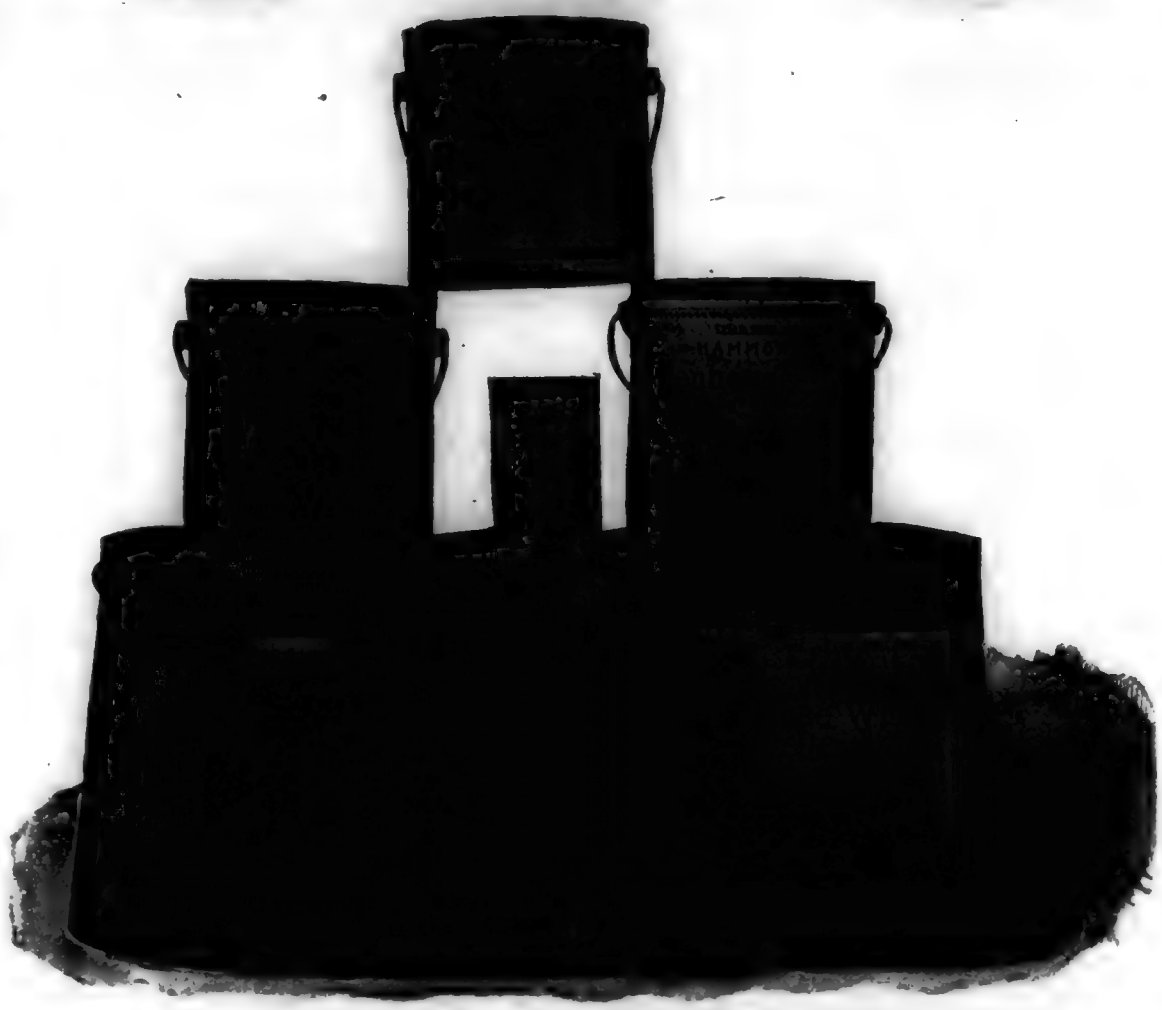
May's Flower Shop, 285 South Orange avenue, enjoyed a big October, with much funeral and wedding work.

Mrs. C. M. Hutchinson, of Hillside, has completed the erection of two greenhouses, 28x96 feet. The workshed has been lengthened twelve feet and two sections have been added to the boiler.

The Union Square Floral Shop has moved from 841 Elizabeth avenue, Elizabeth, to 807 Elizabeth avenue, where the facilities are much greater. Since moving, business has greatly increased, showing that the new store is a better stand, though not far from the old one. The proprietors are W. R. Carter and G. B. Fink.

Charles Witheridge reports business better but still capable of much improvement.

The J. J. Wilson Seed Co. reports that the bulb business is booming. Mr. Wilson states that the demand for bulbs seems to be much greater than last year, while the available supply certainly is smaller. Mr. Wilson, who recently returned from a business trip, believes that the improvement in business is permanent and not merely a spurt.



J. H. Harvey, of 406 Broad street, has noticed an increase in his counter sales during the last two weeks. R. B. M.

The Market.

The supply of stock is heavy and in excess of actual needs. As a result, prices have dropped. The shipping business, however, is good. Roses are in heavy supply and are not selling as well as they did before the heavy consignments of chrysanthemums arrived. Chrysanthemums of all kinds and sizes may be had, including pompons. Carnations, though of better quality than heretofore, are not selling as well as a fortnight ago. Easter lilies are plentiful. Dahlias and cosmos still may be had. The first sweet peas made their appearance last week. Other offerings include lily of the valley, orchids and single violets. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The November meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held at the J. A. Peterson & Sons place, November 8, at 4 p. m. Mr. Peterson expects to show pictures of his trip to California last summer.

The chrysanthemum shows of the E. G. Hill Floral Co., at the Lyric theater and at the store last week, were attended by many.

William Taylor sent the first sweet peas of the season to L. H. Kyrk.

C. E. Critchell reports that the chrysanthemums at the Hill range at Richmond, Ind., which he visited October 31, are the finest he has ever seen.

Alex. Ostendarp, of the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange, reports that the October business for his concern was the largest they have ever had for that month.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Ohmer and their son, James Ohmer, expect to leave for their home at West Palm Beach, Fla., the last of this week.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was a trade visitor last week. C. H. H.

NEWPORT, R. I.

At the meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society, October 26, John W. Urquhart, gardener for Governor R. Livingston Beeckman, exhibited a new chrysanthemum, which he has named the Mrs. Beeckman. The society gave Mr. Urquhart a first-class certificate.

The Market.

The business done last week was by far the best that has been experienced here this season and, generally speaking, everybody cleaned up well. While there does not appear to be so large a supply as usual at this season, there is a sufficiency for the demand. There has been an unusual demand for autumn foliage for window decorations and those florists who were forehanded have added a tidy sum to their receipts.

Chrysanthemums are the strength of the market, both as to demand and supply, with prices about the same as this time last year. Roses are coming in well and carnations are showing constant improvement. The vanguard of violets have arrived but are making no perceptible impression, nor will they while the mums last.

Various Notes.

Alexander H. Johnson, of George Johnson & Son, was one of the principal speakers at the sixty-first anniversary banquet of the Slocum Light Guards last week.

John Marshall has finished planting one of his houses at Centerdale with Spencer sweet peas.

The Providence Horticultural Co. is now located at 107 Westminster street, and reports a rush of business on forestry work.

The Flower Growers' Depot, 317 Westminster street, celebrated its first anniversary last week by offering American Beauties, long stems, at 19 cents each.

Peter S. Byrnes, of Wickford, is one of the incorporators of the North Kingstown Republican Club, which was granted a charter last week.

John W. Seamans, proprietor of the Quality Flower Shop, at 144 Main street, Pawtucket, has been missing since October 22 and his family is greatly alarmed as to his whereabouts, the cause for his absence being shrouded in mystery. W. H. M.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society was held October 27, President J. Robinson presiding.

John Sorosick, of the show committee, reported that the recent dahlia show was a success. Luigi Amiello, Gerald Martin and Alexander Michie were elected to active membership and A. Kirkwood to associate membership.

The meeting room was a veritable flower shop. The president appointed Messrs. Bell, Robertson and Gibson to act as judges of the exhibits. They made the following awards:

Three chrysanthemums of one variety—Joseph Robinson, society's prize.
Dahlias—Joseph Robinson, cultural certificate.
Ophelia roses—William Ford, honorable mention.
Six vases of single chrysanthemums—James Pathis, certificate of merit.
Vase of single chrysanthemums—Frank Kyle, honorable mention.
Vase of cosmos—J. Sorosick, thanks of society.
Vase of single dahlias—J. Sorosick, thanks of society.
Vase of phloxes—J. Sorosick, honorable mention.
Celery—Louis Donello, society's prize.

Exhibits for the next meeting will consist of fifty violets, twelve roses and three heads of lettuce.

A. R. Kennedy, Sec'y.

Magic Manures

THE ONLY GUARANTEED PLANT FOODS FOR USE UNDER GLASS

Said a well-known grower of Roses, Carnations, "Mums," Sweet Peas, Violets and a general line of Potted Plants:

"After you have once used MAGIC MANURES and applied them according to 'Magic Feeding Instructions,' nothing will take their place in producing MORE and BETTER FLOWERS."

Before he began using MAGIC MANURES, he had always used ordinary fertilizers in the ordinary way that did not give him satisfactory results, and cost a lot more.

Your experience will be like his. We guarantee that.

A Greenhouse on Broadway Built on the Roof

Another Jacobs Greenhouse was completed for C. C. Trepel, at 89th Street and Broadway, New York. This was an undertaking few greenhouse builders would have attempted. Our plans were accepted by all Departments of the City of New York, and the finished job was approved by them.

Besides building a very modern and up-to-date Greenhouse, we also installed an electric elevator which runs from the store to the roof, making it easily accessible for customers.

No matter how difficult your greenhouse problems are, we have engineering brains to solve them—besides, we can save money for you.

The Market.

Continued fair weather, with no frost, has brought everything forward rapidly, and as a result there is an abundance of all kinds of flowers again this week. Even the better grades of Beauty roses are fairly plentiful. Of course there are too many chrysanthemums; there always are too many at this time of year, but the oversupply is not so great as it was a year ago. Besides, there is a good demand, with out-of-town business growing.

The first azaleas of the season reached this city last week. It is not yet certain that all that have been ordered will arrive, but the likelihood is that they will.

Considerable trouble has developed with the foreign bulbs, as many of them have proved to be badly diseased, especially the French bulbs and the more expensive varieties of narcissi. Many bulbs, though sound on the outside, when cut have streaks of decayed material that are infested with a small mite. Others have a dry rot that affects the base of the bulb. I have never seen so many bad bulbs in any previous season. Hyacinths are diseased also, but, so far as I have seen, the tulips are not affected. One lot of 17,000 Grand Soleil d'Or narcissi proved to be all but worthless. I cut a lot of the best that could be sorted from them and found fifty per cent contained decayed streaks.

Some of the best dahlias of the season were seen here last week. They were Golden Gates and grew in a protected location. It may not be out of place to remark that those who have not dug their dahlias and cannas that were cut by the early frost are taking long chances on losing many of their bulbs. The tops have already thrown new growth a foot long and the tubers will soon be so soft that it will be difficult to keep them. Should there be another week of warm weather, however, there will be some compensation, as many of the shoots will be in bloom by that time.

There seems to be a great deal of building going on in the residence districts of the city this fall, and there will be much landscape planting which, but for the unseasonable weather, would have to wait till another year.

Various Notes.

McIntyre Bros. are offering the best line of evergreens in pots that I have ever seen offered in the city. They are of great decorative value to their store, too.

There were several good weddings in the city last week, and there was another bride's bouquet of orchids and valley, made by the Joy Floral Co., that merited special mention. If the two similar bouquets I saw at their place this fall are any indication, the city is using more expensive decorations this season than heretofore. Where one or two such decorations are sold, more are sure to be demanded.

The Hillcrest School Farm is busy this week planting tulips and narcissi for the next season's bulbs. Hyacinths are being planted again in a small way, as the results from the experiments with these bulbs thus far have been good.

Mr. Anderson, of the Lebanon Floral Co., Lebanon, Tenn., was in the city this week. He reports business good.

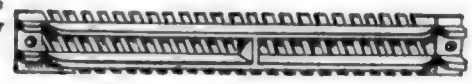
THERE ARE CERTAIN exclusive features (protected by patents) that for over twenty years have proved this to be the best gutter on the market.



Garland Gutter is not only practical in point of service rendered, but it has one feature which makes a wonderful saving of material and labor in greenhouse construction. If Garland Gutter is still giving satisfaction on the first job in which it was used—if one of the largest growers in the world has seven miles of it in use—then it will certainly pay you to use it in your greenhouses the next time you build; or, when you repair your present plant, be sure and specify GARLAND GUTTER.

The Market.

Business was good last week and all stock cleaned up at a good price. Chrysanthemums have the full swing of the market. Carnations are more plentiful and find a ready sale. Roses continue to do well and are sold out daily. Pompons are in good demand. There is a weak call for pink chrysanthemums, but yellow and white are good sellers.

Various Notes.

W. E. Day, who has been ill, is slowly recovering and hopes to be back at his post soon. Clinton Brown, who is in charge of the store, has been on the jump with orders for weddings. Last week the store had a good window featuring mums.

Chester Harris has an attractive window of yellow and white mums, which are selling briskly.

The Baker Floral Co. is cutting a batch of extra large William Turner and Roman Gold chrysanthemums. This company was the first to have pompon mums on the market. The carnations leave nothing to be desired and there is a good crop now on. Everyone is pleased with Philadelphia, Champion and Matchless carnations.

The Syracuse Florists' Club has postponed the date of the chrysanthemum show to November 11 to 13. The next meeting of the club will be held at the Werner Bultmann store, November 8. All members should try to attend, as plans for the chrysanthemum show will be up for discussion.

At the L. Mulhauser greenhouses all stock looks promising. Mr. Mulhauser is making a specialty of rooted cuttings of geraniums and vincas, which he sells to the wholesale trade. He expects to build another house next spring.

Henry Morris has had a fine display of plants in his store and a fresh lot of roses could be seen in the icebox.

Bellamy Bros. are cutting some good Chrysolora and Pacific Supreme mums. A fine lot of geranium cuttings are ready for the pots. H. F. B.

Bonham, Tex.—At the City Greenhouses, Baxter Setzler, manager, says business is much better than last year and it is thought the best demand in the history of the florists' trade in Texas is in early prospect.

Painesville, O.—A typical Holland scene, with an old-time windmill and tower and a stream of water, was a feature window display at the Carl Hagenburger Co. store some time ago. J. A. Paquette, manager, was the artist.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

William H. Englehardt, of the Idlewild Greenhouses, Memphis, Tenn., was greatly encouraged by the success attending the twentieth anniversary of the business. T. G. Owen sent in a fine lot of stock from his range at Columbus, Miss., for the occasion, and a free distribution of the flowers gave the company a big send-off for the next lap of its career.

C. H. Hume, of the Memphis Floral Co., remarked as he hung up the telephone receiver, that he could hardly appreciate the humor of the situation when a patron desired to sell instead of buy flowers, and hoped that the general humidity would soon be followed by a visit from Jack Frost, which would stimulate the demand for the fine roses and chrysanthemums now being cut.

J. J. Beneke, of St. Louis, Mo., will soon celebrate the fortieth anniversary of his business, at the same location. One can hardly realize this, for he must have begun unusually early in life. He says he intends to retire soon—pining for the orange groves of California. Every order he receives for a bride's wreath of orange blossoms makes him more than ever determined to abandon the familiar odor of store flowers for the fragrance of the orange and lemon flourishing outdoors.

J. W. Vestal & Son, of Little Rock, Ark., are cutting good chrysanthemums and roses. The shipping trade is increasing annually. W. M.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

The Kay-Dimond Co., of Youngstown, O., has leased a storeroom, at 33 North Phelps street, for the Christmas business. This space will be used in addition to the store.

H. H. Cade, of Youngstown, reports an increase in business for the last few months.

Fischer & Burkland, of Youngstown, are cutting fine mums and roses.

Adgate & Son, of Warren, O., are growing Ophelia with splendid success. They have been busy with funeral work.

The North Hill Greenhouses, of Akron, O., are proudly exhibiting a carnation plant containing sixty-seven blooms.

H. Heepe's Sons, of Akron, are using a novel picture slide in the leading theaters, showing the interior of their store, and a charming young lady in the act of smelling a bunch of violets.

J. Salmon, of Akron, had several large funeral orders last week, which used a great many Beauties and orchids. He has been busy with table decorations.

McFarlands, Florists, of Akron, are cutting some fine mums and carnations.

W. Hutchings, of the Akron Flower Shop, reports business as being good, considering the length of time the company has been in the business.

V. E. Rice, of Oberlin, O., had a large out-of-town wedding decoration last week.

N. A. Cook, of Oberlin, has a house of mums, to which he gives his special attention. They are good, clean, healthy-looking blooms.

F. C. Sutliff, of Wellington, O., reports business as being exceedingly brisk. W. T. U.

THE PRICE IS RIGHT

SEDALIA, MO.

Business has been excellent and seems to show that good flowers can be relied on to sell at satisfactory prices. The chrysanthemums are exceptionally good this year and the demand for them is heavy. Unless the weather becomes cooler there will be few mums for Thanksgiving. Carnations and roses have improved rapidly in quality of late.

L. H. Archias and wife recently made a trip to Dallas and other Texas cities.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

William H. Englehardt, of the Idlewild Greenhouses, Memphis, Tenn., was greatly encouraged by the success attending the twentieth anniversary of the business. T. G. Owen sent in a fine lot of stock from his range at Columbus, Miss., for the occasion, and a free distribution of the flowers gave the company a big send-off for the next lap of its career.

C. H. Hume, of the Memphis Floral Co., remarked as he hung up the telephone receiver, that he could hardly appreciate the humor of the situation when a patron desired to sell instead of buy flowers, and hoped that the general humidity would soon be followed by a visit from Jack Frost, which would stimulate the demand for the fine roses and chrysanthemums now being cut.

J. J. Beneke, of St. Louis, Mo., will soon celebrate the fortieth anniversary of his business, at the same location. One can hardly realize this, for he must have begun unusually early in life. He says he intends to retire soon—pining for the orange groves of California. Every order he receives for a bride's wreath of orange blossoms makes him more than ever determined to abandon the familiar odor of store flowers for the fragrance of the orange and lemon flourishing outdoors.

J. W. Vestal & Son, of Little Rock, Ark., are cutting good chrysanthemums and roses. The shipping trade is increasing annually. W. M.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

The Kay-Dimond Co., of Youngstown, O., has leased a storeroom, at 33 North Phelps street, for the Christmas business. This space will be used in addition to the store.

H. H. Cade, of Youngstown, reports an increase in business for the last few months.

Fischer & Burkland, of Youngstown, are cutting fine mums and roses.

Adgate & Son, of Warren, O., are growing Ophelia with splendid success. They have been busy with funeral work.

The North Hill Greenhouses, of Akron, O., are proudly exhibiting a carnation plant containing sixty-seven blooms.

H. Heepe's Sons, of Akron, are using a novel picture slide in the leading theaters, showing the interior of their store, and a charming young lady in the act of smelling a bunch of violets.

J. Salmon, of Akron, had several large funeral orders last week, which used a great many Beauties and orchids. He has been busy with table decorations.

McFarlands, Florists, of Akron, are cutting some fine mums and carnations.

W. Hutchings, of the Akron Flower Shop, reports business as being good, considering the length of time the company has been in the business.

V. E. Rice, of Oberlin, O., had a large out-of-town wedding decoration last week.

N. A. Cook, of Oberlin, has a house of mums, to which he gives his special attention. They are good, clean, healthy-looking blooms.

F. C. Sutliff, of Wellington, O., reports business as being exceedingly brisk. W. T. U.

THE PRICE IS RIGHT

SEDALIA, MO.

Business has been excellent and seems to show that good flowers can be relied on to sell at satisfactory prices. The chrysanthemums are exceptionally good this year and the demand for them is heavy. Unless the weather becomes cooler there will be few mums for Thanksgiving. Carnations and roses have improved rapidly in quality of late.

L. H. Archias and wife recently made a trip to Dallas and other Texas cities.

The State Fair Floral Co. has moved into its new store, where it has a splendid show window, of which it is taking full advantage. J. H.

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS—PAGES TWO AND THREE

The side posts of Mr. Kropp's houses are all flat bars of guaranteed wrought iron, which will greatly outlast steel. Notice the way the pipe cross-tie is in turn tied to an intermediate purlin.

Two Pipe Framers at Columbus, Ohio

For H. W. Kropp we built three Ridge and Furrow houses 28 by 190 feet and one 28 by 109 feet.

Mr. Kropp had some old-time, narrow, wooden houses, which in their day had been money-makers for his fathers. But they would not produce the kind of stock demanded today.

It was a case of build modern houses, or go out of the business. Of course, growers don't go out of business. They keep getting fats more and more business. It's the way the growers have of growing.

Hill & Dupree carry on their business under the name of the Indianola Floral Company. Their flower shop, in the heart of Columbus, is as attractive as it is prosperous looking.

In their two houses, 28 by 190 feet and 12 by 81 feet, they grow a lot of their potted stock, carnations and ferns.

More and more, the shop owners are also owning their greenhouses. It means just that much more profit for the shop owner.

One of the supply houses of the Indianola Floral Company. You get just a peek at the gable of the other house.

"TANK GRADE" CYPRESS

No other lumber manufactured is subjected to such close inspection and is graded so carefully as Cypress. It is the only variety of wood in which there is such a class as "TANK GRADE." Other woods have Firsts and Seconds, but "TANK GRADE" Cypress represents a choice, handpicked, selected quality —the very cream of Firsts.

For greenhouse construction, those who are accounted reliable among the contractors use none other than "TANK GRADE." Of course they put in "pecky" for standards and benches, but when it comes to sash-bars, sash, hot beds, cold frames, tanks, tubs, plant boxes, etc., it is cypress, "TANK GRADE," from ridge-pole to foundation.

And you will do well to follow the lead and advice of the experienced contractor.

A BOOK, PLEASE

Vol. 3, CYPRESS Pocket Library, tells a lot about greenhouse construction; Vols. 4 and 20 are for the farmer. They contain plans for all out-buildings, and they are absolutely free. There are 41 of these books, and you would better help yourself to them. Get the Carpentry Book, Vol. 36, telling you how to make easy a dozen hard jobs of carpentry; Vol. 37 is the big Silo Book. Both are full of plans for buildings and are handsomely illustrated.

CAPACITY

Are you running to full capacity? Profit is realized only when a full volume of business is being done. Do you supply the demand or is it met with the aid of flowers purchased from other sources? Ask yourself the above questions and then decide if you are reaping the profit that rightfully belongs to you.

THE TIME OF BIG PROFIT IS ALMOST HERE

Winter is the time when greenhouse profit is the highest and the man who is prepared to meet the full demand is the man who can write success after his name. There are only a few remaining weeks before cold weather, but time enough to build that additional house if you act now. Write us your ideas and we will be prompt in sending our estimate and prompt in turning out the material.

Have you ever built a DIETSCH house? It is not too late to begin now.

CARNATIONS.

CARNATIONS.
We still have some very nice plants of carnations left. Nothing will pay you better to fill in after your mums, than to plant some of these carnations. Put them close together, as the season is late and one flower from a plant will more than pay for the plant, and a little later you will have a good crop. When you have a rush lot of funeral work you will find them pretty good property to have.

The above varieties we consider the most promising of those to be sent out this year, and we urge our customers to try out those that appeal to them. CARNATION FIELD PLANTS.
ABOUT 15,000 LEFT.

Healthy, thrifty stock, grown on clay loam soil. My plants are short and stocky, and in condition to take hold quickly. Frosts are very late in this locality and stock will be protected when in danger of heavy frost. Prices have been reduced to close out. Those wishing to send cash with order may deduct 5% more from the list price. If you will have an empty "mum" bench soon, better fill it up with carnations. One good bloom will pay for the plant.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of giant show and fancy pansies, the flowers of largest size and most perfect form. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for over 40 years, and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. It also contains every variety introduced by foreign growers to date. Some of the reports: "The pansy plants all look like good, healthy, stocky plants, and we feel will come up to all expectations." Henry J. Hass & Son, Newport, R. I. "I would like to get 4000 or 5000 of your pansy plants. I saw a house of pansies from your stock last winter and they were the finest I ever saw." Harry W. Stewart, Rhinebeck, N. Y. "Your pansy plants last year were the best we ever had and blooms were satisfactory in size and color." L. Muller, New Orleans, La. "I inclose $10.00 for pansy plants. This is the 6th year I have used your plants and each year have found them satisfactory in size of flowers, colors and other respects." M. J. McCabe, Washington, D. C. An immense stock of fine field-grown plants from seed sown in August in sandy soil, thinly, broadcast, so that the plants grow short and stocky, with extra good roots. Over 75 varieties mixed, the reds, bronzes and best fancy sorts in large proportion, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5000, $14.00; 10,000, $27.00. Delivery by express in good condition guaranteed. Cash.

"JUST AROUND THE CORNER FROM THE WHOLESALE FLOWER MARKET"

The Working Principle of the Metropolitan Patented Eave
Is A B C Language

If you light a match and hold it, the heat won't bother you until the fire touches your fingers. Now take a nail, hold it at one end and apply a lit match at the other—in a moment you will have to drop it because the heat has been conducted to your fingers.

That's the working principle of the Metropolitan Patented Eave, and that's why it is self-ice-clearing.

More than 90% of the Metropolitan Patented Eave is in constant contact with the inside heat, and being of one continuous piece of cast iron, the heat penetrates right through to the outside. That's why no snow or ice can accumulate on a Metropolitan Greenhouse. Heat cannot penetrate eaves that are made up of two or more sections.

The Metropolitan Eave is but one of the many improvements we have made in Greenhouse construction.

PUT YOUR GREENHOUSE PROBLEMS UP TO US.

We go anywhere in the U. S. to submit plans and prices.

The Working Principle of the Metropolitan Patented Eave
In A B C Language

If you light a match and hold it, the heat won't bother you until the fire touches your fingers. Now take a nail, hold it at one end and apply a lit match at the other—in a moment you will have to drop it because the heat has been conducted to your fingers.

That's the working principle of the Metropolitan Patented Eave, and that's why it is self-ice-clearing.

More than 90% of the Metropolitan Patented Eave is in constant contact with the inside heat, and being of one continuous piece of cast iron, the heat penetrates right through to the outside. That's why no snow or ice can accumulate on a Metropolitan Greenhouse. Heat cannot penetrate eaves that are made up of two or more sections.

The Metropolitan Eave is but one of the many improvements we have made in Greenhouse construction.

We Pay the Freight

THIRD ANNUAL OFFER

TO KEEP things going in our six factory buildings, we will pay the freight on all orders for greenhouses received up to January 20, 1916. December and January are two dull months in the greenhouse business, and we are making this unheard of offer so that every employee can be kept on the pay roll, and every machine going at full speed. Read the conditions below and get ready now to place your order for that new house. Here is your chance to save money. This opportunity will not come again for a year. It has been customary for some manufacturers to advertise winter prices on materials, but you had no way of telling whether there was any saving or not. Freight paid is your guarantee of our good faith. Don't wait—the time is short. If you have not received estimate—if our 384-page cloth bound book is not handy—get busy at once.

CONDITIONS

Freight will be paid on greenhouse construction material, boilers and heating systems only under the following conditions:

(1) Construction materials must be sufficient for a complete greenhouse, but glass, sheathing and bench material may be omitted. Materials can be ordered from any numbered estimate submitted by this Company.

(2) Order must be mailed on or before January 20, 1916. Post-office stamp to govern dates. Delivery will be made any time up to March 1, 1916.

(3) Freight will be allowed on all boilers.

(4) Freight will be allowed on heating outfits only when ordered from a numbered estimate.

(5) No freight allowed on orders for parts or supplies.

(6) This offer shall be subject to all conditions as printed on our estimate sheet and as per our terms as printed on page 247 of our general catalogue.

(7) Freight to be deducted from our bill by the customers.

(8) Full freight will be allowed in the following states and cities:

Illinois Indiana Iowa Michigan New York Pennsylvania Ohio Wisconsin Missouri

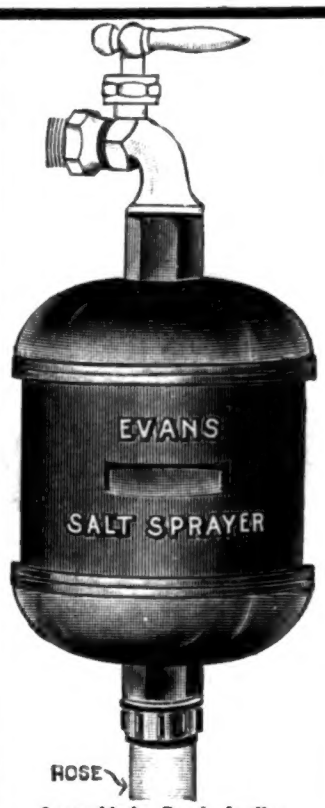
Omaha, Neb., Kansas City, Mo., St. Louis, Mo., Louisville, Ky., Minneapolis, Minn., St. Paul, Minn.

(9) Full freight will be allowed only on carloads in the following states (36,000 lbs. or over):

Connecticut Delaware District Columbia Kentucky Maine Maryland Massachusetts New Hampshire New Jersey Rhode Island Vermont Virginia West Virginia

(10) A freight allowance of 30 cents per 100 lbs. will be allowed in all states in section nine (9) on less than carload shipments.

(11) A freight allowance of 30 cents per 100 lbs. will be allowed on all shipments in all states not mentioned above.



384-page Catalogue, cloth bound, weighs 2 lbs., covers everything for the greenhouse. Send for it.
